Bogus 'Tens' Flooding East Called Work Of New Ring

Cause More Headaches Than Tenafly Notes, Agents Assert.

2 Arraigned Here For Passing Bills

HearingSet December 4; U. S. to Push Drive on Counterfeiters.

Fake $10 notes, almost perfectly executed, are flooding the Eastern seaboard, and may cause Secret Service men even more headaches than the $100 notes manufactured by the Tenafly (N. J.) counterfeiting ring just captured, according to indications here yesterday.

For passing the new notes, two New York colored men, giving the names of James Murtishaw and Thomas Blocker, were arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage. Both pleaded not guilty, but were held for hearing, December 4, on a charge of possession of counterfeit currency. Bond was set at $5,000 apiece.

The new fakes imitate $10 Federal Reserve notes of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City. Treasury experts declared they compare with the finest counterfeits ever turned out in the United States, and did not hide their concern. They suggested that a newly organized ring, possibly operating in or about Philadelphia and New York, might be doing the manufacturing.

Notes Easily Passable.

Bank tellers anywhere, they said, would be deceived. It is almost impossible to discover the new counterfeit by feel, and the back of the note is virtually a perfect reproduction. Only a variation in the shades that tint the portrait of Alexander Hamilton on the note's face gives away the fake.

The new development came just as Secret Service officials were affirming that the recently intensified drive against counterfeiters would be pressed on all State fronts.

Depression has stirred an increase in counterfeiting, statistics showed. Officials said they believed more counterfeit notes had been passed in Washington since January than in any other year, and the Treasury Department report of Secretary Morgenthau for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1934, is expected to show sharp increases in both arrests and face value of counterfeit notes seized.

The fiscal year ended June 30, 1933, set up a record for arrests of persons making and passing false money, with 2,569 persons captured, as compared to 1,583 in 1932, 978 in 1931 and 684 in 1930.

Notes Seized in 1933.

Pants Bandits Collect $190

Armed Robbers Order Lunchroom Customers to Doff Clothes.

Six customers and a clerk in "Herman's Lunch," at 447 New York avenue northwest, were held up, forced to take off coats and trousers, and were robbed of $190 by three armed colored men who fired two shots as they left. Kenneth McFarland, 30, of 1400 Fourteenth street northwest, the clerk, was wounded slightly in the arm by one of the shots.

The three men walked into the eating place at 9:30 p. m. and ordered beer. As McFarland brought the steins to the counter, all drew guns, announced "this is a holdup," and ordered the six customers and McFarland to the rear of the room.

"Take off your clothes," commanded one of the men. As fast as the victims complied, another holdup man went through the garments, while the third opened the cash register, obtaining about $50.

Raymond H. Worley, 34, of 1634 B street southeast, was robbed of a wallet containing $30. C. F. Young, 19, of Rock Creek road, lost his wallet and $8. J. A. Aliver, 34, of 522 Rhode Island avenue northwest, an employe of Leach Brake Service Co., 427 K street northeast, was robbed of the day's receipts for the company, amounting to about $100. No money was found in the clothes of Philip Little, 43, of 1919 G street southeast, and E. E. Wright, 49, of 3625 Sixteenth street northwest, was unmolested. The sum of 60 cents was taken from William Schmidt, 53, of 509 R street northwest.

Working fast, the three men went over the seven men in a few minutes. As the bandits backed out, one of them shouted, "Everybody keep quiet, or we'll shoot." Then the two shots were fired. One grazed McFarland's arm as he stood in the rear of the store and the other broke the glass in the front door as the robbers ran out, escaping down the street.

Mais, Reported Dying, Asks Aid at Hospital

Flees as Philadelphia Interne Insists He Notify Police.

ROBERT MAIS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 22 (U.P.). Robert Mais, gangster who shot his way to freedom from a Richmond, Va., jail September 29 while awaiting electrocution for a bank holdup murder, was reported dying here tonight from a bullet wound in his abdomen.

Police revealed that Mais applied at a Philadelphia hospital for treatment of a wound received when he shot his way out of jail. It was said Mais also applied to three physicians here for treatment.

The hospital interne refused to treat the bullet wound unless he notified police. Mais was hurried from the hospital accident ward by two men who accompanied him. The physicians agreed to treat Mais, but said the law compelled them to notify police. He left without being treated.

Both the hospital interne and the physicians said Mais undoubtedly was in agony and would die unless he received treatment early. Underworld characters said the desperado would prefer to die in his hideaway than give himself up to authorities and face the electric chair.

Police were said to be positive of their identification of the man as Mais because of the descriptions given by the hospital interne and physicians.

Citizens Seek Expert Study Of D.C. Crime

Committee Authorized to Query Professional Agencies.

Employment of expert investigators to track down causes and make recommendations for the betterment of the crime situation in Washington was recommended yesterday by the citizens' committee on crime, meeting in the office of the District Bar Association.

This policy was recommended in the report of a sub-committee. It was adopted by the entire committee and referred back to the subcommittee, which will determine what agencies exist capable of conducting such a study, and what the cost would be. This will be reported to the committee at its next meeting on Wednesday.

The sub-committee, which is headed by Mrs. Merritt O. Chance, suggested that the problem be discussed with such institutions as the Institute of Public Relations of Columbia University, the Public Administration Service of Chicago or the Harvard Law School Institute of Criminal Law.

Four-Point Program.

The complete program adopted consisted of the following four points:

That the committee proceed at once to consult the best available experts to determine the type of technical crime survey needed, and which are the best agencies to conduct such a survey.

That the committee plan the nature of the survey with the possible agencies and determine its cost.

That a budget be formulated to cover the cost of the survey and the cost of bringing its results before administrative authorities.

That a careful study be made of the findings of the survey for the formulation of a program to be placed before the public and administrative and legislative authorities.

The report and recommendations of subcommittee were accompanied by the following statement:

"Your subcommittee conceives of the crime problem in the District as a highly technical question calling for a great deal of detailed investigation, fact-finding of a tech-

Grasshopper Dies, But Lens Catches Its Rising Soul

New York, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The soul of a dying grasshopper has been photographed to the satisfaction of the Society for Psychical Research.

Dr. R. A. Watters, of Reno, Nev., assisted by medical men from Johns Hopkins University, took the picture in the course of some experiments.

"It was an accident," said Frederick Bligh Bond, of the Psychical Research Society. "The photograph showed an etheric body hovering over the body of the dying insect.

"The insect, when about to die, was placed in a tube filled with gas. The whole thing was photographed, and at the moment of death some sort of smaller body was seen to pass out of the actual body and remain suspended over it. It had much the form of the insect."

The "soul" apparently dissipated itself within a few seconds after the death of the grasshopper. Bond thought it was some sort of electrical manifestation.

The photographs have been turned over to Hereward Carrington, a member of the society. Similar tests will be conducted on a mouse and a frog, to see if they have souls that can be photographed.

Parole Clash May Effect New System

D. C. Heads Will Discuss Reorganization Saturday.

Reorganization of the District parole system is to be considered at a meeting of parole board members and the District Commissioners in the District Building tomorrow morning.

The conference was called by the Commissioners at the instance of Commissioner George E. Allen after a series of incidents which brought criticism on the parole board and seemed to open a wide chasm between board members and the Commissioners who named them.

Substitution of a paid board of parole, with a larger paid staff of qualified workers, for the present parole machinery of an unpaid board with a sta: consisting of a secretary, one field worker and a clerk at Lorton, Va., is to be considered. All of the workers are carried on penal institution pay rolls.

"I have considered the advisability of a paid parole board equipped with an adequate staff of paid workers," Commissioner Allen said. "There are many advantages in such a set-up. I do not wish to make any comment on the proposal at the present time. The Commissioners will, of course, consider this proposal along with any others which may be submitted. It might be well to recall that the parole board members have complained about the inadequate help they have had and, also, that they are serving the city to their very best ability without any pay. I believe the public should realize that fact. In saying that I am not committing myself nor my colleagues on the Board of Commissioners to any proposition."

Study Board's Authority.

The conference tomorrow, however, is expected to concern itself primarily with the functioning and the authority of the parole board under present conditions, and its relationship to the District Commissioners.

William W. Bride, former corporation counsel and chairman of the parole board, has been seriously ill at his home for several weeks. It is believed, however, that Mr. Bride feels there has been an unwise chasm opened between the Commissioners and the board.

There has been ill-feeling between some members of the board and the Commissioners for many weeks. During the course of consideration of the District estimates for the next fiscal year there was a

Alabama Fishermen Weather Gulf Storm

Gulfport, Miss., Nov. 22 (AP).—Fourteen Alabama fishermen in four smacks, feared lost in the Gulf Coast storm of the past two days, weathered the heavy seas and high tides. Word of their safety came late today from their home port, Bayou La Batre, Ala., while a Coast Guard cutter was on the way to Chandeleur Light to rescue them.

Hungarians Deny Aiding In Regicide

Maggar Spokesman Resents Charge Made by Yugoslavia.

League of Nations Asked to Decide Question Without Delay.

Geneva, Nov. 22 (AP).—A formal charge of Hungarian complicity in the Marseille murders which Yugoslavia lodged with the League of Nations today drew vigorous protest from Tibor Eckhardt, Hungarian delegate, who reached Geneva tonight.

"I protest against these felonies which I characterize as an act of international terrorism," he said.

"The revolting Yugoslav allegations surprise me. The object of the note is clear: It tries to turn opinion from the real causes of the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia and to ruin the moral integrity of Hungary. We desire the question to be treated immediately."

A strongly worded letter which M. Fotich, Yugoslav delegate to the League of Nations, sent to J. A. C. Avenol, league secretary general, asked the league council to investigate terrorist activities "troubl ng the peace of central Europe" which culminated in the assassination of the Slavs' King, Alexander, last month.

Czechoslovakja and Rumania, Yugoslavia's sister members in the potent Little Entente, sent similar letters to Avenol supporting the Yugoslav stand, while officials of Greece and Turkey, Yugoslavia's Balkan neighbors, expressed open sympathy.

Question to Be Argued.

The council was expected to argue the explosive question in January. Meanwhile, Hungarian delegates to the league began preparing their reply.

Yugoslav officials said that the Slav public demanded that the step be taken.

"We prefer to settle the matter through the league instead of sending an army to the Hungarian frontier," they said.

A memorandum detailing evidence against Hungary will be forwarded to the league, Fotich's letter stated, explaining that "investigation into the Marseille assassinations brought to light the fact that they were prepared on Hungarian soil by a band of international terrorists."

After recalling Slav emotion at the death of their king and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou of France, the communication made the direct charge of Hungarian compilicity in the slayings. It said:

Terrorist Elements Accused.

"Investigations after the assassinations show the criminal acts were organized and executed with the participation of terrorist elements in Hungary * * * and it was only with the complicity of certain Hun-

D. C. Man Off to Hunt 'Tragic Isle Empress'

Los Angeles, Nov. 22 (AP).—The strange disappearance of the "empress" of Charles Island concerned explorers here today on the eve of their departure to seek, among other things, a solution of the tragedy of the Galapagos Islands.

"Find the Baroness Eloise Bonsquet de Wagner and you will find the story that will meet your deepest zest for a tale of adventure," said W. Charles Swett, navigator-explorer acquaintance of the Viennese noblewoman, who vanished months ago from her primitive "empire" in the tropical isles.

Swett made it clear, however, he did not believe the baroness had any direct knowledge of the deaths of the two men whose bodies were found last Saturday on Marchena Rock, 160 miles from Charles Island.

One of the bodies has been tentatively identified as that of Alfred Rudolph Lorenz, of Paris, a companion of the baroness. The other is believed to be a sailor who occasionally visited the queer Eden of self-imposed exiles.

"She knows the story of Lorenz," said Swett.

The only clew to the baroness' whereabouts was a letter written

Crustaceans and death under suspicious circumstances make a grotesque partnership, but Dr. Waldo L. Schmitt, Washington scientist, is going to have to put up with the situation for the balance of the year. And probably longer.

Dr. Schmitt, who is curator of marine invertebrates of the Smithsonian Institution, will be aboard when the cruiser Velero III sails today for the scene of the Pacific Ocean's latest mystery—the discovery of two bodies on desolate Marchena Island in the Galapagos group.

In 1932 the 47-year-old Smithsonian authority accompanied Capt. G. Allan Hancock, skipper of the Velero III, on marine exploration, and again in 1933. Each time the Galapagos Islands, several hundred miles off the coast of Ecuador, were visited, but neither time was the expedition confronted with the sleuthish responsibilities which Dr. Schmitt must face now.

He returned from previous trips with rare crustaceans, including several hitherto undiscovered species of marine invertebrates. He brought from Hood Island two large land turtles and two flightless cormorants, all four of which are now

Ickes Urges Trade Unions To Slash Pay

Materials for Building Should Cost Less, He Contends.

Relief Pay Rate Set by Hopkins to Meet Local Figures.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

A plea for reduced hourly wage rates by the building trades unions in order to give impetus to a huge building program and thus assure their members full-time employment and a larger annual income, was made yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes in discussing plans for a large Federal housing program under PWA.

Mr. Ickes likewise asserted it would be desirable if arrangements could be made between the suppliers of material and the Government to lower the cost of building supplies. He indicated he would undertake to bring about reductions in the cost of building labor and material.

At the same time, Federal Emergency Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins abandoned minimum wage rates on relief works by ordering that henceforth the rate of pay shall be same as that prevailing in the community where the work is done. The minimum wage rate of 30 cents an hour for common labor on relief work had been sharply criticized in some communities because it was in excess of the prevailing rate on nonrelief projects.

Thus, on two fronts, a drive to lower wage rates emerged from New Deal ranks. Mr. Ickes took the view that building trade unionists would be better off if assured full-time employment at a smaller wage rate, thus earning more annually, than they would be at a higher hourly rate, but unemployed most of the time.

Follows Roosevelt Speech.

Mr. Ickes' proposal was in line with a suggestion made by President Roosevelt in a nation-wide broadcast in October in which he said that less emphasis should be placed on the rate of wage and more on providing a decent annual income for workers.

Discussing his plans for a gigantic low-cost housing program, Secretary Ickes justified such a Government venture even in direct competition with private enterprise on the ground that the PWA could erect such dwellings cheaper.

His attention was called to a statement of James A. Moffett, Federal housing administrator, pointing out that applications for the guarantee of $102,000,000 in mortgages on privately financed low-cost housing projects had been received. Mr. Moffett said the volume of these applications, if continued, might obviate the need for further PWA expenditures for such purposes.

Mr. Ickes declined to challenge the Moffett statement, asserting that was a matter of policy which President Roosevelt should decide. But he added "we all would be delighted to have private industry

Gloria's Mother Plans Fight in 'All Courts'

Charges Mrs. Whitney With Personal Animosity, Calls Her Home an "Unwholesome Influence" in Rearing of Daughter.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt declared tonight she would "appeal to every court in the United States and to the highest court" in order to win back the custody of her daughter, Gloria, 10-year-old heiress, from her sister-in-law, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

"This case may leave me penniless," she asserted. "Mrs. Whitney may try to have my allowance cut down to nothing, but if need be I will go out and work at anything I can find to get back my child.

"Mrs. Whitney is one of the richest women in the world, but I shall gladly spend all I have to hold my little girl safely in my arms again and to vindicate the name that Mrs. Alice G. Vanderbilt was so justly proud of and that Mrs. Whitney, by her false accusations, has besmirched."

With bitter words, the handsome young widow of Reginald C. Vanderbilt charged Mrs. Whitney had held a personal animosity toward her "for years."

Slim, pale and wearing a simple black dress, Mrs. Vanderbilt walked into the room with a limp and was helped to a chair by her sister, Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, jr., of Pittsburgh.

Mrs. Whitney, informed of Mrs. Vanderbilt's statement, declined to comment.

"I have nothing to say," Gloria's new "custodian" asserted. "My silence is entirely in little Gloria's behalf. I can only repeat I shall carry out the judge's decree in spirit as well as in letter."

The court's decision gave Mrs. Whitney custody of the child-heiress, ordered her reared in the Roman Catholic faith and permitted her to spend week-ends with her mother.

Private detectives are guarding the child at Mrs. Whitney's country estate at Old Westbury, on Long Island, it became known earlier in the day, because of the receipt of letters threatening harm to her.

That the custody order of Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew was "far more drastic" than the decree prepared by the Whitney counsel was disclosed by Herbert C. Smyth, chief attorney for Mrs. Whitney.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's statement "openly charged" that Mrs. Whitney "has been behind this whole movement

Ickes Ties Up All PWA Aid To Louisiana

Striking out again at the new legislative program inspired by Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat) in his home State of Louisiana, Public Works Administrator Harold L. Ickes yesterday ordered a restudy of all public works projects in that State and a cessation of further loans for non-Federal projects until the inquiry is completed.

Mr. Ickes' formal announcement stated that the action was taken "in the light of legislation enacted at the recent special session of the Louisiana Legislature." He said he wanted his legal department to "study and report the full effect of the new laws providing for a moratorium upon the payment of debts and other new laws, upon security and marketability of bonds offered by borrowers in Louisiana."

Elaborating on the statement, Mr. Ickes said that "the question is whether, if they can declare a moratorium on private debts, they can not also apply the moratorium to public debts."

Political Motives Denied.

This was said to be the sole reason for the action and it was denied that any political motives inspired the PWA, temporarily at least, to turn its back on Louisiana and Senator Long, who has been in conflict with the Roosevelt Administration almost from the beginning of its regime.

Previously, the Administration refused to recognize Senator Long as an arbiter in the distribution of Federal patronage for the State and sent its own agent, Harry J. Early, into the State to administer relief funds. The Internal Revenue Bureau also has had in progress an inquiry into income tax reports and payments by Senator Long.

Senator Long appeared unperturbed by the action of the PWA. According to an Associated Press dispatch from Hot Springs, Ark., the "Kingfish" suggested that there was a certain place where Secretary Ickes could go, and he added that "we're not a-studying about that damn Washington Government—that is the least of our worries."

Jones Unworried by Moratorium.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, indicated his agency had no plans to follow the course of the PWA in regard to loans made in Louisiana. He said that the R. F. C., when necessary, would grant a five-year moratorium on payments due it. The Louisiana moratorium is for

Five Steamers Rush Aid To Disabled Russ Ship

Moscow, Nov. 22 (AP).—Five steamers tonight were hurrying to the aid of the passenger and freight steamer Sverdlovsk, drifting in the Sea of Okhotsk after sending distress signals yesterday. The ship was 800 miles from Vladivostok.

The ship's signals, which began at 10:30 a. m. yesterday (3:30 a. m. E. S. T.), were received by the People's Commissariat of Water Transport, which ordered the ships to its relief.

Norris Blames Party Blunder On Roosevelt

By Robert C. Albright.

Ill-feeling over the Administration's hard campaign to beat Senators Bronson Cutting and Henrik Shipstead in their race for reelection broke out yesterday in the Senate Progressive bloc.

In a bitterly worded statement, Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska independent Republican and friend of the President, said the Democrats as a party "made a very serious blunder and hurt only themselves."

The white-haired Progressive leader, many of whose liberal measures were pressed to enactment in the first year of the Roosevelt Administration, held the President personally accountable for the fight on Cutting and Shipstead.

Blames Roosevelt.

"I think he was responsible probably more than any one man," he said. "And I believe he made a serious mistake."

The Senate champion of Muscle Shoals and the twentieth amendment tempered his remarks somewhat by insisting he did not want to be put in the light of opposing the Administration or the President because of their campaign against Senate Progressives.

At the same time, he said he could not understand why the Democrats came to the aid of Senators Hiram Johnson in California and Robert La Follette in Wisconsin, while vigorously fighting to unseat Cutting in New Mexico and Shipstead in Minnesota.

"It looks like the Democratic machine was more concerned with the loaves and the fishes and jobs than they were with policies and the welfare of the Nation," he said.

He warned that the Democratic party had better not be "too arrogant," or behave "as though they were elected for life."

"That is just what the Republicans did after 1928," he said, "and now there isn't a corporal's guard of them left. A big majority is a dangerous thing."

He said he regards a political party only as an instrument, to be thrown away or repaired when it has served its use. He is not greatly concerned, he added, whether the Republican party lives or dies.

"So many regard a party as something sacred, when it is nothing of the kind," Norris said.

Roosevelt's Guard Confronted With Mystery of Hash

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 22 (AP).—The mystery surrounding the ingredients of hash has finally come within the purview of the United States Secret Service.

There will be no public report, however, on hash in general. The activity of Federal agents in the culinary line was restricted to an investigation of the turkey hash served President Roosevelt on his recent visit to the Hermitage, historic home of Andrew Jackson, near Nashville, Tenn.

Col. E. W. Starling, who is in charge of Secret Service men on duty here during Mr. Roosevelt's current stay at the Little White House, revealed today that it was necessary for the turkey hash to pass inspection before the President was permitted to eat it.

This official scrutiny was no reflection on the cooks who prepared the hash. It was merely one of the manifold details involved in the task of conducting a tour by the Nation's Chief Executive.

West Virginia Forest Fires Circle Cities, Kill One Man

Charleston and Beckley Ringed by Flames; 250 Blazes.

Wires to Mine Area In Mountain Down

Rain, Held Last Hope, Predicted to Fall in Region.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—The little city of Beckley, perched on the highest mountain tops of southern West Virginia, was surrounded tonight by raging forest fires which cut it off from all telephone and telegraphic communication.

Reports coming through to Charleston were that the town of 10,000 inhabitants, about 70 miles distant, is in no danger but hundreds of men are battling the flames only a few miles away. Automobile traffic to the city was not disrupted.

The fires in the steep hills—part of some 250 spreading destruction through timber stands and woodlands of the State—laid a heavy smoke pall across the sky.

One fire fighter was killed. He was Henry Frith, 19, crushed under a falling tree as he battled flames on Zion Mountain, near Hinton.

Smoke Blinds Motorists.

The village of Whitesville, 20 miles from Beckley, also was encircled by creeping flames with the smoke so thick motorists could hardly drive the streets.

Directing large crews of fighting forces from lookout towers near Charleston, District Forester J. N. Wittenberg nervously exclaimed:

"Unless we get rain we will burn up tonight and tomorrow."

High winds, approaching gale velocity, whipped the flames over miles of forests. Rangers feared the loss would reach high figures.

Many volunteers were marshaled as fire fighters. Near Elkins, in northern West Virginia, workers on Federal emergency relief projects were recruited to help control the flames.

Rain Forecast.

Rain and colder weather is forecast and rangers said it was their only hope of controlling some of the rapidly spreading fires.

Thousands of acres were burning south of the Kanawha River in the counties near the Virginia and Kentucky borders. Fires in or near the Monongahela National Forest in the northern section were reported mostly under control.

Charleston, the capital, was encircled by a dozen or more small fires and some of them crept to its very doors. City firemen were called out to extinguish a few brush blazes threatening homes.

Visibility from the fire towers, ordinarily about 15 miles, was reduced to a mile and a half by the smoke.

Because rangers attribute many of the fires to careless hunters, State Forester Hugh W. Shawhan said he "may find it necessary to close the woods until this danger is past."

Lady Russell Wins Divorce

London Court Raps Pact Condoning Infidelity on Both Sides.

London, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Complete freedom in love, though married, as romantic man's safest guard against disaster in the home, failed to work for Bertrand and Dora Russell, writers and philosophers, and she obtained an uncontested divorce today.

Although they mutually condoned infidelity in each other—and in any "intelligent" married couple—the Countess Russell was granted a decree on the grounds of adultery, the only cause for which divorce is granted in England.

Lord Russell, who prefers to be known as Bertrand Russell, was charged with immoral conduct after a separation pact which they entered into on December 31, 1932. The unusual pact condoned previous offenses against the usual marital conventions by both, the countess admitting similar conduct prior to the signing of the pact.

Lord St. Helier, presiding, on giving the decision, commented tersely that couples could not arrange between themselves to dictate to courts regarding the condonation of offenses.

"They may contract themselves out of their rights," he remarked, "but they can not contract this court out of its duty."

Tugwell Mum On Summons By Roosevelt

Arrives at Warm Springs to Resume His Post of Adviser.

(Post Staff Writer).

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 22.—Dr. Rexford Guy Tugwell resumed his place as adviser extraordinary to President Roosevelt today when he arrived early at this tiny resort and drove off to the Little White House with a heavy brief case in hand.

Returning at dusk, the handsome brain truster, whose mere presence so close to the throne hsa been wont to give business men the jitters, declared:

"We had a swell swim, we had a swell luncheon, and then we talked until 5 o'clock. You fellows know well enough that I'm only an undersecretary, and what I tell the President, or he tells me, will have to come from him."

Talks of Other Things.

With that, the young Undersecretary of Agriculture showed a great readiness to talk about his prowess in last summer's baseball game at Hyde Park, from which he was "yanked" by the President; about the question of prohibition in such States as Georgia, but not about anything connected with the National Government.

The fact that he was summoned to Warm Springs, that he was the first Administration official so honored, and the further fact that his stay likely will be the longest of any other visitor, was eloquent testimony of his standing with the White House. It effectively dispelled any notion that the President, by packing him off to Rome last summer, had sent him into exile.

On the contrary, Mr. Roosevelt, during the next few days will devote long hours discussing, in his simple pine study, important questions of state with the former professor. Among them will be the Administration's farm policy, but Dr. Tugwell's advice is not limited to this subject and almost everything else will be debated, too.

They Take a Swim.

When Mr. Roosevelt drove down to the swimming pool for his customary exercises, he immediately sent for Dr. Tugwell, who joined him in the warm waters. After an hour or two there, they drove up Pine Mountain for luncheon and a conference that is believed to have covered a wide range of topics.

Dr. Tugwell said on arrival that he was neither optimistic nor pessimistic concerning the prospects of increasing exports of agricultural products. "Watch Belgium," he counseled, implying the success or failure of foreign trade negotiations with that predominantly industrial nation may show which way the wind is blowing.

He reiterated the Administration's belief that the only way to increase farm exports is to admit more imports. He added that there is a tendency throughout Europe for the increased use of substitutes because of tariff barriers. Conditions in England, he said, are good, but he wondered if that country's housing boom is not about over.

Dr. Tugwell's presence will give the President an opportunity to discuss such problems as amendments to the agricultural adjustment act and a new pure food and drug bill, besides foreign trade.

Word from Washington that Chairman Frank McNinch and Vice Chairman Basil Manley, of the Power Commission are en route here indicates that they will confer with the President on his power policy.

Woman at Lighthouse Saved by Battleship

Ventura, Calif., Nov. 22 (AP).—The battleship California was credited today with saving the life of Mrs. Catherine Coursey, wife of the assistant Government lighthouse keeper at lonely Anacapa Light, 20 miles off the coast.

In answer to an emergency appeal the battleship turned from its course and rushed to the light where the woman had been critically injured in a fall. She was brought to shore and taken to a hospital. Hospital attendants said the quick action of the captain had saved Mrs. Coursey's life.

Body Taken From Bay Unclaimed in Hawaii

Honolulu, Nov. 22 (AP).—Ashes of Emil Gilhaar, 60, an artist, formerly of the Lehigh University faculty, whose body was taken from Hanauma Bay Tuesday, remained today at a mortuary here without instruction for their disposition.

A frayed rope tied about his body when it washed ashore at the outskirts of Honolulu caused police to express the opinion he had fastened a weight about himself and leaped into the bay.

Jersey Man Acquitted In Death of Woman

Belvidere, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP).—Carlton F. Clymer, 24-year-old cafeteria worker, was acquitted by a Warren County jury today of a charge of murder in the death of Mrs. Hazel Ebner, 28-year-old Phillipsburg widow. The State had contended he suffocated her in an attempted assault.

The jury was out three hours.

Between You and Me

A Merry Battle Impends Between President Roosevelt and the Utility Industry.

By Raymond Clapper

UTILITIES have awakened finally to the fact that President Roosevelt meant business when, before he was elected, he promised to set up several great public hydroelectric power developments as yardsticks for the whole country.

It didn't sink in at first because Mr. Roosevelt followed his customary technique of putting the bitter dose in a gelatine capsule. Under this treatment some time elapses before the unsuspecting consumer discovers that something has begun to work on him.

Many, too, had been lulled into a feeling of safety by the right-wing maneuvers of the Administration lately. They were sharply awakened by Mr. Roosevelt's utterances on his recent trip through the Tennessee Valley. The more alert ones were stirred a little earlier by disclosures that Mr. Roosevelt would press anew for ratification of the St. Lawrence treaty in order to clear the way for further power development in New England and New York State.

Now they all realize that they are in the same position in which the railroads were about the opening of the century, when the Federal Government moved in on them through its powers over interstate commerce and quickly brought their days of rugged individualism to an end.

Significant indications of alarm are appearing. The utilities industry, for one thing, is understood to be looking for some strong, high-powered front man to represent it at court, someone with entree in Washington. Such men are hard to find now, their guest cards at the White House having, in most cases, expired with the end of the Hoover Administration.

The railroads, in a similar predicament and shaken with fear of Government ownership, found a friend at court in John J. Pelley, an old friend of Mr. Roosevelt, who was recently made head of the new Association of American Railroads. The bankers found a White House friend in Jackson Reynolds, a Democrat and former law teacher of Mr. Roosevelt. He made the peace speech for the bankers at the recent A. B. A. convention here.

Utilities are having a harder time finding a man. They are understood to have approached Harvey Couch, big genial Arkansas utility man, until recently a director of the RFC, a Democrat, and a close friend, patron and former client of Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Senate majority leader. He knows his way around Washington as well as Wall street. But he declined to consider such a proposition.

Just before this leaked out, there was a mysterious gathering of leaders interested directly and indirectly in utilities, at Couch's home near Little Rock. Those present are understood to have included Owen D. Young, of General Electric; Rudolf Hecht, president of the American Bankers Association; Charles G. Dawes, and Senator Robinson. Maybe it was just a meeting of good fellows to talk about the weather and fishing. And maybe not.

Utilities men received unpalatable news out of the election where a number of localities went for public ownership like kids voting on Santa Claus. In Pennsylvania 16 utilities noted the handwriting on the wall and stepped forward with offers to cut rates.

In Washington the Federal Communications Commission had hardly got the announcement of its investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. into the newspapers when the local subsidiary of A. T. & T. surrendered voluntarily on a 10 per cent rate cut, which it had been fighting in the courts for two years, a peace offering which incidentally the local Public Utilities Commission rejected yesterday because of some strings that were attached.

The A. T. & T. has established a publicity office in Washington since the Government investigation started.

Just this week it dipped once more into its surplus to declare a dividend which will make some 700,000 stockholders cheer and rally to its support.

* * * *

It looks like a merry battle, with billions at stake. The utilities never before have been beset by such a determined foe as President Roosevelt. His skill at playing for public support makes this drive something far more formidable than the one-man crusade Senator Norris conducted.

On the other hand, Mr. Roosevelt never has been up against such a powerful opponent, one which reaches its roots far and deep into the whole investment structure of the Nation. This is not a matter of cracking down on a little battery shop or a pants presser. It is a battle of titans. Spectators had best stand 'way back if they want to keep out of the line of fire.

* * * *

Some New Dealers suspect that the captains of industry who are now singing belated hallelujahs to Mr. Roosevelt are practicing what the Japanese call "duck diplomacy."

Duck diplomacy in Japan means that you float along placidly on the surface, but underneath you are paddling like the dickens with your feet.

(Associated Press.)

In a series of conferences yesterday with Senators and other officials, Father Charles E. Coughlin outlined a monetary and labor legislative program which he said was designed to counteract the efforts of the American Liberty League and similar organizations.

At the end of a busy day, the Detroit priest summed up his program in the following words:

"We propose that the laboring man and the agriculturalist shall not be left to the mercies of financiers and industrialists."

Fighting for devaluation of the dollar to former levels, Father Coughlin canceled plans to return to Detroit last night and stayed over for a conference with members of the Senate silver bloc today.

Confers on Social Plan.

He conferred with Senators Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma; McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, and others, talking to them about the 16-point program advanced by his National Union for Social Justice.

He made it plain he considered his organization—which he says will conduct a "direct, up-and-above-board lobby" here—as a direct combatant of some ideas held by the American Liberty League, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and other organizations representing business, finance and established wealth.

These organizations, he said, have launched a direct move to "scuttle" the NRA and shipwreck any effort to change the value of money.

"Instead of the NRA being filed into the wastepaper basket," he said, "it should be perfected, especially along the lines of providing unionization of all laborers, independent of the supervision or control of industry, and yet not antagonistic to industry."

Silver Discussed.

Father Coughlin did not mention silver, but Senator McCarran after his conference with the priest, said that was one of the subjects discussed. The Nevada Senator said he favored free coinage of silver, contending it would not bring unlimited inflation.

Father Coughlin talked in more general terms. He demanded restoration to Congress of control over the regulation of the value of money "to the end that if I borrow a bale of cotton I will simply pay back the bale of cotton plus fair interest."

The Administration, the priest said, has fought the depression for two years by the expenditure of huge sums of borrowed money and the destruction of produce, ignoring "the basic cause of the depression, which is related to the maldistribution of wealth."

Stock Brokers To Lose 'Edge' Over Investors

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

The Securities and Exchange Commission expects to promulgate rules within a fortnight which will deprive certain brokers and all stock specialists of many advantages they have enjoyed over the common investor, it was learned last night.

The action will be effected through fair market practice regulations which will affect every licensed stock exchange.

At the same time, it was learned, the commission is preparing to extend a helping hand to corporations whose executives complain of the cost of compliance with the registration demands of the securities act of 1933.

Registration requirements will be simplified, it was predicted. This, members of the stock-market-control group have indicated, is the only essential change needed in the securities act despite steady pressure from some interests to make its provisions less stringent.

From discussions which have already taken place among securities and exchange commissioners, it was evident last night that at least two groups active in stock-market dealings will be affected by the forthcoming fair practice regulations. They are:

The broker who has few if any customers and operates largely for his own personal account.

The stock specialist, who, because of his position enjoys information not available to other investors and is able to utilize this knowledge for personal gains.

Consideration is being given to suggestions that the stock specialist be compelled to make available to brokers and investors his exclusive information on buying and selling orders or be prevented from dealings in these securities.

The United Press learned the commissioners have waved aside objections from certain stock exchange interests protesting the removal of the advantages they have held for years.

Some brokers have pointed out that they have paid thousands of dollars for seats on the various exchanges just to be in a position to enjoy these advantages. Their argument has had little weight, however, the majority of the commissioners believing the broker and the investor should share equally in all information which affects their personal fortunes.

Hull Upholds Favored Nation Trade Treaties

Peek Has Parley With Private Bankers on Foreign Trade.

As George N. Peek, foreign trade adviser to the President, conferred with a group of bankers regarding plans for expanding foreign commerce, Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday issued a statement standing firmly for the most-favored-nation policy in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements.

Although Mr. Hull did not refer specifically to the conflicting views on methods to be pursued in recapturing America's foreign trade which have developed between himself and Mr. Peek, his statement was taken as a reply to the foreign trade adviser's recent public statements, cited in The Post yesterday.

The conference between Mr. Peek and the private bankers representing the American Bankers Association, was held behind closed doors. A short address to the group by Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, urging that American business be prepared to take advantage of increased trade with Soviet Russia, caused the belief that a settlement between Moscow and Washington over the debt question was approaching.

Mr. Moore has been one of the American representatives in the Soviet debt talks. Mr. Peek heads the first Export-Import Bank created with $11,000,000 of Federal funds to finance American exports to Russia. The bank, however, became inactive due to the impasse over the old debt controversy.

Soviet Agreement in Sight.

Soviet Ambassador Troyanovsky is now in Moscow in connection with the American debt and trade problems and a recent dispatch from the Russian capital reported that prospects for agreement had brightened considerably in recent days. So far there has been no official announcement here indicating progress in that respect.

Mr. Peek declined yesterday to make any comment on reports of conflict between him and Secretary Hull on methods to be pursued in stimulating foreign trade. Mr. Peek on Tuesday night, however, suggested that this country might most advantageously promote its interests by abandoning the most-favored-nation policy and adopting two-column tariffs and establishing import quotas.

In his statement yesterday, issued after inquiries had been made at the State Department, Secretary Hull said:

"The favored-nation policy in its unconditional form, as it was set out in the Montevideo program for world business recovery, is our ultimate objective. We are following it as nearly as we can. We are seeking to facilitate the restoration of normal international finance and commerce.

"We will, as we go along, embody every practical method and idea and plan calculated to advance and facilitate the restoration of the normal processes of international trade and finance based on the doctrine of equality of treatment and equality of opportunity.

Facts Under Consideration.

"We are considering several trade agreements at the same time, and not just one at a time, and I think you will find within coming weeks, when you appraise the first six or seven months of operation, that we have made more progress in negotiating agreements that increase the amount of trade than most other countries have made during a like period of time.

"There is necessarily a vast amount of spade-work to be done to attack the tremendous economic difficulties and obstructions that have been set up since the war. In spite of all the obstacles, we have been making steady progress, and thus far we have found no obstacle which is insurmountable, as I believe the concrete results will show within a few months."

Seasickness Gives Up 6 Stowaways to Crew

Hoboken, N. J., Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Six stowaways who arranged with a member of the crew of the steamer Western World to secrete them in a compartment over the ceiling of a vacant cabin for the trip from Rio de Janeiro to this port, would have fared well enough if a storm hadn't arisen before the ship reached the United States.

The storm made the men so seasick they failed to climb down for parcels of food left for them and officers who found the food soon located the stowaways.

Machado Aboard Ship, Will Reside in Italy

Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, Nov. 22 (AP).—Gerardo Machado, former dictator of Cuba and now an exile, was headed eastward across the Atlantic on a German ship today in search of a new home and refuge from a Cuban government which seeks his arrest on murder charges.

He sailed yesterday from Puerto Plata on the S. S. Frida Horn, bound for Le Havre, France. He will pass through France into Italy, where he intends to make his home.

Fletcher Asks Banker Views On Legislation

Sends List of 50 Questions to 24 Men in Move for 'Truce.'

(Copyright, 1934, by United Press.)

A confidential questionnaire has been sent to the Nation's most influential bankers sounding them out on their views toward a Government-controlled central bank to replace the Federal Reserve System, it was learned last night.

The consensus of financiers was expected to be strongly against any further centralization of control in the hands of the Federal Government.

The questionnaire was mailed by Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee. It contained 50 questions and requested 24 of the biggest men in banking to give their views on financial policies ranging from creation of a central bank to requirements for a bank officer.

Fletcher recently predicted there would be no "revolutionary" banking reforms at the next session of Congress. His questionnaire, however, indicated to some that several important bank law changes would be considered.

Some of the Questions.

Among the questions were:

Is there to be a Government owned and operated banking system?

Is the power over the issuance of currency to be vested (a) in a nonpolitical authority on which both Government and private business are represented (such as the Federal Reserve System was intended to be), (b) in the Secretary of the Treasury (as it now is), (c) in a nonpolitical privately owned but Government chartered central bank (Bank of England), or (d) in a Government owned and operated central bank?

If the currency is to be irredeemable "managed" currency, upon what terms is it to be issued and how managed?

Is a fixed ratio to gold to be reestablished, and, if so, under what conditions?

Circularizing of the bankers by Fletcher was believed another step in the Administration "truce" with bankers for the purpose of bringing all classes of business in a general cooperative movement to spur recovery.

NRA and Ford Bury Hatchet With Car Sale

Government Buys Truck, First Purchase in Blue Eagle Era.

By Douglas Warrenfels.

Henry Ford and the New Deal, in effect, made peace yesterday. Tangible evidence that the breach had been healed came when the Interior Department paid $452.89 for a Ford truck. This was the first time any Government department had bought a Ford product since the Blue Eagle spread its broad wings early in the Roosevelt regime.

Observers attributed the surprise development to the departure from NRA of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, arch-enemy of Ford from the day the manufacturer refused to sign a certificate of compliance with the automobile code. At the height of the controversy the bellicose general threatened to "crack down" on the hard-hitting motor tycoon, but he never had a chance, because Ford obeyed the code without signing it.

It was an open secret at NRA that Johnson's retirement from the national scene left no one in the recovery unit who was disposed to reject bids of the Northwest Motor Co., Bethesda, Md., dealers in Ford products. Previously when its offers were referred to the compliance division they invariably were turned down.

Ford Was Low Bidder.

The Bethesda firm, Interior Department officials said, was the low bidder on 15 trucks, 14 of which will be bought as needed. In the latest transaction Northwest Motors filed a certificate merely pledging its own compliance with the retail automobile dealer's code. It failed to add the qualification, as in the past, that it could not speak for the manufacturer. NRA ruled compliance by the dealer was sufficient.

It became known yesterday for the first time that in January a Ford Motor Co. official telegraphed Secretary Ickes the company had "rigidly complied" with the manufacturers' code and would continue to do so. The telegram was regarded by some as to all intents and purposes a certificate of compliance, but it was not believed to have been the controlling factor in the Administration's capitulation. One of the competing manufacturers in the low-priced field was said to have protested the Interior Department's Ford purchase without success.

As long as Gen. Johnson remained in office the Bethesda firm lost numerous Government contracts on which it was the lowest bidder. It fruitlessly took one of the cases to court and its president, R. P. Sabine, charged that the Government's refusal to buy Ford products cost the Government hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Strategic Fort Reported Won For Paraguay

Asuncion Announces Capture of Canada Strongest.

Asuncion, Paraguay, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Paraguayan forces drove their wedge deeper into Bolivan territory tonight with the capture of Fort Canada Strongest. The position is 40 miles north of Guachalla, the Pilcomayo River fort, occupied earlier by the Paraguayans. Capture of Canada Strongest resulted from the fall of Fort Beatriz, which controlled the Canada Strongest area.

Paraguay's Drives Weaken Bolivia

Buenos Aires, Nov. 22.—Two smashing Paraguayan victories driving deep into Bolivian territory left the latter with only a precarious footing in the Southern Gran Chaco today, leading to predictions that a rout along this front and withdrawal to Villa Montes was imminent. Heavy fighting with high casualties was reported from the front as the Paraguayan forces pressed retreating Bolivians.

Capture of Fort Guachalla and Fort Beatriz was announced in a communique issued by the Paraguayan defense minister. The brief announcement laconically added they fell after "stubborn resistance" by the defenders. It said that wounded and war material were abandoned by the beaten Bolivians who were fleeing northward.

Guachalla is 60 miles northeast of Fort Ballivian, captured last week by Paraguay. Its possession, military experts said, enables Paraguay to dominate the entire strategic Pilcomaya area.

Beatriz is on a fork of the strategically important Lobrego highway. Control of this road constitutes a key to the Canada Strongest section—almost the last Bolivian position of importance.

League Marks Time On War in Gran Chaco

Geneva, Nov. 22 (AP).—The League of Nations committee for the settlement of the Chaco war between Paraguay and Bolivia refused today to set a time limit for the belligerents' acceptance of a peace plan, in order to avoid the appearance of coercion and veiled threat.

A rejected Russian proposal would have set a time limit of two weeks. The Russians, with Vladimir Potemkin, new Ambassador to France, present, wanted an amendment to the peace plan, whereby an assumption of rejection would be noted should the belligerent nations fail to reply in a fortnight.

The committee substituted an amendment which creates an advisory committee to urge Paraguay and Bolivia to reply as quickly as possible. The date for the first session of the committee was fixed at December 20 instead of December 12.

garian authorities that the odious act of Marseille was perpetrated.

"* * * If the best servants of a nation and the firmest pillars of international peace can be killed while accomplishing their duty by organized criminals who enjoy the facilities and the support of the authorities of a foreign country, organized government would be no longer possible."

It was further stated that "the facilities and protection which criminals have had on Hungarian soil are almost unbelievable" and "an epoch of anarchy and international barbarity would begin in the civilized world if such things were permitted."

"The inquiry reveals in particularly grave fashion the responsibility of Hungarian authorities for the aid accorded the terrorist activities of certain exiled Yugoslav subjects," the letter continued.

These terrorists, it said, not only were given asylum in Hungary, but remained there immediately before the assassinations.

Fourteen Yugoslavs Expelled From France

Paris, Nov. 22 (AP).—Fourteen Yugoslavs arrested after the assassination of King Alexander have been expelled from France, it was revealed today.

The expulsion came to light when Ernest Pezet, member of the Chamber of Deputies, announced he had asked the government the reasons for the "arbitrary expulsions."

The courts prevoiusly had released the suspects after finding them all innocent of any complicity in the Marseille murders, and that, Pezet said, was the basis of his criticism. The 14 were expelled yesterday.

Sir John Simon Opposes Tokyo Naval Demand

Commons Speech Argues Against Parity for All Fleets.

London, Nov. 23 (U.P.).—Japan's demand for naval parity with the United States and Great Britain received a new setback in the House of Commons tonight.

Sir John Simon, while arguing in favor of "equality of security" in sea strength, declared he saw no reason why all fleets should be of equal size. His speech was interpreted as an appeal to Tokyo to modify demand for absolute parity, which is holding up preliminary naval conversations and threatens to wreck prospects for a 1935 world naval conference.

Denies Negotiations Ended.

Sir John declared a breakdown of naval limitation efforts would mean a world catastrophe. He denied firmly that negotiations had been broken off, although the British delegation is admittedly pessimistic.

"We are doing our work in a most amicable way," he said, "and while I do not seek to disguise the difficulties there is nothing this government is not prepared to do to secure naval understanding.

"The government regards a breakdown in the system of naval limitation as a great disaster to everybody, not merely the powers now in consultation, but to the world. The financial and political evils of a renewed race in armaments are too apparent for me to enlarge upon here."

Takes Up Naval Security.

Touching on naval strength, he said: "That every great naval staff should feel its security compares favorable with others is an unquestioned right of all of us—but that does not necessarily mean that all fleets should be in fact equal in size.

"That depends upon the responsibilities and other things in each individual case. The whole purpose of the discussions in London is to reach the basis for an understanding without endangering anybody's sense of security.

"If that point is approximately reached, we feel the way is prepared for next year's conference, subject to the views of France and Italy."

Scouts "Alliance" Report.

Sir John said reports that Britain was trying to get together either with Japan against America or America against Japan were "pure fabrication."

Meanwhile, the Japanese Ambassador, Tsuneo Matsudaira, of the Japanese naval delegation, was reported to have made diplomatic representation to the foreign office, explaining that neither he nor Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto had indicated Japan's readiness to concede British naval superiority if Japan is granted equality with the United States, as widely reported earlier this week. His representation was said to have insisted again on full parity for Japan.

Nash to Manage D. C. Motor Club

Will Assume New Duties December 1.

Earl A. Nash, of the public relations staff of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., was appointed yesterday to the active management of the District of Columbia Motor Club, it was announced yesterday by Ernest N. Smith, executive vice president of the American Automobile Association.

The appointment is effective December 1.

Mr. Nash, a resident of Washington since 1920, is a native of Tennessee. He graduated from Georgetown University and from the Georgetown Foreign Service School, and has been active in Community Chest affairs for some years. He is nationally known in fraternity circles as deputy director of the Eastern division of Delta Sigma Pi.

California Bandits Get $12,000 in Mined Gold

Eight men were removing sacks of amalgam from the dredger when the bandits appeared. Posses were formed in an effort to trace an automobile in which the bandits fled with the gold.

may surpass as a result of the $70,000 haul at Tenafly Wednesday. The making of false coins, which had dropped during the prosperity years, also increased sharply in the depression years, with $72,818 in such pieces confiscated in 1933.

It is rare for manufacturers of counterfeit notes to set themselves up in Washington, Secret Service officials observed, and none has been found here since 1932, but the Nation's Capital is as badly afflicted as any with "passers" who purchase the fakes elsewhere.

The two men arraigned yesterday were arrested Wednesday night as a result of a grapevine tip passed along by Secret Service men who warned the Washington division that two suspected colored "passers" were heading south from Philadelphia in a maroon Ford with red wire wheels and Michigan license plates. The car was spotted here as its passengers entered a house on Thirteenth street near T street northwest and agents waited for the men to emerge. They said the two glimpsed the ambush as they came out, and alleged that one threw away a brown envelope, later found to contain 13 of the bogus $10 notes, just before the arrest.

Third Man Released.

With the two arraigned, a third man was arrested. He was released when he proved that the others had hired him in Philadelphia and said he had never seen them before.

Murtishaw and Blocker face action in the December 4 hearing to hold them for a grand jury, in which case they would be prosecuted in District Supreme Court for the Secret Service.

Explaining the penalties counterfeiting involves, Secret Service officials yesterday said any one who made, caused the making of, or assisted in the manufacture of plates or notes faced a maximum penalty of 15 years in prison and a fine of $5,000, and the same applies to any one who possesses, passes, or sells the plates or notes.

Secret Service men yesterday questioned two men arrested Wednesday night by Detective Sergts. Henry Jett and Joseph Sincavitz, of the automobile squad. Booked at police headquarters for investigation, the men said they were Henry R. Milton, 32, of the 1500 block Monroe street northwest, and Harry Behrle, 35, of the first block of Fourth street southeast. The police said the two had more than 1,000 lead telephone slugs in their possession.

Rating of Gang.

Secret Service officials repeated that it was impossible to estimate how much money in counterfeit notes had been passed as a result of the Tenafly ring's manufactures, but suggested that the estimated figure of $2,000,000 would have meant an obviously impossible currency inflation. They preferred to gauge the gang's rating by the quantity of notes actually seized on the premises, in which respect the group stacks up with the largest in American history.

Recalling recent seizures, officials said $250,000 in bogus currency had been confiscated last December in Chicago, shortly after another raid in the Windy City had netted $100,000 in one swoop. The latter was in old large-size notes, and the raid came one morning when Chicago banks had been inundated by $38,000 in spurious $100 bills.

Direct Appeal Seen In Rail Pension Case

Labor Counsel Predicts Early Supreme Test.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Herman L. Ekern, former attorney general of Wisconsin and now counsel for the Railroad Employes National Pension Association, said today that he understood Attorney General Homer S. Cummings would carry the railroad retirement act direct to the Supreme Court.

Ekern, speaking before the twentieth annual church pensions conference, said that the Attorney General would seek a writ of certiorari from the Supreme Court to eliminate the necessity for a hearing in the Circuit Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia.

The railroad retirement act was declared unconstitutional last month by Judge Alfred A. Wheat in the District of Columbia court on the grounds that it included persons not engaged in interstate commerce and provided for compensating employes for time spent in service before the plan became effective.

Britain Plans Rigid Survey Of Arms Trade

Sir John Simon Denies That Inquiry Will Be 'Fishing Expedition.'

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—The British government intends to set up a strict inquiry into the subject of traffic in arms, it was learned tonight. The exact form the inquiry will take has not yet been determined, but it is not proposed that any ministers shall be members of the tribunal.

Sir John Simon, foreign secretary, indicated to the House of Commons early this evening that an inquiry into the subject under certain lines would be regarded favorably. He did not, however, say the investigation had been decided upon.

He told the House that the government would oppose any "fishing expedition" dealing with rumors concerning conduct of the arms trade, but said that an inquiry which really studied the proposal of a state monopoly from the viewpoint of national security and the like was "a very different thing."

Sir John insisted that Britain still was strongly in favor of arms control, citing her prompt ratification of the arms traffic convention of 1925, which, he said, "remains ratified now" as far as Britain is concerned. He noted that "five or six principal arms manufacturing countries" have not yet ratified the convention, naming Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Italy, Japan, Germany and the United States. "That is disappointing," he said.

The foreign secretary declared that Great Britain, with others, had been continually pressing the matter of arms control and said he was very glad to say "we are going to have an opportunity of cooperating with the United States" in another move in this direction, the draft of which the representative of the United States had made available.

Louisiana Bills Signed.

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 22 (AP).—Gov. O. K. Allen today announced he had signed the 44 bills passed by last week's special session of the Legislature, including the measure establishing a two-year debt moratorium. They become effective December 6.

Ten Held Deny Counterfeiting Charge by U. S.

9 Men and Woman Jailed Under Heavy Guard in Default of Bail.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Nine men and one woman, rounded up by Federal agents in one of the most sweeping counterfeiting raids in years, were under heavy guard tonight in prisons here and in Newark, N. J., in default of high bail.

The seven arrested in New York, two of whom said they were living on home relief, were arraigned before Commissioner Garrett W. Cotter. They were charged with conspiracy in making counterfeiting plates, photographing real bills for counterfeiting purposes and with spurious money.

They all denied connection with any counterfeit ring.

Godby Makes Complaint.

Robert L. Godby, agent in charge of a special squad of Secret Service men and New York and New Jersey police, directing the raid after three months' preparation, made the complaining affidavit.

Two men and a woman, arrested in the raid at Tenafly, N. J., also were arraigned in Newark.

In New York, John F. Dailey, assistant United States attorney, labeled the charges against the men as one of the most serious preferred by Federal agents in many years.

"The money this ring put out," he said, "is the best reproduction of real money we have seen in a long time.

"Even a wary bank teller might have been deceived by it. And somebody turned out a lot of it—$100,000 worth at least."

Godby and his men were assigned to clean up the Metropolitan area of counterfeiters after quantities of counterfeit bills found their way into the Treasury of the United States itself.

Find Engraving Plates.

In a house at Tenafly, he found a complete photo-engraving plant for making counterfeit plates, a printing press and $70,000 worth of newly counterfeited $100 bills.

Six of the seven in New York were held in $20,000 bail each; the bail for the seventh, Frank W. Gurlitt, was fixed at $1,500.

In Newark, bail for Egidio Girardi was fixed at $75,000. Mary Pitti, who said she was Girardi's housekeeper, was held in $25,000.

They will be heard on December 14.

In addition to being charged with flooding the country with spurious currency, Jack Arsini, one of the prisoners, is accused by the police of being one of the principals in the Easton, Pa., bombing in 1931, in which three persons died.

A die for stamping American passports, containing the seal of the Secretary of State, also was seized in the Tenafly raid.

'Fascist Plot's' Quiz May Call Head of V.F.W.

Van Zandt Named Four Approached to Head Dictatorship.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Representative John W. McCormack, chairman of the Congressional committee investigating Gen. Smedley D. Butler's charges he was "approached" to head a Fascist dictatorship movement, asserted tonight that James E. Van Zandt, national chairman of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, may be called as a witness.

Van Zandt had said at Minot, N. Dak., that the movement actually existed, and that four men, including himself, had been approached to head it. The others were, he said, Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff of the United States Army; Col. Theodore Roosevelt and Hanford MacNider, former commander of the American Legion.

"If Mr. Van Zandt has any evidence which is pertinent to the committee's inquiry the committee will call him at the Washington hearing next month," McCormack said.

MacGuire to Appear.

He refused to comment on reports that the committee would call as witnesses Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Thomas Lamont, of J. P. Morgan & Co.

Meanwhile, it was learned that the committee will scrutinize the bank accounts and other records of Gerald P. Macguire, the bond salesman named by Butler as the man who asked him to head the movement.

Macguire, who has already denied the Butler charges, will appear before the committee tomorrow.

"Higher-Ups" Sought.

Although the committee shifted its inquiry into activities of left wing labor unions for the day, it was learned that it also was seeking to disclose whether there were any "higher-ups" in the alleged Fascist plot.

It will transfer its sessions after hearing Macguire tomorrow. It was said to regard Robert Sterling Clarke, New York broker, named by Butler as an associate of Macguire, as the most important witness to be heard. Clarke now is out of the country.

Bogdanov Deplores U. S.-Soviet Failure To Agree on Credit

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—The policy of economic nationalism was decried tonight by Peter A. Bogdanov, chairman of the board of the Amtorg Trading Corporation.

Addressing a farewell banquet in his honor given by the directors of the American-Russian Chamber of Commerce, Bogdanov, who leaves next week for a new post in the U. S. S. R., declared;

"The policy of the Soviet of maintaining peace in the economic as well as the political sphere has made it necessary that we participate in world councils which have as their aim the lessening of the possibility of international conflicts."

After citing the voluminous trade activity between the United States and the U. S. S. R., which totaled $800,000,000 in the ten years ending in 1933, and which showed a balance in favor of the United States of $500,000,000, Bogdanov referred indirectly to the hitch in settlement of debts and claims between the two nations—with its resultant hitch in the granting of credits.

"I regret," he said, "that the absence of the requisite financing arrangements, such as have for years been available in Europe, and other circumstances beyond our control have so far prevented the realization of the (trade) possibilities created."

This has led to a drastic decline in trade between the two nations, he said.

Models Join Hands For Finish Fight With Debutantes

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Already equipped with a president and a lawyer, the newly formed Professional Models League struck out tonight to win their battle against society girl competitors "once and for all," Miss Gertrude L. Mayer, their leader, disclosed.

"It is the first models' association on record," she asserted, "but it is not a union in any sense of the word.

"There's no reason why the modeling profession shouldn't have a group similar to the Actors' Equity, or the Lambs and Friars."

Sixty girls signed up as charter members when the league was organized.

Miss Mayer declared the campaign against debutantes who were taking their jobs was doing "marvelously," but an organization was needed. She said she had been "advised to organize" on a trip to Washington last week to consult labor leaders.

More than 100 manufacturers and owners of dress shops have signed a pledge to use only professional models in future fashion shows, Miss Mayer said.

Illinois Resident, 108, He Says, Goes to Prison

Vandalia, Ill., Nov. 22 (AP).—A man who claims to be the oldest person in Illinois is an inmate of the State Penal Farm.

He is J. Brannum Hodge, who told officials of the institution he was 108 years old and offered as proof a record birth date in an old family bible in the possession of Charles W. Shrader, of Decatur, a family friend. Hodge was sentenced to the farm on charges of receiving stolen property at his second-hand store in Springfield.

tenants in National Zoological Park.

Last year he disembarked with two rare porpoises. Today you can find them on exhibition in the Smithsonian.

He had his mind set on bagging a few more porpoises this winter and scraping the ocean floor for additional crustacean samples for the institution's vast collection when along came Capt. Manuel Rodriguez, skipper of a tuna boat, to complicate matters by reporting the discovery of the bodies.

Friends of Islanders.

And the fact that both he and Capt. Hancock knew and were friends of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wittmer, Baroness Eloise Bonsquet de Wagner, Arthur Rudolph Lorenz, Robert Phillipson, Dr. Frederick Ritter and Dora Karwin, all of whom are involved in the island mystery, clinched their participation in the strange case.

The present cruise, like its two predecessors, is expected to last from three to four months. Diving helmets, launches and all the other requisites of marine collecting are aboard the Velero III, which is scheduled to anchor off Marchena Island the first part of December.

Commenting yesterday on the expedition's objectives, Dr. Alexander Wetmore, assistant secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, said Dr. Schmitt is concerned chiefly with acquiring further specimens.

Southern Women Present a Cross To Gov. Lehman

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—As the son of a Confederate veteran and a World War veteran himself, Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York was decorated tonight with the Cross of Military Service by the United Daughters of the Confederacy.

The award was accepted by Col. Frederick Greene, State superintendent of public works, representing the Governor who is vacationing in Florida.

The presentation was made in a setting approximating a scene from the '60's. Confederate flags were displayed and delegates to the convention wore hoopskirts and bonnets.

A procession of State historians of the U. D. C. bearing State flags, was led by Miss Jessica Randolph Smith, of Washington, daughter of the designer of the Stars and Bars, who carried the Confederate banner.

Canadian Blamed For Lake Crash

U. S. Skipper Holds Him Responsible for Deaths.

Detroit, Nov. 22 (AP).—Capt. Angus McKenzie, of the American freighter Edward E. Loomis, tonight blamed the officers of the Canadian freighter W. C. Franz for the Lake Huron ship crash Wednesday which sent the Franz to the bottom with a loss of four lives.

Capt. McKenzie testified before the Steamship Inspection Service Board which is conducting an investigation of the crash. His testimony olso differed from the earlier reports that the crash occurred in a dense fog.

"You could see 5 or 6 miles when I came on deck after the crash," said Capt. McKenzie in testifying before the Steamboat Inspection Board. "I can't very well account for the collision," the captain added, explaining that he was asleep below at the time of the accident.

Alleged Assailants Held In Bond Pending Trial

Two youths, charged with assaulting Elmus A. McDade, 29, chief orderly at Garfield Hospital, were ordered held under bonds of $300 each when arraigned in Police Court yesterday. They demanded a jury trial.

Arrested several days ago, the youths gave names of Vernon E. Tate, 22, of the 500 block, L street northwest, and William H. Krantler, jr., 19, of the 1100 block of Fifth street northwest. Police said the two prisoners forced McDade into an automobile near the Treasury Department, drove him into Potomac Park and allegedly beat him.

last June by Dr. Friedrich Ritter, German nudist on Charles Island, saying the noblewoman and another of her companions, Robert Philipson, had sailed suddenly for the South Seas.

Lorenz was presumed to have left Charles Island later.

Because of the stories emanating from visitors to the islands, as well as from the society-shunning inhabitants themselves, the baroness was believed to know the secret that caused Lorenz to venture to the waterless rock of Marchena, where he died of thirst and starvation.

Additional examination of reports on the position and state of the bodies disclosed the man identified as Lorenz must have witnessed the death agonies of his larger companion.

Both Die of Thirst.

The tongues of both were black from an excruciating thirst which even the moist meat of Galapagos lizards failed to assuage. The larger man's head was pillowed on a pile of clothing, indicating the other had tried to make him comfortable in the last hours of their torture.

Some enlightenment on the secret supposedly kept by the baroness and possibly by Philipson is expected to come from Dr. Ritter and his blonde German mate, Frau Dore Strauch Koerwien, when Swett and his party of the cruiser Velero III reach the mystery island about ten days hence.

Ritter's letter of last June, in which he told of the sudden departure of the baroness and Philipson, and alluded to dire events in the island paradise which he would not detail in writing, gave promise of providing information which might lead to a solution of the Marchena tragedy.

Roosevelt Table To Hold 2 Birds On Thanksgiving

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—A wild turkey and the usual domesticated fowl will be served to President Roosevelt on Thanksgiving.

The latter is being fattened at the Warm Springs Foundation. It is a gift from Mrs. (Mother) Eliza Maury, 97-year-old admirer of the President, living in Lamar County.

The wild turkey was assured when Gov. Dave Sholtz, of Florida, overheard Marvin H. McIntyre, assistant White House secretary, ruminating in the showers on the possibility of getting one for the President. He telephoned at once to the Florida State game commissioner and reported, when McIntyre reappeared, that one would soon be on the way.

Central States Get Priceless Rain and Snow

Five Killed in Missouri Traffic Accidents Laid to Storm.

Kansas City, Nov. 22 (AP).—There was gold in the creeks and silver hung from the trees today as the Rocky Mountain and Central States counted their profits in a two-day rain and snow storm.

From the Rockies to the Mississippi River and the Great Lakes there was dust today only in the wheat regions of western Kansas.

The bare peaks of the Colorado Rockies, some of which had been uncovered for the first time within memory of men, were under snow mantles again.

Five Deaths Laid to Storm.

The creeks of Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Oklahoma and eastern Kansas ran high and priceless moisture soaked into the soil from a snowfall which in some places totaled 3 inches.

Generally colder weather, with more rain and snow in some sections, was forecast for tonight and tomorrow.

Five deaths, all in Missouri, were attributed to the storm. Four men in a truck were killed last night when they were struck by a speeding train in a blinding rain storm near Kansas City. Another man was killed in a motor car collision at Joplin.

Nebraska Temperatures Low.

Snowfall was general throughout Iowa. The Chicago area received a slight hail today as the climax of five days of rain. Snow was forecast.

In Nebraska, temperatures were below freezing, with some snow. Eastern Kansas and Missouri were drenched with rain and covered with snow overnight.

Oklahoma skies were clear after a night of snow and sleet. The season's first frost came to Texas last night after several days of general rains.

'Long-Count' Barry Held in Shortage

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—Dave Barry, whose "14-count" as referee in the 1927 Dempsey-Tunney fight brought him national attention, was held with two associates today in larceny warrants charging a $55,000 swindle of the Amalgamated Trust & Savings Co.

Barry, his business partner, Joseph Baiata, and Abraham Karatz, former St. Paul, Minn., attorney, were the only persons of ten taken into custody who faced formal charges tonight in connection with the bank manipulations described by Otto Van Derck, 23-year-old clerk who told about the dealings voluntarily to police.

Volunteer information was given today by Gustav Lindquist, president of the Abraham Lincoln Insurance Co., of Springfield, Ill., but its nature was not revealed. It was this company which Joseph Baiata allegedly sought to control by making a down payment of a $25,000 check, which, prosecutors charged, was spurious but was honored because of Van Derck's manipulation of the bank's books.

Anadarko, Okla., Nov. 22 (AP).—Forrest Hudgins, 42-year-old Fort Cobb filling station operator, attempted today to beat himself to death with a hammer. As witnesses rushed to him he gasped:

Hospital attendants said his recovery was doubtful.

Reminders Mailed To Debtor Nations

But Stamps Are Wasted on All but Finland.

Politely, briefly—and hopelessly—the State Department yesterday reminded 12 nations that on December 15 they would owe the United States $630,122,354, the Associated Press reported.

Officials knew that only Finland, the single nation which had not defaulted on its past obligations, would pay the next installment. That was a mere $222,538.

The notes simply said that payments on the war debt would be due in mid-December. They were sent to:

Great Britain, who owes $379,461,776; France, $163,616,843; Italy, $30,570,196; Poland, $22,972,909; Belgium, $21,628,360; Czechoslovakia, $6,118,514; Latvia, $642,928; Lithuania, $490,501; Estonia, $1,844,185; Hungary, $202,249; Rumania, $2,346,250.

two years. He said the R. F. C. held collateral for all its loans and that he was not worried.

The municipalities of Louisiana will be chiefly affected by the Ickes order. Projects already under construction will not be affected by his ruling, so employment on those projects will not be halted. Projects affected are a bridge at Baton Rouge, to cost $7,000,000; waterworks, park improvements, schools, firehouse and other buildings. More than $13,000,000 of loans will be held up.

take on a large building program, but we can not sit and wait indefinitely."

The PWA administrator pointed out the Government could erect houses at a cost in the neighborhood of $2,500 or $3,000 and sell these homes to persons on a long-term payment plan at an annual interest rate of 3 per cent and without any requirement for a down payment. In addition, he said, the Government was in a better position to deal with contractors than private capital.

Asked if such a scheme did not constitute unfair competition with private enterprise, Mr. Ickes replied:

"I think the question is the same as in the power field. If private industry charges rates that, socially speaking, are too high, why should not we compete with it?"

Mr. Ickes declined to reveal how large a housing program he had in mind, asserting this should be announced by President Roosevelt. But it is understood his plan contemplates sprinkling the country with low-cost housing developments and that the program would require billions of dollars.

Curb on Wheat Turned Down By Argentina

Republic Says Basis of Average Reduction Is Unfair.

Budapest, Hungary, Nov. 22 (AP). Argentina told the International Wheat Advisory Commission today she would not accept the proposed agreement to continue in effect during 1935 reductions in wheat acreage made last year.

Her decision, based on the contention that the present basis of acreage reduction is unfair, came after other members of wheat's "big four"—The United States, Canada and Australia—had accepted in principle the draft of the proposed agreement.

The basis adopted by the wheat commission was 15 per cent reduction in comparison with the average of the last three years, but Argentina, represented by Rodolfo Garcia Arias, argued that the reductions should be calculated against the average since 1914.

Argentina asserted that Canada and Australia, particularly, have made their greatest increases in acreage in the last few years. It was learned that the negotiations still are open, with other members of the big four still hoping to reach an agreement with Argentna.

Sources close to the Argentine delegation said that Argentina also maintained that increases in acreage in Europe should be taken into consideration in the draft of the agreement. Under the plan proposed, the United States would be required to make an abrupt about-face in the agricultural policies announced in August, which involved an increase of 5 per cent in winter wheat sowing.

This increase, most of which already has been completed, would have to be eliminated either through corresponding reductions in spring planting or plowing up of wheat already sown, or, perhaps, cutting of winter wheat for use as animal feed.

A bombshell burst in the conference today as France demanded an export quota—no provision having been made for France in the commission's estimate of the world export demand of 600,000,000 bushels.

It was understood France wants over 20,000,000 bushels as her quota, twice the amount the United States asked and twice the allotment suggested for Russia, inasmuch as her surplus is estimated at 26,000,000 bushels.

Election Feature Of Civic Meeting

Federation Votes Tonight for New Secretary.

Election of officers will be the principal business before the Federation of Civic Associations meeting tonight in the District Building. Nominations will be made from the floor.

George W. Beasley, president, is expected to meet with little opposition for a third term. Woolsey W. Hall, corresponding secretary, likewise, would find himself without opposition if he would stand for reelection. It is understood, however, that he will come to the meeting prepared to decline the office, by reason of pressure of business.

The position of treasurer, held for several years by Maj. Howard D. Queen, employed for several months recently in Delaware, will be filled by election unless it should be made known that he will return here at an early date. Other offices to be filled include those of vice president, recording secretary, and chaplain.

Chest Leaving Its Books Open For Late Gifts

Officials Hope to Make Up the $104,800 by Which Drive Fell Short.

With the drive officially over, Community Chest books will remain open for several weeks for tardy gifts which are hoped to make up $104,800.38 by which the campaign fell short of its $1,675,000 goal, it was announced yesterday.

As an indication that this hope may be realized, Chest officials pointed to the statement of Charles Carroll Morgan, chairman of the special gifts unit, that his group will probably get gifts totaling $25,000 in the post-campaign period.

Yesterday was an abrupt letdown from the strenuous ten days of the drive which ended Wednesday night at the Willard, when more than 1,000 of the 6,000 Chest volunteers gathered to see the final result—$1,570,199.62—chalked up on the progress board.

A recapitulation of the last figures of the drive showed that highest honors went to the governmental unit, headed by Maj. Gen. Frederick W. Coleman. This unit exceeded its quota—the largest goal of any of the units—by 6.45 per cent, and reported that more than 400 units, including some of the large departments, went over their individual quotas.

In most circles the drive is deemed a success, despite the fact that the quota was not reached. Many prominent Washingtonians have expressed surprise that the campaign met as much success as it did. All praised the management of the drive under H. L. Rust, jr., his many assistants and thousands of volunteers.

Battle Impends On Steel Labor

U. S. Corporation Expected to Follow Houde Fight Against Bargaining.

Civil prosecution of the Houde Engineering Co., Buffalo, will be instituted after the National Labor Relations Board drafts a bill of complaint, Attorney General Cummings announced yesterday.

The firm refused to abide by a decision of the board ordering it to bargain collectively with a union chosen by a majority of its employes. The National Association of Manufacturers has urged all members to disregard the ruling.

There was speculation yesterday over an interpretation of the Houde decision given by Donald R. Richberg, National Emergency Council, in a New York speech. He said a group chosen by the majority could only represent those who voted.

Meanwhile, a court fight was threatened in the troubled steel labor field. The Steel Labor Relations Board is expected to act soon on requests from the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers for elections at the Duquesne, Pa., and McDonald, Ohio, plants of the United States Steel Corporation.

Corporation officials indicated if such elections were ordered they would go into the courts, if necessary, to prevent supplying the board with copies of their pay roll.

Minor Officials Facing Ouster From Tax Unit

Competitive Tests Slated for 100 Executives of the Treasury.

By James D. Secrest.

The jobs of approximately 100 minor executives in the alcohol tax unit of the Internal Revenue Bureau are at stake as the result of the McKellar "patronage rider," which has already thrown 900 investigators out of employment, effective December 1, it was learned yesterday.

Competitive examinations are now being held in some sections, and others are to follow in a few days in the West for the higher grade positions, such as chief of the enforcement division, district supervisor, assistant supervisor and investigator in charge.

"Under normal conditions we would not hold competitive examinations for these positions," Harry B. Mitchell, president of the Civil Service Commission, said.

Demanded by Law.

"The usual practice is for the Treasury Department to ask us to hold a noncompetitive examination for some one already in the service in a lower position for advancement to the superior position, but the recent legislation by Congress requires the commission to hold 'open competitive examinations.'

"In higher grade positions all through the Government service it is the practice of the commission to hold nonassembled examinations. In other words, persons are declared eligible for these positions if they have had certain training and experience, but in this particular case we have followed the usual examination that we would have followed if these positions were entirely new in the service and there was no one who could be advanced from a lower position in the service to a higher position."

The purpose of restricting the higher grade positions to men in the service, it was explained, was to obtain seasoned and experienced employes and to offer an incentive to ambitious minor employes to work for advancements.

Dismissals to Be Studied.

Meanwhile, two Senators in Washington promised to investigate the dismissal of the 900 investigators brought about by the McKellar rider. The Senators are William H. King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, and Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, champion of Federal employes in their pay restoration fights.

Both Senators refused to commit themselves prior to examining the matter thoroughly, but they said they would be willing to reconsider the legislation if they became convinced that an injustice had been done the employes.

Senator King, like many other members of both Houses who have written to the Civil Service Commission, was under the impression when he voted for the rider that the employes affected were patronage appointees who were blanketed into civil-service status under President Hoover.

The commission has pointed out, however, that not one of the persons appointed to the Prohibition Bureau and subsequently transferred to the Treasury Department was blanketed into the civil service. An act was passed in 1927 which provided that all employes of the bureau who did not possess a civil-service status within six months would be dismissed.

Mitchell yesterday explained further the position of the Civil Service Commission in the controversy by releasing a letter he had written in answer to one of the numerous inquiries regarding the commission's action.

Obtained Two Rulings.

The McKellar rider, he explained, required that all persons in the alcohol-tax unit and formerly employed as specified in the Prohibition Bureau or alcoholic beverage unit of the Department of Justice be not paid after December 1 unless they passed an open competitive examination "to be held hereafter by the Civil Service Commission."

After opinions had been obtained from the Attorney General and Comptroller General McCarl the commission held the examinations.

"The duty of the commission was to observe both the spirit and the letter of the law," Mitchell said, "and in order that there might be no question concerning its desire to do so, it did not evolve a new examination for this particular purpose, but it went back to previous examinations for like positions, held in 1931, with the exception of the necessary changes in verbiage."

The test given was series A, one of the higher grade examinations, because the positions involved paid minimum salaries of $2,600 a year. Not only was the test similar in form to that used previously in the alcohol control service, he said, "even some of the questions were identical to those asked in 1931," of applicants for jobs as prohibition agents.

In defense of the mental tests, he said: "Mental tests show a man's natural intelligence. It has been shown many times that the more intelligent persons will, in the performance of their duties, do the more intelligent work."

The questions asked the investigators of the alcohol tax unit were "prepared by the examining division of the commission in the regular routine of its daily work," he added.

Man Held as Woman Charges Blackmail

Blackmail charges yesterday held Herbert Barrett, 18, of the 1200 block of Tenth street northwest, under a $2,000 bond when he was arraigned before Judge Isaac R. Hitt in Police Court.

Barrett was ordered to face grand jury action after Miss Luci Nardin, of the 1700 block of Q street northwest, testified she paid him $30 for a letter she allegedly had written. She said Barrett threatened to reveal contents of the letter.

conducted against me to rob me of my child."

Asked what she thought Mrs. Whitney's motives might be, she answered:

"Mrs. Whitney's motives will some day be shown up for what they really are. Now, I don't know. She talks about the good of the child and her interests, but the best interests of the child are with her mother."

Huge Diamond.

As she talked, Mrs. Vanderbilt smoked almost continuously. Her finger nails were tinted a deep crimson, and she wore a diamond ring as large as a walnut.

She accused Mrs. Whitney of breaking a verbal agreement by taking her child.

Mrs. Vanderbilt said she feared she had "a very slight chance" of winning back her daughter's affections under the present court ruling.

"I'm afraid that my little daughter has been very much influenced, and that promises of lots of things will make a child say almost anything," she said. "I'm sure Gloria in her heart doesn't mean what she said before Justice Carew."

To Lose Allowance.

Mrs. Vanderbilt was asked what she would do when the yearly allowance of $48,000 which the court has been granting her for the support of Gloria expires December 31.

"I think they are trying to stop me," she said. "If that allowance is taken away, it will be too bad for me, that's all. I will live on what I can."

She denied that an action she now has pending in surrogate's court to be appointed guardian of Gloria's $2,800,000 estate was an attempt to supplant the present guardians, George W. Wickersham and Thomas B. Gilchrist.

"I wanted to be appointed legal guardian of the property with them," she said.

Asked if she intended to go abroad this winter, Mrs. Vanderbilt said she didn't know what she would do. If a higher court should award custody of young Gloria to her she would "act for the best interests of my child."

passage of words between the Commissioners and a parole board member. The verbal tilt was brought to an end when a Commissioner asked the board member if he wished to resign.

The Commissioners have been uncommunicative in their comments for publication and even in private on the subject. But the resignation of at least one member of the board would not be surprising in the near future.

Police Objections Aired.

The work of the board was the subject of a conference Wednesday between Commissioner Allen, Lieut. Col. Daniel I. Sultan, Engineer Commissioner, and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. At that conference the police chief is understood to have pointed out some of the objections to the present system of operation from the police viewpoint. Against the police criticism of release of convicted criminals the parole board advances the contention that the parole system is designed to reform criminals and that none released has fallen into the clutches of the law for violation of any law against the safety and welfare of the public.

The Saturday conference was to have been held today, but was postponed until tomorrow when Wilbur La Roe, jr., parole board member, asked for postponement.

E. Barrett Prettyman, corporation counsel, yesterday upheld the contention of Mr. La Roe and other board members that they were not the creatures of the Commissioners. The Commissioners, Mr. Prettyman said, had no authority to demand the records of the board be made public.

The board had ben established by Congress as a "separate, independent body, charged with the exercise of discretion not subject to review," Mr. Prettyman said. He added the rules and regulations of the board must be approved by the Commissioners, but once those rules are approved the Parole Board is, under the law, a body independent of them.

"What ruling is all right," one of the commissioners said. "I don't think the District Commissioners ought to interfere with the discretion of the parole board. The board is supposed to be an independent body. It should not be subservient to anyone. That always is the advantage of having an unpaid board. The members do not have a salary or pay check at stake.

"I think the air should be cleared a little so all of us can get down to earth. That is what we are going to confer with the parole board about Saturday."

Both motion pictures and lantern slides will illustrate the talk. Among the latter will be a view of the earth from near 12 miles aloft.

Jones Criticizes Missouri Pacific

RFC Chairman Impatient at "Needless Delay."

Chairman Jones, of the RFC, yesterday criticized what he called "needless delay" in presenting a plan for reorganization of the Missouri Pacific Railway System, the Associated Press reported.

At a press conference Jones reported on a meeting of Missouri Pacific security holders and officers in New York. The security holders believe, he said, that no plan should be presented at this time.

"I can sympathize," Jones said, "but at the same time there are so many railroads involved that this reorganization plan will require a great deal of time and study. Great speed is not necessary, but needless delay would be unwarranted. How long the situation can wait is a question."

Jury Hears Last Plea For Insull at Trial

Chicago, Nov. 22 (AP).—Samuel Insull's attorney unloosed the final plea for the Chicago utility man's acquittal on mail fraud charges late today to a jury told a moment before that "old man depression is the real defendant here."

That parting shoot by Defense Attorney Harry S. Ditchburne was the cue for the last defense argument of Floyd E. Thompson. Court was crowded for Thompson's plea—the last word which can be said in defense of Insull and his associates before the case goes to the jury late Saturday or early Monday.

The recently prepared report of Seth Richardson, chairman of the sub-committee on probation and parole, was made public after yesterday's session. In it Richardson propounded a series of questions which the committee on crime must consider.

These briefly were: Should there be a general increase in maximum penalties for crime? Should indeterminate sentences be eliminated? Should probation or parole be refused second offenders, or in cases involving violence or danger to the public? Should there be full publicity in connection with the release of offenders and what steps should be taken to train personnel for the administration of probation and parole?

Hunting Attracts Scores to County

Rabbits, Quail Reported Plentiful in Somerset.

Crisfield, Md., Nov. 22 (Spl.).(AP) With the opening of the gunning season for rabbits and quail in Somerset County an invasion of the fields throughout the county by scores of hunters was witnessed.

Game is reported to be fairly plentiful, with rabbits and quail in numbers sufficient to making gunning real sport, the hunters say.

The duck season opened in the county on November 8. Although there is reported an abundance of wild ducks and geese in the upper part of the Chesapeake Bay, the hunters say that they are somewhat scarce in this, the lower, section of the bay.

President Made Party Blunder, Norris Asserts

While Senator Norris was chastizing both parties, Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, said the Republican Party is headed for oblivion "if it continues to 'win' such Pyrrhic victories as the election of November 6."

Byrns challenged statements of Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican National Committee that the Democrats lost more votes than the G. O. P. in the elections, compared to 1932 returns.

"Nothing could be further from the fact, as is clearly shown by the increased Democratic majorities in both Senate and House," said Byrns, claiming Democratic candidates showed a net gain of 2,000,000 votes, if Minnesota, Wisconsin and the solid South were eliminated. He said President Roosevelt's majority would have been 6,231,000 for the same States.

Assails Farley Rule.

Earlier, Postmaster General James A. Farley's continuance in office as chairman of the Democratic national committee, evoked another barb from the tongue of Senator Norris.

"I'll say to you that the rank and file of people, Republicans and Democrats alike, are perfectly disgusted," he said.

He insisted he has "nothing personally against Farley," but the idea of a Cabinet officer managing his political party's affairs and running a department at the same time is "obnoxious" to him.

Having successfully added one amendment to the Constitution, the "lame duck" amendment, the Nebraskan announced he is prepared to renew his drive for another, abolishing the electoral college and providing for election of President and Vice President by a direct vote of the people.

At the Senator's behest, Nebraska has just amended its own constitution to provide for a one-house Legislature. Although other States have shown an interest in the plan, Norris thinks there is little possibility of applying the principle to the national Government, much as he would like to.

Praises Cutting.

Returning to the Progressives' victory at the polls, Norris said that defeat of Cutting would have been "a national calamity."

"He is the outstanding example of an independent Senator, who votes his honest convictions regardless of party," he said. "I can't think of any one I would rank above him.

"The Administration should encourage this sort of independence on legislative issues. If I were President, I wouldn't want a Senator who was like a dog following me around."

Claw Device Leads To Arrest of Four

Police Find High School Students Playing.

The District's drive on automatic gambling devices, which, according to the order of United States Attorney Leslie C. Garnett, must be banished by December 1, resulted yesterday in the arrest of four men, who were charged with permitting gaming in a delicatessen store in the 4300 block of Georgia avenue.

Detective Sergt. Roy Blick, of the District Vice Squad, entered the place yesterday afternoon and found several Roosevelt High School students dropping nickels in a claw machine, he said.

He arrested Joseph J. Hage, 26; Michael G. Hage, 28, and Jacob Hage, 20, all of the first block of U street northwest, and John Lee Whipp, 20, of the 3600 block of New Hampshire avenue northwest. The machine was confiscated.

D. C. Court Asked To Annul Marriage

B. F. Saul Charges Wife Never Divorced Legally.

Charging his wife was never legally divorced from her first husband, Bernard F. Saul, a builder, of the first block of E street northwest, yesterday petitioned the District Supreme Court to annual his marriage to Mary Harding Saul, to whom he was married in Indiana in 1927.

In his complaint Saul alleged he and his wife agreed secretly, and over his protests, to adopt a child. This they did in 1932 in Michigan, and two years later his wife deserted him, he said.

The basis for his charge that his wife was not free to marry him was the allegation that Mrs. Saul obtained a divorce from Herbert W. Gardner in Davidson County, Tenn., in 1927. The divorce was not valid, Saul contended, because his wife did not comply with the Tennessee statutes governing the length of time necessary for a person to live in the State before suing for a divorce. Through Attorneys James C. Wilkes and James E. Artis, he also asked custory of the child.

Misunas Says He 'Squealed' For Vengeance

Mais and Legenza Tried to 'Fix' Him, Gunman Tells Reporters.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—"Those guys were trying to fix me and I was just coming back at them" were the words of Arthur "Big Dutch" Misunas, whose evidence was largely responsible for the death penalty conferred on Robert Mais and William Legenza for the murder of Ewell M. Huband. Misunas was telling newspaper men for the first time why he violated the criminal code and "squealed" on his two brother gunmen.

Speaking from his cell in the Henrico, Va., jail, the burly gangster, who will be taken to Washington soon to act as a witness in the trial of two more tri-State gang members for an alleged brewery holdup, denied that he had testified against Mais and Legenza because he was promised leniency when he was sentenced.

Misunas cited three reasons why he gave officials incriminating evidence against the escaped duo. First, they had "put the finger" on him two months before in Baltimore. Second, they had tipped off Federal men that he was in California when he was taken. Third, they "scrammed" after the robbery of a mail truck in Washington leaving him in the middle of Pennsylvania avenue with a machine gun.

Confessed Slayer Quizzed.

The occasion of the interview came when Sheriff T. Williams Seay and Superintendent of Police Fred L. Bates, of Henrico, were quizzing Philip Jones, confessed murderer of Alice and Helen Hill in Clifton Forge. Sheriff Seay walked over to the steel door of Misunas' individual cell block.

"What do you think ought to be done with this Negro, Dutch?" the sheriff asked.

"Who am I to judge?" the gunman retorted.

After the Negro had been taken back to his cell, the talk resumed with Misunas, gradually drifted to the trial of Mais and Legenza and their subsequent escape.

Misunas explained that he had no fear of incarceration in the Virginia Penitentiary when he was asked if he didn't fear gang retaliation for testifying against Mais and Leganzia.

Doesn't "Squeal," He Says.

"Say, listen, buddy," Misunas flared, "I don't squeal on no one, see. Those guys were trying to fix me and I was just coming back at them.

"They had me on the spot in Baltimore when I lammed to the Coast. Then I was writing to Mrs. Mais and asking how the boys was doing when they was caught. A few weeks later I am nabbed in my restaurant. Something was 'screwy' there, you can bet.

"And that ain't all. Whenever we was taking a bank, those mugs (Mais and Legenza) was always leaping for the car and not covering me.

"Why I broke that little guy, Mais, into bank robbery, is a mystery to me," said Misunas, with the air of a father talking of an ungrateful son.

Misunas was just launching into a defense of Mrs. Mais, mother of the fugitive gangster, by saying "blood is thicker than water," etc., etc., when his gangland harangue was interrupted by the jailer, Joe Lyons, who shut the door of the cell block.

Mais, Wounded, Held Near Death

acquittal for City Police Sergt. John G. Saunders, charged with gross negligence in not preventing the escape.

While the jury was out considering the Saunders case, the State nolle prossed its action against Mrs. Elizabeth Mais, mother of Robert Mais, who, with Walter Legenza, another condemned murderer, shot his way to freedom on September 29. Mrs. Mais was charged with being accessory before the fact in the murder of W. A. Toot, policeman killed by the escaping gangsters.

In dropping the charge, the State declared it lacked sufficient evidence to convict her on charges of smuggling pistols to the prisoners.

A grand jury which investigated the escape returned indictments against Saunders and Mrs. Mais. It also recommended ousting of two jail deputies, T. F. O'Connor and John H. Saunders, son of the sergeant. The court has no jurisdiction, however, over the deputies.

Royalty to Wed in Famed Abbey

This is a new and hitherto unpublished photo of the altar in Westminster Abbey, London, where the royal wedding of the Duke of Kent and Princess Marina will be solemnized.

MacDonald Crushes Attempt To Probe Prince's Pay Raise

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—A Labor effort to get the House of Commons to look into the additional £15,000 ($75,000) Britain will pay the Duke of Kent annually after he marries Princess Marina of Greece was squelched quickly today by Prime Minister MacDonald.

J. McGovern, member from Glasgow who set Parliament by its ears last year when he yelled "parasites" at King George and the royal party, said yesterday he intended to see what could be done about it.

But it was James Maxton, another Glasgow Laborite, who popped up today to ask whether the House would be given an opportunity to talk over the increase in Kent's stipend.

MacDonald's answer was laconic. "No," he said, "not at all."

Wilfrid Paling, another Labor member, then wanted to know whether the $125,000 Kent will receive would "be taken into account by unemployment committees when assessing the needs of the unemployed."

MacDonald sat down without deigning to reply.

Meanwhile, Princess Marina was up early to find that the thick fog which marred her return to London yesterday had given way to bright sunshine.

The princess, free of engagements because of the strain of the royal welcome this city gave her, spent the day quietly, unpacking the trousseau she acquired in Paris.

Incidentally, she paid customs duties on the garments.

The pretty princess did not leave Buckingham Palace until late in the afternoon, when she went with King George, Queen Mary and her fiance to inspect the wedding presents already sent the royal couple.

Tobacco Men Plan Meetings

Benefits of Cooperative Packing to Be Pictured to Growers.

The advantages of constructing cooperative tobacco packing houses in Prince Georges County will be explained to growers at mass meetings to be held at Brandywine and Upper Marlboro, it was announced yesterday by P. E. Clark, county agent.

The first meeting will be held at the Brandywine High School, Monday, December 3, at 8 p. m. Another will be held at the courthouse at Upper Marlboro, Wednesday, December 5, at 8 p. m.

The gathering will be addressed by P. D. Brown, tobacco specialist of Maryland, and John Lyon, who has successfully managed a tobacco coopertaive packing house in Charles County for two years.

A committee has been appointed to look into the possibility of constructing the packing houses. Agriculturists point out that farmers will be able to collect larger amounts for their tobacco through cooperative packing systems.

At present small growers are obliged to mix the grades of tobacco, which lowers the price. With the packing houses, each grade of tobacco will be combined in separate hogsheads after the correct weight of each grower's share is recorded.

Slayer Loses Plea For Second Trial

Court Holds Selby Was Not 'Too Drunk.'

Frederick, Md., Nov. 22 (AP).—A motion for a new trial for Emory E. Selby, of Brunswick, Md., who a month ago was convicted by a circuit court jury of first-degree murder, today was overruled by Associate Judges Arthur D. Willard and Charles W. Woodward.

In announcing the decision, Judge Willard said the court held Selby was not too intoxicated at the time of the murder August 29 to "form intent" for committing it. He sentenced Selby to life imprisonment in the State penitentiary.

Death Claims E. A. Behrend

Son of Amnon and Sara Behrend, he was education in the public schools here. He was a member of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Survivors are his wife, Mrs. Emma M. Behrend; three sisters, Mrs. Levi H. David, Mrs. Edward Heidingsfeld and Mrs. Richard Bonwit, and one brother, Rudolph B. Behrend, all of Washington.

D. C. Zoo Houses Only Bushmaster Left in Captivity

"Positively, lade-ee-zz and gentlemen, the only one in captivity."

The barker's spiel may well be applied now to the Washington zoo's bushmaster. Yesterday the bushmaster in the Bronx zoo died, giving the local claimant sole possession of the distinction.

Last September, Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars, famous authority on reptiles and curator of that branch of the Bronx Zoo, brought the prized specimen into his notable collection. It refused to eat, which, however, is not unusual for bushmasters.

Deadly and fast in their native haunts, they are without appetite and sluggish in captivity.

Dr. Ditmars finally resorted to forced feeding. The snake shed its skin and all seemed to be going well. But yesterday it died of pneumonia induced by a parasitic infection, Dr. Ditmars was quoted as saying in an Associated Press dispatch.

Dr. William M. Mann, director of the Washington zoo, received his bushmaster about six weeks ago. Shipped here from Trinidad, it was presented to the collection by Russell M. Arundel, secretary to Senator Metcalf, of Rhode Island. Now the only one in captivity anywhere in the world, the reptile has followed the tradition of its kind by refusing to eat since being caged. Dr. Mann has persistently refrained from forced feeding, believing more harm than good results from that practice.

For more than a week he has been expecting the bushmaster to shed its skin for a new and more brilliantly colored suit. When that occurs, he reiterated last night, he hopes the distinguished guest will have an appetite, and that it will decide to shatter precedent by living on indefinitely.

G. E. Strobel Funeral Today

City's Oldest Mason in Service to Be Buried Today.

Funeral services for George Eberhardt Strobel, 89, the District's oldest Mason in point of service, who died Tuesday at Sibley Hospital after a brief illness, will be held at Gawler's undertaking establishment today at 2 p. m., with Masonic rites. Burial will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Last month Mr. Strobel, who lived at 523 Seventh street northeast, was presented with a medal by Good Hope Lodge, No. 20, in recognition of 66 years of continuous membership.

A native of Washington, Mr. Strobel was educated in the public schools, and for many years operated a stove and tinning business on Pennsylvania avenue, between Seventeenth and Eighteenth streets. For scholastic efficiency, he received a medal as a boy from the hands of President Pierce. During the Civil War he served for a time with the Northern armies.

Mr. Strobel, who, in addition to his other fraternal activities, was a member of the Washington Commandery of Knights Templar, is survived by three sons, George E. Strobel, of Baltimore; William H. Strobel, of Cabin John, and Irving E. Strobel, of Washington, and two daughters, Mrs. Mary E. Ashford, of Highland Park, Va., and Miss Louise E. Strobel, of Washington.

Hagerstown Hits Cost of Primary

Every Vote in the Elections Comes to $1.70.

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 22 (Spl.). Sentiment apparently is crystallizing here against the primary, as a result of estimates made yesterday by the board of county commissioners, which revealed that every vote cast in the recent primary and in the election cost the taxpayers $1.70.

The primary and election in Washington County cost approximately $35,000, with 21,000 votes being cast.

This sum did not include the thousands of dollars spent by both parties as a unit and also by the candidates themselves.

Two Transients Jailed in Row At Quarters

Reform Leaders Beaten, Told to Ban Protest Gatherings.

Transient ranks were split by open warfare yesterday, as police and the district attorney's office intervened to avert further disorders.

Two men, registered under local emergency relief, were arrested after allegedly attacking members of the transient grievance committee in their quarters at 638 D street northwest.

Lewis B. Smith, leader of a transient "reform" movement, and Henry Clay, committee member, told police they were asleep when two men, posing as newspaper reporters, entered the room. One of the men, it was reported, threatened to kill Smith and struck him several times. His companion shoved Clay to the floor when the latter attempted to leave.

Warrants Issued.

Warrants against the men were issued by Assistant District Attorney Karl Kindleberger. They were arrested by Detective Sergts. J. O. Patton and W. T. Murphy, of the Crime Prevention Bureau.

Booked at police headquarters on assault charges, the men said they were George Williams, 27, of the Transient Bureau, and Arthur L. Fountain, 37, of the 2100 block of G street northwest.

Fountain, according to Smith, threatened to kill any committeeman who spoke against Arthur S. Rosichan, director of the Transient Bureau.

Smith said he was dragged from bed, struck several times and warned "not to hold another mass meeting in Washington." Several other transients in the room were also hit, police were told.

Personal Bond Take.

Meanwhile, another transient, arrested Wednesday night at a mass meeting in the Pythian Temple, Twelfth and U streets northwest, was released on his personal bond in Police Court yesterday.

Charged with disorderly conduct, Jack Greenberg, 22, told Judge Given he had been promised admittance to a CCC camp, and if jailed would lose his chance. Greenberg was ousted by the transient committee after bureau officials charged he was a "Red."

False Tax List Charge Studied

Peery Sifts Accusation Against Northampton County Treasurer.

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (AP). The charge that E. V. Downs, Northampton County treasurer made improper poll tax entries "for political reasons" made by State Auditor McCarthy Downs today was receiving Gov. Peery's attention, as he scrutinized the law on the subject.

Legal experts said the application of the law in this respect was general and ambiguous.

The treasurer was accused by the auditor of having illegally certified the payment of poll taxes in 583 instances over the past three years, and then later listed the same persons as delinquent in payment of the same tax.

One question which Gov. Peery was studying was whether this involved actual revenue loss.

Shenandoah Court Drops 300 Cases

Removal Order Issued by Judge Williams.

Woodstock, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Judge Phillip Williams in Shenandoah County Circuit Court here has directed Clerk Loy J. Coffman to drop from the chancery docket of the court over 300 cases which have been docketed for over two years and no action has been taken, except requests for continuances, during this period. The order becomes effective Saturday, following notices heretofore sent out to attorneys and litigants of such action.

Under the Virginia statutes the cases may be reinstated within a year from the date or order. There are 700 law, chancery and criminal cases on the current dockets of the court, many of them carried over for a long number of years.

The criminal docket, which will be materially reduced at the January term of court, is the smallest in years, and the majority of the cases are on appeal from justices' courts.

A Living Issue.

On the page opposite today, Mr. Elliott Thurston considers the diplomatic advantages which might accrue from American membership in the League of Nations, in the event of Japanese repudiation of the naval treaty. But if the Department of State should advance arguments in favor of such diplomacy, what reception would they receive at the hands of the electorate 14 years after President Harding somewhat prematurely announced that the league was "scrapped" in 1920?

Mr. Francis Russell, of Boston, writing in The Post last week, reported preliminary results of the referendum that appeared on the Massachusetts ballot in 36 representative districts, on November 6. While that chill Commonwealth can not be taken as a national yardstick, the fact that it is the home of Representative Tinkham; the fact that Senator Lodge issued his ultimata from the rockribbed shores of Nahant, and the fact that its large Irish population was much worked up over Article X make the final analysis of this vote worth examination.

Some 217,000 citizens took time to mark their ballots. Of these over 135,000 favored "full cooperation and membership in the League of Nations." Slightly less than 82,000 were opposed. Thus a fraction over 62 per cent of the individuals who voted were pro-league. The proposal, however, was defeated in only 4 of the 115 cities and towns where the referendum was held.

It may be argued that a total vote of 217,000, in a limited number of constituencies, is not sufficiently large to judge by. But when one considers that the districts voting ranged from industrial towns such as Republican Quincy (11,000 for, 7,000 against) to rural centers such as Great Barrington (853 for, 468 against) the trend is not to be ignored.

It is of real significance that in an election when vital domestic and local issues crowded the limelight, completely overshadowing the "gesture vote," there could be found 217,000 voters troubling themselves to reflect on what might seem a purely academic question. The inference is that the issue is not as academic as is sometimes suggested.

Touch Of Realism.

Editors don't always make news. But Henry Goddard Leach, who directs the destinies of The Forum, made it in New York the other evening. Came dusk, as the movies used to say, and Mr. Leach banged the last period to what newspapermen would familiarly refer to as a powerful piece. His editorial was a lament against the prevalence of crime in a supposedly civilized country.

Walking home through Central Park, Mr. Leach was set upon by two thugs. Could it have been that they had some evil divination of what he had been about, and were seeking revenge? So it appears, for what other reason had they? Certainly the assailants could not have expected so rich a haul as $40 from an editor!

Few writers, engaged in commenting upon the evils of their fellow men, have the truth of their sayings so strikingly reinforced. From now on whatever the editorial columns of The Forum have to report about crime will have the benefit of a painful association with the underworld which they would expose. Mr. Leach from his parkside experience can give a touch of realism to fulminations upon what hitherto may have seemed to him a somewhat academic problem.

A Slap On The Wrist.

The extent to which the responsibilities of the Postoffice Department are thrown directly upon President Roosevelt is indicated by his executive order placing the postmastership of New York City under civil service regulations. Prior to the last session of Congress the President instructed Postmaster General Farley to prepare legislation bringing all first, second and third class postmasters under the merit system. Apparently Mr. Farley thought that was a swell joke. When Congress adjourned without considering the issue, he laughingly told newspaper men that the bill he had been instructed to draft had been permitted to "die a natural death."

Now the President is being so bold as to revert to his original objective by issuing executive orders. Albert Goldman was named acting postmaster of New York three months ago in accordance with the custom of distributing such positions as political rewards. But Mr. Roosevelt has decided that this position should go to one of the three candidates who obtain from the Civil Service Commission the highest ratings as to education, business experience and fitness. There seems to be a rather clear implication that the President does not care to rely upon the judgment of the Postmaster General, who is also chairman of the Democratic National Committee and national committeeman from New York, in making such an important assignment.

Considering Mr. Farley's candid indorsement of the spoils system, this lopping off of patronage in his home State has the appearance of a slap on the wrist from the White House. It is well known that the President and the Postmaster General do not see eye to eye on the subject. The astonishing thing is that the breach between them has not yet culminated in a spread-the-work movement in the Cabinet.

The Future NRA.

Donald R. Richberg's plans for a permanent NRA, as now being outlined, mark a great advance over the groping experiments and inconsistent policies which characterized the administration of the temporary law. The new blue eagle executive is an economic realist with an unusually keen appreciation of the infinite variety and bewildering complexity of industrial society. Consequently, he understands that flexibility is the first condition of successful code making. Without it industrial self-discipline becomes an empty phrase, because effective organization demands speedy adaptation to constantly changing conditions.

It is Mr. Richberg's desire to make the permanent recovery legislation helpful and workable. This aim he seeks to forward by emphasizing a few general principles that should govern the relationship both between competing industrial units and between labor and capital. Consequently, he does not sympathize with such arbitrary objectives as a universal 30-hour week, but he does strongly indorse the fundamental principle set forth in section 7 (a) of the recovery act. The terms and conditions of employment in modern business, he says, "should be worked out by collective bargaining between an employer and the duly authorized representatives of his employes."

The practical application of this principle is likely in the future, as heretofore, to lead to misunderstanding and conflict. But obstacles to a just and effective enforcement of collective bargaining provisions will be much less formidable if capital and labor are operating under a governmental leadership that offers positive advantages to both sides. Mr. Richberg, therefore, judiciously emphasizes the benefits to employers of dealing with responsible groups of workers, while reiterating the importance of safeguarding labor against coercion from fellow workers, as well as from employers.

If the NRA is revamped along the lines recommended both labor and capital will have a real stake in the preservation of the new system; hence a greater incentive to cooperate with each other. To capital, Mr. Richberg holds out a hope of liberalization of the antitrust laws in order to prevent dishonest business practices and unfair competition. Wisely, he does not seek to translate these objectives into precise declarations of what can or can not be done, except to register objections to price fixing. The liberal interchange of economic information which he approves, however, would forward a certain amount of tacit price fixing. Moreover, since the proposed National Code Administration would be empowered to authorize concerted action within a "twilight zone," it could presumably allow some relaxation of prohibitions of this sort.

On the other hand, labor would be offered minimum-wage and maximum-hours guarantees without being encouraged to make demands beyond the ability of industry to grant. In short, the program sketched by the head of the NRA is thoughtful, convincing and well balanced, providing for a rational and practicable approach to problems that the present administrators of the recovery act have inherited from the chaotic Johnson regime.

No Motive For Change.

Some members of Congress are inclined to regard the District of Columbia as an experimental farm. Whenever a new idea is in the wind some Representative or Senator is almost certain to suggest that it be tried out in Washington. Apparently in this attitude of mind Senator McCarran suggests that the District should take over the local public utilities for municipal ownership and operation.

The Senator thinks "the National Capital would be an ideal city to try public ownership of its utilities." In other words, he seems to be chiefly interested in establishing another "yardstick" to supplement the experiments in the Tennessee Valley. But the very character of the yardstick argument makes it advisable to postpone a local movement for public ownership of utilities until more experience has been garnered in that line.

The way in which Congress now manages the financial affairs of the District gives small encouragement for municipal ownership and operation of utilities. There is grave danger that under the McCarran plan the utility plants serving Washington would become a plaything in the hands of those politicians who take delight in sabotaging District enterprises. If utility rates here were exorbitant, and the city faced an acute problem of utility regulation, the bill proposed by Senator McCarran might be worthy of serious consideration. But with an alert and efficient Public Utilities Commission on the job, the possible economic gains of municipal ownership are clearly overshadowed by the political disadvantages.

Ten years ago residents of the District were paying a base rate of 8 cents per kilowatt hour for electricity. That rate has been gradually reduced to the present charge of 3.9 cents. Because of the sliding-scale arrangement worked out by the P. U. C., under which surplus profits are used to lower rates, Washington acquires its power cheaper than most American cities. Other utility charges here compare favorably with the national average.

This enviable record automatically puts upon the advocates of public ownership the burden of proof that such a course would redound to the benefit of local consumers and taxpayers.

A Conflict Of Principles.

Even without publicity on the subject, it could be no secret in Washington that George N. Peek, foreign trade adviser to the President, long has been at odds with Secretary Hull over the methods to be adopted in stimulating our foreign trade. It had been hoped that the passage of time would eliminate these differences of opinion. But that hope does not grow stronger.

The Secretary of State is evidently determined to preserve the principle of most-favored-nation treatment in negotiating reciprocal trade agreements. Mr. Peek seems to indorse a bargaining policy which would enable the United States to make exclusive concessions in return for special tariff favors. Such a policy would, of course, necessitate abandonment of the principle of according equal treatment to all.

The conflict of opinion, however, is deeper than one of method. It involves the question as to whether international trade is to become progressively less restricted, or is to be subjected to an increasing number of obstructions. Secretary Hull has made it very clear that he is working to effect a gradual all-round reduction of tariff barriers, instead of merely trying to secure special favors for American goods at the expense of other countries. Mr. Peek, on the other hand, apparently wants the United States to follow the example of countries that set up special tariff rates for bargaining purposes, fix low prices for exported goods, and rely upon quotas to restrict imports.

While the United States might temporarily improve its present bargaining position by such means, it is evident that the policy would in the long run intensify the present strangulation of foreign trade. Clever devices adopted by a country to strengthen its own position are almost invariably copied by others, with the result that all international trade suffers. The Secretary of State, therefore, is opposed to a method of bargaining which he considers to be short-sighted and suicidal.

Secretary Hull is the responsible official in control of our tariff negotiations with other countries. He is following a carefully planned method of approach in advancing this policy. It would be anomalous, to say the least, if his work should be hampered from within the Administration by official advocacy of plans that are fundamentally incompatible with the objectives sought by the Department of State.

Inadequate Defense.

Members of the Civil Service Commission are obviously perturbed by the criticism resulting from the prospective dismissal of 900 civil service employes in the alcohol tax unit of the Treasury. For the most part this widespread censure is aimed at Congress, and not at the Civil Service Commission. But it is apparent that the examining agency has leaned backward to carry out the arbitrary purposes of an amendment surreptitiously written into law.

Commissioner White makes the point that the Civil Service Commission has long been using general intelligence tests, as applied in this case, "with the best of results." In his judgment the "general intelligence test is one of the best methods of securing highly qualified Government employes." He overlooks the fact that this particular examination served not to secure but to dismiss employes who, through previous appraisal of their mental capacity, had already established their competence.

No doubt the general intelligence test is a useful means of selecting the most alert applicants from the vast numbers who apply for Government positions. In such cases, as Dr. White points out, the test works best when supplemented by definite experience requirements. But it is certainly not a satisfactory way of determining whether those selected through the merit system, and trained for special work, should continue to hold their jobs. Used after appointment, the general intelligence test may easily become a tricky means of eliminating many competent, energetic and conscientious employes.

Fair consideration of all personnel factors should give incumbents already chosen under the merit system an advantage over other applicants unfamiliar with the duties to be performed. Yet "in view of the apparent purpose of Congress," the Civil Service Commission sought to avoid "the type of examination which would afford advantage to the incumbents of the positions." The practical result is intolerable discrimination against employes whom the civil service system is supposed to protect.

The major fault, of course, lies in Congress. If the commission feels that it has been placed in a false light, it might well vindicate its position by taking the leadership of an official movement to repeal Senator McKellar's outrageous "rider."

The devil has had very little work to do since he popularized the idea that it's smart to be naughty.

Drivers' Licenses

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Having driven automobiles throughout the U. S. A. and France for the past 33 years and having read two articles in The Post of November 19, "Girl is killed, score injured in city traffic," and "A. A. A. submits plan to curb D. C. accidents," I would like to make the following suggestions in addition to the A. A. A. plan, as in my opinion, the tests for a driver's license in the District are entirely too easy.

1. Have each applicant pass a written and verbal intelligence test, i. q., such as it used in the Army and Navy and many elementary schools.

2. Require a thorough physical and mental examination, to eliminate cases of deafness, muscular paralysis (special attention to eyes), deformities, amputations, etc.

3. Installation of additional traffic lights at congested points, e. g., Seventeenth and M streets northwest.

Standing It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hold no brief for Huey or for Bilbo, but it does seem to one with a casual reading of history that the current castigation of the poor, ignorant backwoods people who send such men to the Capital, has a faintly familiar ring. Much worse was said and written of the people who gave Andrew Jackson to the Nation. If my memory serves me rightly, history says that he was called a boor, a bully, an ignoramus and, mirabile dictu—a demagogue. The people who sent him to represent them were assigned to an inferior class of civilization.

We shall all have to be patient and stand it. We can take it. We have taken it.

I reckon we will just have to plod along and continue to furnish the country with its Washingtons, its Lincolns, its Lees, its John Marshalls, its Jacksons, its Wilsons, its Jesse Joneses, its Bob Joneses, its 'Bama Team (the Stars fell on Alabama, you know), its Ty Cobbs, its Dizzy Deans, its Grace Moores—Oh! shucks, I'll just skip all the rest and finish up with its Roosevelts. Yes, indeed! Teddy was one-half Southern and the other half Dutch. Franklin, you know, stayed a long time in Georgia before we sent him to Washington to teach the country its A, B, C's.

As I say, we are a patient and long-suffering people, and we turn the other cheek and forgive the abuse. There is just one thing, however, that we can not forgive. "Never! No never!" That one thing is Southern dialogue, written by a "damyanky." I hope that it is not necessary for me to explain that in 1934 the above term is used as a term of affection rather than one of reprobation.

Meeting a Need.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The nursery school of the recently established Northwest Settlement House could not be immediately opened. An occupancy permit had to be granted before the beginning of all activities. This required the construction of a fire-escape. The accomplishment of this provision with a budget not yet entirely reached presented a problem. The Community Chest appropriated the necessary sum.

Traffic Myths.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few thoughts occur to me in connection with Traffic Director Van Duzer's report showing the chief causes of accidents. In the order of their importance, he lists the causes of accidents as follows:

1. Reckless driving, 20 per cent.
2. Speeding, 18 per cent.
3. Failure to exercise proper care at intersections, 18 per cent.
4. Lack of care in approaching pedestrians or street obstructions, 13 per cent.
5. Intoxication, 4 per cent.

No doubt the Traffic Department will use these findings to support its argument against increase of the obsolete speed limit in the District. So long as Mr. Van Duzer is able to trace 18 per cent of all accidents to speeding, there will be plenty of sophists to say that a speed limit of say 30 miles per hour would be unsafe. But these figures really do not mean much unless they are examined in detail.

It is appropriate to ask: What constitutes speeding? Every one knows that excessive speeds (50 miles per hour, for example) can not be traveled in a municipal area without endangering the public. On the other hand, it is absurd in this day of four-wheel brakes to classify travel at the rate of 30 or 35 miles per hour as speeding. When viewed from this angle it can be readily seen that the traffic director's analysis of the accident records does not bear directly upon the issue recently raised by United States Attorney Garnett.

It is popular, also, these days to blame repeal of the eighteenth amendment for many accidents. Mr. Van Duzer's report indicates that intoxicated drivers are not a major factor in our traffic safety problem. It looks as if the authorities who are supposed to devise ways and means of curtailing slaughter by automobiles are looking for a scapegoat and the prohibitionists are making a last effort to avoid complete oblivion.

"No Coalition."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Under present political and economic conditions the Republican Party can not afford to form a coalition with the Democratic majority in Congress as suggested by Senator Vandenberg, of Michigan. Impartial observers foresee that the "New Deal," as it is called, is fraught with dangers, any one of which may precipitate a situation not pleasant to contemplate. Republican Party leaders should take no such risk by joining forces with a party now jubilant over its recent victory, but without sufficient horse sense to perceive what the future may bring forth.

Senator Hastings, of Delaware, and other clear-visioned Republican Party leaders are right in their attitude toward this coalition matter. Let the slogan of the Republican Party be: "We'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

American Pageant.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The history teachers of Eastern High School wish to register with you their appreciation and pleasure in your publication in the Sunday papers of the photogravures from the Pageant of America. While we have a set of the books from which the pictures are taken in our library at school, we find the replicas in The Post very useful for illustrative material in the American history classes and we are hoping that the students may wish to preserve them for scrapbooks and future use.

The Futility of Spelling.

Here comes an Englishman now who calls down curses upon the head of Samuel Johnson because he started the fashion of making dictionaries, "and so standardized spelling that it no longer offers any novelty." There was fun about reading in the days of incunabula, when no two words on a printed page were spelled alike, unless it happened to be one of those short and ugly ones which even an illiterate man couldn't spell wrong. Up to the crowning of Queen Victoria English spelling was pretty much a go as you please affair; is was, as Sam Weller remarked to the judge in the famous case of Bardell vs. Pickwick, largely a matter of taste. There are nine different ways to spell "perceive" and "relieve" and "bereave" without changing the sound of the vowel combinations in them. If the haughty lexicographers had not made it incumbent upon us to spell each of them in a purely arbitrary way we could vary them at our pleasure, as we even now write either "plough" or "plow," putting down the first spelling that comes into our heads. "Siege" and "seize" are two words over which even pedagogues come a cropper, perhaps because they are not used as frequently as "separate" and "fulfill" and "wilfulness"——or is it "willfullness?" or "willfulness?"

There are certain words, to be sure, that are beyond all dictionaries—words about whose spelling England and America have agreed to disagree. One of them is "endeavor" and another is "savor." We write "connection," England spells it "connexion." In England an automobile tire is a 'tyre," but in general the dictionaries hold us to standards which we can not ignore without reproach. Even the noblest peer in the House of Lords is now expected to spell by the book. In the days of the four Georges it was not necessary. One was an aristocrat by claims of long descent and the guinea's stamp, not by virtue of scholarship. Correct spelling was looked upon with disdain, as an accomplishment like the expert polishing of boots, an excellent quality in menials. It might well be left to Grub-street hacks and starveling poets like Goldsmith and Burns. And some trace of that notion has survived to a very recent day. The present Prince of Wales when a boy was very bad at spelling and his mother worried about it, but Lord Esher consoled her by remarking that he was remarkably bright otherwise, so that it wasn't very important. We must thank the dictionary-makers, therefore, for raising up a new aristocracy of letters. They have made correct spelling a criterion of good breeding, and nowadays even a marquis must mind his p's and q's and bow to the lexicon lest he become the butt of every penny-a-liner in the kingdom.

The Post Impressionist

Please Don't Remember!

Post Office, Friday.

FINDING fault with William Lyon Phelps is a pleasure. It is a pleasure because it is a rarity; he has such a way of being right!

But, the other day, he slipped. In that capable column of his on our cultural "Page Opposite" (journalese for "Page Following the Editorial Page"), this former Lampson professor of English at Yale implied that Congressman Thomas Dunn English was pleased when, a half-century after his poem "Ben Bolt" had been buried, it was revived to posthumous popularity by the organ-toned voice of Trilby and the wand of magician-maestro Svengali.

The fact is that this resurrection nearly broke the literary lawmaker's heart.

Erato, the Lyric Muse, certainly dozed when English, aged 23, wrote that ballad. He was poor. The New York Mirror—not quite the New York Mirror of today!—paid $10 apiece for sentimental poems. English composed this one deliberately to catch one of the Mirror ten-spots.

He caught it—and more than he expected.

The thing would soon have been lost to sight—and ear—had it not been read by a theatrical singer named Nelson Kneass, who needed a new song. He adapted "a melancholy German melody" to the words, assaying his public "with fiendish accuracy." The result inundated America and swept a tidal wave over the Atlantic, across the British Isles. It earned its publishers some $60,000—whereof, however, not a cent reached its composer or author.

The latter was no great artist, but did become a serious one. With huge industry, he was beginning that list of "a dozen novels, 50 plays and perhaps 1,000 poems"—including "The Charge at the Ford," a really good piece of verse—upon which he hoped to build a substantial literary reputation.

He detested Ben, but could not renounce him. And here was doggerel Ben so wildly loved that nobody would think of his father as anything except the author of Ben's being!

Nevertheless, not even the worst songs live forever—though some of them return. English devoted all his leisure, for 50 years, to making readers comprehend that "Ben Bolt" was no fair criterion for his work. At last that piece did disappear.

The rescued man had become a lawyer in unpoetic New Jersey, was even elected to Congress.

Then, in 1894—and, we understand, while he was right here in Washington—an at first faint but fearsome sound came back across the ocean. Soon it "grew into a shout."

It was the ghost of Ben, more vociferous than in life:

"Don't you remember sweet Alice?" Everybody read "Trilby" as a serial in Harper's Magazine—everybody read the novel in book form, for a generation—every reader sang that cursed song!

"Don't you remember"—Trilby? By Du Maurier?

She was—as Burton Stevenson puts it in his excellent book on "Famous Single Poems"—"a light-hearted daughter of the (Paris Latin) Quarter, with all the virtues but one." And she was the child of old O'Ferrall, who also "had all the virtues but one: he was a drunkard."

In the novel, after listening unmoved to the playing of Schubert's "Rosemonde," Trilby asks her three warmest admirers: "Do you know 'Ben Bolt'?" When they say they don't, she sings it—terribly until Svengali hypnotizes her, wonderfully thereafter. And "Ben Bolt," once more excruciatingly rendered, is her swan-song when she fatally escapes the magician's toils:

"That unsophisicated little song," says Du Maurier, "has touched many simple British hearts that don't know any better . . ."

"It's the only song I know," Trilby explains. "My father used to sing it . . . when he felt jolly after hot rum and water. It used to make people cry; he used to cry over it himself. I never do."

But its author cried—when Trilby restored it. He went to his grave in 1902, bowed down by the cruel knowledge that "Ben Bolt" survived him.

Every artist, big or little, sometimes creates a work for which he later prays forgetfulness. There was Composer MacDowell, now best known for that "Wild Rose," which his wife rescued from the wastebasket whereto he had wisely committed it. Burton Stevenson, for his part, recalls how draftsman-novelist Du Maurier's own most widely circulated drawing adorned the label of a table-water—how Edwin Arnold once wrote verses to advertise a beef-extract.

Patricide "Ben Bolt," via "Trilby," killed—well, just about killed—Thomas Dunn English.

Church Issue Again Arises To Vex Mexico

Anticlericalism Smoke-screen to Hide Economic Changes Later.

(Special Correspondence of The Post.)

New York.

THE Government of Mexico has trained its revolutionary guns on the schools, churches and clergy of Aztec-land again and created another situation similar to that of 1926 which Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow helped to solve. Now, as then, the Catholic world in general, and Mexican Catholics in particular, have protested.

Joining in the protestations this time are many students who have strenuously objected to the transformation of the schools and universities of Mexico into centers of Socialist propaganda. Swelling the body of protestants are many Indians and other humble folk who resent having the spiritual ministrations of the church curtailed by the ousting of clerics and the closing of churches. For its part the Mexican Government is putting into practice its six-year program and acting in accordance with its revolutionary beliefs.

One of the most ingenious explanations of this revival of anticlericalism and of educational socialism is that offered by a brilliant writer, authority on Mexico and an anthropologist, Dr. Anita Brenner. It is her contention that Mexico is seeking, in an atmosphere sui generis, to drive in span socialism and capitalism in order to complete a social revolution which began in 1910, though it has roots which go back to the very conquest of Mexico. On the one hand, the leaders of revolutionary Mexico must satisfy the revolutionary ideals of the agrarian, nationalist and socialist elements at home; and on the other, continue to attract capital from abroad to carry on the program of industrialization and economic recovery and to insure conditions within Mexico where capital can feel secure.

IN order to reconcile these irreconcilable forces and isms, Dr. Brenner believes, the Mexican government has deliberately turned its guns on two cultural institutions—the schools and the church. It is suggested that by this method the government can assure its revolutionary constituents that its ideals still remain essentially revolutionary and still not disturb too much the local and foreign capitalists who would be frightened away by a program of economic radicalism.

Education and religion will be nationalized and socialized now, but the underlying economic situation will not be touched, at least, openly, until a riper time. Mexico is in an enviable economic position just for the moment and it is apparently the desire of many Mexicans not to brake the processes of recovery by revolutionary activity.

This ingenious notion of Dr. Brenner may explain the excesses to which the present anticlerical campaign has gone. The previous attacks on the church were inspired by the economic, political, agrarian and social power of the clergy and of the church. These powers and privileges derived from colonial times had enmeshed the church in many of the lay functions of the state and in the Mexican maze it was obvious that an unraveling process must eventually take place.

Early in the nineteenth century the church, the military and the landed aristocrats were united by their common ownership of huge landed estates, by family ties and by a common loyalty to an economic and political system which to them was enormously profitable. They combined to maintain governments in power which were obedient to their orders and mindful of their interests. On the outside were the masses of Mexicans, but, beginning in the 1850's, a determined effort was made to strip the church of all save its spiritual powers and functions.

UNDER Porfirio Diaz, however, many of these efforts petered out. When the revolution broke out in 1910 the three groups were still strong, if not stronger, because they were buttressed by foreign capital. The new Mexico has sought by every means to curb these three institutions. The army has been pretty much "republicanized" and "revolutionized." Timid attempts have been made to break up the landed estates and to give the Indian land. Although this program has not proceeded far enough to satisfy the landless the grip of the landed on the government has been considerably loosened. The constitution of 1917, and subsequent laws, have stripped the church of much of its economic and educational power and today it has only a shred of the influence it exercised in other times. Now it seems that the government is determined to strip it even of its spiritual power as well.

In the realm of education the present leaders of Mexico appear to be moving in the same direction. Mexico has inaugurated a splendid system of rural schools, many excellent teachers' training centers and has reaped a harvest far greater than a decrease in the illiteracy of its people. Yesterday the state was content to remove clerical influence in the schools and to laicize education. Today, however, it is transforming the schools, wherever it can, into centers of socialist teaching rather than into schools where objective and unbiased disciplines are taught.

Both of these recent measures of the Mexican government have run into the opposition of groups which a few years ago were looked upon as radical. They perhaps perceive that the purpose of the government is to use these policies and practices as smokescreens to hide a true situation. They see, perhaps, that these measures are artificial and unnatural, that they are not the inevitable results of the long-run trends. If these observers are correct in their interpretations of the real situation in Mexico it can be seen that the Mexican government is opening itself to more than criticism.

BUT, again, as Dr. Brenner points out, these and all other Mexican political, diplomatic, social and economic movements must be read in the light of the underlying racial and cultural situation. It is a situation which does not permit of consistency and uniformity and steadfastness in either policies or practices and is a situation which exists in many other Latin American nations.

In Mexico today is a condition somewhat similar to that of Europe after the so-called fall of Rome. It took Europe more than a thousand years to evolve a new culture pattern out of the many elements which it had to absorb after the "invasion" of the Barbarians, Huns and Moors. And some of the legacies of the Middle Ages have not been fully liquidated in Europe, even today.

The opposition of the Mestizo-Indian leaders of the new Mexico to clerical control and influence, to European feudal land barons and institutions is, at bottom, an expression of cultural and racial conflicts which only time can permanently solve.

Mexican students who fought for schools free from clerical control will hardly acquiesce to schools controlled by the state for the indoctrination of another ism; Indians, women and other devout Catholics or "mystics" will hardly look with favor upon a government which closes the churches and other fountains of spiritual and mystical strength and comfort. To strip the church of its economic and political power is one thing, to deprive it of its spiritual functions is another.

Along the Potomac

A Real Project.

ONE of the most interesting projects that the PWA is pursuing with a view of breaking the depression is Mr. Blackwell Smith, the $12,000-a-year, 28-year-old head of the NRA's legal division. About all the information that one can get on him at the NRA is that he came there from the New York City law firm of Cotton, Franklin, Gordon and Wright, and that he received his A. B. from Pomona College and his LL. B. from Columbia. Manifestly, being now only 28 years old, he could not have been associated with the New York law firm or been engaged in the practice of law very long.

BARGERON

He might be called project B that the PWA is pursuing in the NRA's legal division, Mr. Donald Richberg holding onto the title of NRA general counsel, at a salary of $12,000 a year also, in order that he can go about his coordinating.

* * * *

Revelation of some of the salaries at the NRA, in fact, serves to put the whole PWA building program in a different light and should make Congress more sympathetic to Mr. Ickes' probable request for more funds. There had been considerable wonder over reports that he would probably ask for more money in view of what had been considered his lack of success in getting the money to work that he already had. All of the $3,300,000,000 he had has been allocated, but less than $2,000,000,000 is at work.

It develops, however, that while he may have had trouble in getting the allocations to the States, municipalities, etc., to work, he has at least been singularly successful with his projects in the NRA. All of the employes of the NRA are his projects, of course, because the money for their salaries comes from the celebrated Public Works fund.

The youthful Mr. Smith at $12,000 a year is not alone, but he is typical of the success of the PWA program, insofar as the NRA is concerned. And nowhere else is the spirit of the PWA program more appreciated. Only yesterday the NRA announced the creation of more regional boards manned by the best talent available, which should result in perhaps a million more dollars of public buildngs funds being put to work.

In connection with the typical case of Mr. Smith no consideration was given as to whether it is a self-liquidating project or not. The ruling motive here is believed to have been the man-hours of work created. In this light his youth was, of course, a great asset.

Obviously, more man-hours of work are created by taking a 27-year-old fellow for this $12,000 project than a man older and more experienced. That is to say, Mr. Smith will quite likely live longer than a man of 40 or 50. And in addition to the man-hours of work created directly there are the indirect man-hours.

Mr. Smith, we may assume, spends his $12,000 when he gets it, or rather he puts it in the bank. That is how it goes—he puts it in the bank. A man comes to the bank and asks for a loan of $12,000 and the bank says: "Fine, we will give you the $12,000 that Mr. Smith has just deposited." But it doesn't actually give the borrower this $12,000. It gives him a credit for that much and keeps the $12,000. Or we should say that the bank didn't even get the $12,000 in the first place. It got a check drawn on Mr. Ickes' public works fund.

It has been estimated that in this way the $12,000 turns over ten times. The original PWA Smith project of $12,000 has now been expanded to $120,000. This is what is known as the velocity of credit.

* * * *

If the payroll of the whole NRA is ever available the progress of PWA projects will be shown in even better light. And patently there will be few in Congress with the hardihood to deny the PWA any more money. If available funds have created as many man-hours of work in NRA as they have, there is no telling how many additional man-hours can be created by additional funds. It is beginning to be apparent how the National Recovery Administration got its name.

New Faces in the Senate — — Montana's Young Jim Murray

Quiet and Soft-Spoken Banker Has Pioneer Stock.

Helena, Mont.

ONE bright morning, when the twentieth century was young, a tall, dark young fellow jumped from an overland train before the station of the hardest-boiled town in Western civilization. Long, low, gray, the station looked like a dance hall. Faded letters upon its ends proclaimed to this arrival that he was in "Butte." The young man was James E. Murray, tenderfoot, fresh from the law school of New York University, class of 1900.

Murray had come to Butte to open a law office under the wing of his millionaire uncle—James A. Murray, later known as "Old Jim," after "Young Jim" became well known. Born in Lawerence Mills, Ontario, Canada, in 1877, the young man had attended the schools at Berlin, Ontario, graduating from St. Jerome Academy there, to proceed for his law course at New York. His parents died early and his life, until he came West to join his energetic and forceful uncle, had been one of studious quiet.

He arrived in Butte at a stormy period. The Amalgamated Copper Co.—Rockefeller-owned—was coming in for the long battle with the interests of W. A. Clark and F. A. Heinze that ended nearly a quarter century later, with the death of Clark. It was a day of violent and bitter politics, of scandal and blood, and if young Murray kept himself clear and clean, he could not avoid, nonetheless, imbibing some of the atmosphere of the struggle.

The Murray interests were not directly allied with any faction. "Old Jim," reaching Butte a poor young man, when Butte consisted of a few shacks, had matched wit and hardihood with such giants as Clark and Marcus Daly and had won himself millions. The Daly interests had passed into the Amalgamated combination. But there arose soon after Fitz Augustus Heinze, shrewd and resourceful mining engineer, who almost wrested the property from the Rockefellers through control of the courts, and who left Montana with a large fortune, only to drop it in Wall street and to die soon after.

"OLD JIM" MURRAY was less spectacular than Clark or Daly and his fortune was not colossal, like theirs. But when he passed on, in 1913, mines, banks, health resorts and what not came under the management of "Young Jim." Perhaps it gives the best picture of him to say that he has preserved the estate without loss or litigation. He has never affiliated himself with any corporation, and, playing a lone hand, won respect in a quarter century of commercial warfare. An original Rugged Individualist was "Old Jim." "Young Jim," in this respect, has followed in his footsteps.

Young Murray began to attract attention as possessing a legal mind and more than wide knowledge as a young man. He was quiet and retiring, as he still is. In a town so noisy and blatant as Butte, it might have been expected he would remain in the background. Butte, however, knew its men.

"Young Jim," soft-spoken tenderfoot, who stood about and took note, made many friends. Pretty soon he was taking part, in a small way, in politics. One summer, to the amazement perhaps of himself, the Democrats nominated him for county attorney. He was elected by a large majority and could have had a second term, but refused. Some said it was because of his distaste of prosecution for capital offenses.

At all events he withdrew from politics. His aging uncle required more and more of his help. Murray operated a number of mines and several banks. The mines never had a strike and not one of the banks ever failed.

The Murrays also owned and operated a chain of health resorts. In time, the estate extended itself into California; later, into Seattle. Today, while not comparable with the huge fortunes of Clark or several of the men of the Anaconda group, it is well up in the millions.

Not that anyone would suspect, meeting the Senator-elect, that he was one of the rich men of the Northwest. He is plain, not at all given to worship of the Golden Calf. Not morose, under his silent manner there is a vein of keen satire. When aroused, he can make a whooping address. But he prefers the easy, friendly way.

MURRAY became, last spring, the logical man for nomination for the Senate through a peculiar sequence of events. Hon. John E. Erickson—"Honest John"—had been elected Governor a third time in 1932. One of the most popular men in Montana, he entered upon his third incumbency with every hope of continuing what has been described as the "golden age" of Montana politics—eight years of peaceful, honest administration. But a rift came. United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh died. A score of aspirants for appointment to the seat arose. The aging Governor was besieged by friends—and some not so friendly, in his office and in his home. He deliberated long, and then, despairing of pleasing any faction of his party, resigned. The lieutenant governor, Hon. F. H. Cooney, of Missoula, appointed Erickson to the vacant Senate seat when he assumed the Governorship himself.

A roar arose. Disappointed aspirants went home disgruntled. Judge George M. Bourquin, occupying the Federal bench in the State, said it was chicanery, and announced that he would resign and enter the battle for a Senate seat himself. Cooney, not always too happy in his policies, soon became embroiled with the Legislature, which at one time threatened to impeach him. Squabbles grew apace—over the depression, over the State liquor control act, and what not—and upon the hapless head of Erickson, as well as on that of Cooney, fell the blame, however deserved.

It became plain that Erickson, despite the love and esteem in which he still was held personally, scarcely could hope for renomination, and that if named, his defeat would be probable. Friends of Murray, long out of politics, and never a professional politician, approached him with the proposition that he run.

From the first, Murray had been a sincere admirer of President Roosevelt. He served as the first chairman of the State PWA board and its success is a monument to his unostentatious direction. Murray now entered the fight wholeheartedly for the New Deal. He toured the State and his personality won him support. When the test came on November 6, he rolled up an astounding vote.

The Senator-elect can be put down in the New Deal ranks. He sat in the convention that nominated the President and he acted as county chairman in Silver Bow County (Butte) during the campaign of 1932.

In his State policies, Murray is a strong advocate of water conservation. He favors increased Federal aid for education. It goes without saying that he has the best interests of the mining industry at heart.

Through the Murray banks, he has long been acquainted with the farmer. He swept the agricultural counties in the election. On national problems he expressed himself, in his campaign addresses, as for the New Deal, en toto and without reservation.

Mrs. Murray was Viola Horgan, one of the beauties of Butte. The daughter of a prominent merchant, she married "Young Jim" Murray in 1905. She has been known as a charming hostess for more than a quarter century and her wide popularity doubtless was an important factor in her husband's victory at the polls. Viola Horgan Murray is still a strikingly beautiful woman and she will add to the social life of the National Capital.

THE Murrays are old-fashioned. They have six sons, all husky, strapping Montana boys. Edward D., the oldest, is in the bureau of the United Press, in London; James A., the second son, is practicing law in San Francisco, Calif.; the third, Charles A., is a student in Ann Arbor; the fourth, William D., is a student in the University of Montana; the fifth, Howard A., is attending the Montana School of Mines, at Butte, and the sixth, John, in his 'teens, is a student in Christian Brothers High School, Butte. The Murrays are Roman Catholics.

The Murrays reside in a simple but handsome home in Butte—and are home bodies. When not in Butte, Murray usually is found in his health resort at Boulder Hot Springs, where he likes to play host to his old cronies—who range from miners without a dime or a job to the elite of the land. Still remarkably handsome, tall, erect and looking younger than his years, Murray is careless in dress. If seen in Boulder he would be taken for a rancher or small mining operator.

Despite his wealth, Murray is an advanced progressive of the Roosevelt school. He is one of the most approachable men in Montana public life, a trait which endeared him to newspapermen from the start. He knows news and how to give it to the other fellow—which may be why his campaign was so well reported.

Over-Emphasis?

NO game of any kind is more exciting to watch than the game of American football. The few seconds before the kickoff have a suspense that is almost unbearable. Then the ball takes its long flight toward the goalposts and the battle is joined. If it were merely the shock of powerful, heavily-built athletes coming together in collision, it would be interesting; but the real delight is in the complicated tactics of attack and defense.

When Marshal Foch was in America he saw at the Yale Bowl his first game of football. He followed every play through a pair of powerful binoculars. Toward the end of the second half, one of his aids, thinking he might be getting bored, asked him if he did not want to leave. The marshal looked up quickly and said: "Why, the game isn't over, is it?" and he remained till the sound of the final whistle.

American football is splendid training in skill, speed, cooperation and courage; it has the excitement of war, without any of its evils.

The football coaches are a fine body of men who are expert teachers. They have unrivaled opportunities for a good influence on character and temperament. Most of them certainly deserve our respect and admiration. And we must remember nowadays, with the relaxation of discipline in everything pertaining to the curriculum, with freedom from requirements of attendance on classes and the keeping of appointments, that the only part of college life where discipline is maintained is in major sports. There, at all events, individual freedom will not work. The student who "comes out" for football, rowing or hockey can not absent himself from practice or appear only when he feels like it. And to those who still believe that some discipline is good for youth, I commend our athletic sports and those who teach them.

Furthermore, with especial reference to the game of football, the preliminary season of practice should be lengthened. It is better for the young men to be together in training and in practice a month before college opens than it is for them to be almost anywhere else. And I would suggest that during this preliminary season the hours apart from exercise and drill could very profitably be spent in study. It would help to prepare the men for the autumn term and it would take their minds off the game, a double advantage.

There is nothing incompatible in an intense interest in athletics and an equally intense interest in intellectual pursuits. In the fifth century before Christ, the Athenians reached the highest stage of intellectual culture. They were so wildly excited about athletics that they always stopped whatever war was going on to permit the Olympian track meets to be held. Over-emphasis?

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall.

THE O. Henry Memorial Award short stories make their sixteenth annual bow in "Prize Stories of 1934" (Doubleday Doran, $2.50). Harry Hansen, book critic of the New York World-Telegram and of Harpers Magazine, speaks the prologue for the collection. Aiding him to select the 19 tales were Suzanne LaFollette, author of "Art in America" (a reprint of which was reveiwed in this column some months back); John Erskine (last heard from his novel, "Bachelor—of Arts" and the libretto of "Helen Retires"); and Burton Roscoe (who will be speaking up next week in his introduction to "The Smart Set Anthology").

As board of judges, the last three awarded the first prize of $300 to Louis Paul, for his story "No More Trouble for Jedwick," a tale of an escaped Negro convict, with its first scenes set just below our own Alexandria. Mr. Paul is 32, lives on Long Island, has written two novels without selling them. His winning story, astoundingly, is not only the first he has had published, but it is literally the first short story he ever wrote—and Esquire, which printed it last March, was the first magazine to which he submitted it.

Second prize of $200 went to Caroline Gordon, of Clarksville, Tenn., for her story "Old Red," a tale of that Southern huntsman, Alexander Maury, who was the hero of her last novel, "Alec Maury: Sportsman" (mentioned here on November 9). She is the wife of Allen Tate and author of the well-remembered novel, "Penhally."

A special prize of $100 for the best short story was won by William Saroyan for his famous "The Daring Young Man on the Flying Trapeze," about which I had a good deal to say on October 15. At the time we all thought it was Mr. Saroyan's first published work. Now it comes out that some stories of his appeared in an Armenian paper in Boston and one was chosen by Edward J. O'Brien for his annual collection. But they were under the pen name of Sirak Goryan.

"Prize Stories" includes tales by T. S. Stribling, William Faulkner, Erskine Caldwell, and Walter Edmonds (from whose novels Marc Connelly adapted our recent visitor in town, that jolly play "The Farmer Takes a Wife"). It strikes me that the O. Henry Award volumes now stand as the freshest and most readable of America's annual anthologies of short stories.

League Revival Seen In London Deadlock

State Department Opinion Turning to Possibility of American Entrance.

IN the face of the continuing and deepening deadlock at London, opinion in the State Department is turning more and more to the possibility of our entry into the League of Nations. Clearly, one recourse before the United States would be to accept membership in the league if the treaty structure consisting of naval limitation and the Pacific pacts is to collapse. This alternative is both more logical and more feasible at this time than ever before.

Logically, in the view of some of the State Department's authorities, the best answer we could make to Japanese intransigeance would be a decision to enter the league. Certainly if we are to associate ourselves with the rest of the world in any effort to retain a peace structure no other promising course is open. No other machinery will be left in the world. None exists for the antiwar pact. Mr. Stimson sought to erect on the basis of the antiwar pact an alternative mechanism to the league, to invoke separately the power of public opinion. But this, to a large degree, raised new dilemmas without solving any of the old ones.

This writer has never understood why the advocates of the league were willing to embrace a substitute except out of expediency. Mr. Hughes, Mr. Stimson, Mr. Hoover and others talked of completing the antiwar pact by some form of "agreement to consult." Mr. Stimson meanwhile took the position that the opportunity to consult, if not the obligation, was implicit in the antiwar treaty.

On that basis, he sought the collaboration of the other leading powers in bringing the pressure of public opinion to bear in the Orient on two occasions, first when China and Russia were at odds over the Chinese Eastern Railway, and later when Japan invaded Manchuria. But it has never been clear that this alternative machinery and procedure were preferable to, or more effective than, direct collaboration through membership in the league. The political objections to the league applied with equal force to the substitute policy, and in the opinion of many were actually increased since the nation taking the initiative—in this case the United States—exposed itself singly to the bitter resentment of the powers against which it proposed to invoke the weapon of public disapproval.

However, the entire situation has changed both abroad and, politically, at home. If the United States is to go it alone, if no effort is to be made to preserve an international peace structure, if we are to become the hermit nation against which Secretary of State Hull has so often inveighed, then the possibility of league membership deserves no consideration. If, as now seems likely, the naval limitation treaties are to go, and with them the Pacific treaties bound up with naval agreements, there is no avenue of international cooperation left open except that afforded by the league—unless we are to attempt another substitute.

Politically, the situation is so changed that the difficulties in bringing about league membership have been materially reduced if not entirely removed. Few historians will ever record that the American electorate registered a mandate against entry into the league. Every impartial observer knows that the issue has never been fairly presented to the American public. And there is abundant evidence, including the strikingly significant referendum vote in Massachusetts less than three weeks ago, that there is a tremendous and in all probability a majority opinion in this country in favor of league membership, under whatever further safeguards are considered necessary to make doubly sure that our freedom of action is in no way impaired.

Even if public opinion is unformed or confused by the peculiar demagoguery which has beset all questions of international cooperation, even on the most noncommittal basis, the fact remains that Mr. Roosevelt has what no other President ever had—a Senate so overwhelmingly at his command that the possibility of a one-third vote to block entry into the league seems improbable. In any event, he has an opportunity such as no President ever before had to face this issue, this alternative course, without the political obstruction that frustrated Mr. Wilson.

This is not intended as an argument in favor of adopting this course, but only as a necessarily all-too-brief citation of the possibilities which now exist and some of the reasons underlying the opinion in the State Department that the possibility might well be reconsidered and explored in the light of a radically changed situation internationally and at home.

If, as Dr. Charles A. Beard has emphasized, Mr. Roosevelt were to apply to the international field the same boldness and willingness to break with the old order that has characterized his domestic policy, he would in all probability bring this issue to the test which it has never yet had, and now more pressingly than ever deserves.

The Once Over

The Man Behind The Butler Plot.

Elmer Twitchell today made a full confession as being the man who thought up and directed the plot to put General Smedley D. Butler in the White House as Dictator of the United States.

* * * *

"I alone conceived the plot and worked out its details," declared Elmer. "It is only fair to the rest of the adult world to say so."

* * * *

Elmer revealed that others to be placed in power in President Roosevelt's place were Huey Long, Dr. Wirt, and Jimmy Durante.

* * * *

"My plan called for the conspirators to reach Washington by individual balloons at an hour to be determined by drawing numbers from a hat, or possibly a coat or vest. They were to hop overboard with parachutes when over the White House, land as near the lawn as possible and gain admittance to the President's chambers by sending in word that some of his Brain Trust members were ready with their resignations. I figured the President would be so delighted at this prospect that he would welcome us at once.

* * * *

"No violence was planned. We planned to seize Mr. Roosevelt, place him in a small room with Big Jim Farley, and compel him to listen to Mr. Farley's complete explanation of what caused the recent landslide. I figured Mr. Roosevelt would resign at once rather than submit to this."

* * * *

"But with Mr. Roosevelt out, wouldn't Mr. Farley attempt to grab the job?" Elmer was asked.

"We thought of that danger," he replied, "and were prepared to force Mr. Farley's resignation."

"How?"

"By notifying him he had his choice between that and putting in a full day in the Postoffice Department."

* * * *

"Go on!"

"Then we planned to demand that Mr. Douglas resign."

"He resigned long ago."

"Did he? Well we also planned to demand that Prof. Moley quit."

"He also got out long ago."

"Izzat so?" asked Elmer, clearly befuddled. "Well, you'll have to excuse me."

"Why?"

"I'll have to rewrite the whole thing," he concluded.

Why Actors Grow Gray

There's many a slip twixt the first and last scenes of a play and when the offstage guns fail to go off . . . the telephone refuses to ring . . . and absent minded property men forget to leave important suicide notes in their appointed places . . . anything may happen!

We're all used to the minor catastrophes which hound amateur productions. Little Eva, halfway to heaven on a piano wire, may become stalled in midair, or the hounds, not smelling the beefsteak on the other side of the "ice," may decline to cross the river. But when a producer has spent tens of thousands of dollars on his brain-child, he wants it to behave, and if any unexpected hobgoblins appear, it's up to the actors to carry off the scene as best they can.

County Appeals For Additional Welfare Funds

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

With funds of the Arlington County Welfare Board practically exhausted, an appeal has gone out to citizens of the county for assistance.

Activities of the board and its effectiveness in caring for relief cases will depend entirely upon the fund that is raised, Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare, said last night.

Instead of carrying on a house-to-house canvass, as in past years, the board is mailing a letter to each citizen asking that he contribute.

Contributions may be forwarded to the superintendent of public welfare at the courthouse, or to any board member.

Members of the board are Mrs. Cora Miles, chairman; Charles F. Kincheloe, Mrs. M. M. Willis, Gilbert L. Hall, Mrs. Ruth Lowell, Frank G. Campbell and Hugh J. McGrath.

With the view of establishing a central library in Arlington County, a meeting of representatives of the several communities where small libraries now are operated will be held with County Manager Roy S. Braden at the courthouse today.

At this meeting, Mr. Braden said, plans will be considered whereby a central library would be established and the smaller libraries enlarged and operated from the central library. When a definite program is adopted it will be presented to the county board for consideration.

Plans are being made for the organization of the Washington-Lee High School Glider Club, E. J. Frack, member of the faculty, announced last night.

The organization will be effected and officers elected at a meeting in the school auditorium next Tuesday. Bert Brooks, member of the Washington Glider Club, will be the instructor.

According to Mr. Frack, the club will have at least 40 charter members.

The senior class at Washington-Lee High School will sponsor a dance at the school tomorrow night. The proceeds will be applied to the fund being raised for the Blue and Gray year book.

Edgar Rice, 10, of Glencarlyn, narrowly escaped serious injury when he fell from a bus of the Arlington-Fairfax Transportation Co. yesterday.

Suspect in Slaying Faces Early Trial

Clifton Forge, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—Philip Jones, colored, charged with slaying Alice and Ellen Hill, little white girls, near his home here last Sunday, will be tried in Alleghany County Circuit Court at Covington, it was decided today.

Commonwealth's Attorney M. J. Putnam, of Clifton Forge, who had a leading part in the investigation following the finding of the children's bodies and the arrest of Jones and three other colored men, will cooperate in the prosecution with Commonwealth's Attorney C. C. Collins, of Alleghany County, in whose jurisdiction the crime was committed.

Collins said that the four prisoners now held in Henrico County Jail at Richmond will be brought to Covington for trial at a date which has not yet been set. The prosecution, however, expects to have its case ready in two weeks or less.

NRA Orders Hearing On Alleged Violation

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—John J. Corson 3d, acting State NRA compliance director, said yesterday that notification had been sent to the National Novelty & Printing Co. of Roanoke that the NRA Compliance Council will hold a hearing in Washington Friday to determine what action will be taken against it for alleged violation of the code for the punch board manufacturing industry.

The firm is charged with violating minimum wage provisions by paying approximately 40 girls at a rate of from $4 to $8 per week instead of the prescribed minimum of $13 for a 40-hour week.

Recount Pleas Filed; Answers Due by Nov. 30

Ritchie Gives Commissions Today to 3 Fusion Candidates.

Chief Judge Hammond Urner yesterday signed a rule to show cause in the petitions for recount filed in Montgomery County Circuit Court at Rockville, Md. The petitions were filed by John B. Diamond and Raleigh S. Chinn, Democratic candidates for county commissioner, and name Charles E. King and Frank H. Karn, Fusionists, as defendants.

Judge Urner set November 30 as the date on or before which the two Fusian candidates must file answers declaring why the recount should not be granted. The two Fusionists must file answers before that date or the recount will be granted by default.

The petitions for recount were filed in court Wednesday by Capt. Joseph C. Cissel and Roger Whiteford, counsel for the Democratic candidates who were unsuccessful in the official count as certified by the board of election supervisors.

Commissions Due.

Meanwhile, Gov. Albert C. Ritchie announced he would issue commissions to the three successful Fusion candidates along with other commissions today or tomorrow. This would enable the Fusion candidates to assume control of the reins of county government by Monday or Tuesday, provided of course, that no further legal action looking to the barring of the two commissioners whose election is being questioned is taken by the Democratic contenders.

Attorney General William Preston Lane, jr., had ruled that the two Fusion candidates whose election is contested should receive their commissions pending settlement of the contest, after a ruling had been requested by Gov. Ritchie.

J. Roger Spates, political agent for Judge Charles W. Woodward, successful Democratic candidate for judge of the circuit court, yesterday filed the judge's return of election expenses with the clerk of the circuit court at Rockville.

The return showed that $878.25 was spent in Judge Woodward's campaign, all of which he provided himself, and that all of the money was spent for newspaper advertising.

Sitting at Annapolis.

Judge Urner at present is sitting in the Maryland Court of Appeals at Annapolis, and probably will be tied up there for several weeks, although he may find time to take action in the recount case.

General Mix-up Impends.

Two unsuccessful Democratic candidates for seats in the House of Delegates, Dr. Llewellyn Jordan and John L. Imirie, are understood to be planning to ask a recount of their race. If the court does not act on the recount petition for the commissioners before the House of Delegates convenes in January, it is probable that that body will demand the ballots be forwarded to the House in order that the delegate race can be settled and this further will delay the commissionership decision.

A general mix-up in county affairs appears impending with the contests of several other candidates being considered to further complicate matters.

As an aftermath of the heated political campaign which preceded the election, Attorneys F. Barnard Welsh and Joseph A. Cantrel yesterday filed demurrers to the damage suits filed against James P. V. Veirs by State's Attorney Stedman Prescott and County Commissioners John B. Diamond and Robert D. Hagner in Montgomery County Circuit Court.

The suits alleged slander and each of the plaintiffs asks damages of $50,000 because of statements made by Veirs in the course of a campaign speech.

The second case was that of Buck Raines charged with felonious assault on Earl Creel, October 12 last.

Isaac Hall, who lives in an ark on Hunting Creek, reported to the Alexandria police yesterday that he had been robbed of $30. Police Sergt. Lawrence Padgett and Policeman Watkins investigated and arrested Christine Doyle, 29, giving an out-of-town address; Rosie Raines, 17, and Ray Carter, 21.

Rosie Raines was sentenced to the State industrial school for 12 months; Christine Doyle was given six months in jail, and Carter was given three months in jail or a fine of $50. The arresting officers said they recovered the money.

Hopkins Says Jobless Desire Only a Job

Boston, Nov. 22 (AP).—Opportunity and security through employment in private industry are the goal of millions of unemployed in America, Harry L. Hoqkins, Federal emergency relief administrator, said today.

Asserting there were 4,000,000 families depending on relief at present and that the National Administration would continue its interest in this problem as long as it existed, the administrator told the tenth New England conference the main interest of those suffering from unemployment was not unemployment insurance or such form of security, but a job.

"Homecoming" Speaker.

Marlboro Gains In Oyster Trade

Outlet Developing for Arundel Seafood.

Upper Marlboro, Md., approximately 20 miles from the Chesapeake Bay, has become a shipping point for oysters.

Yesterday 1,630 gallons of oysters brought by truck from Galesville, Md., on West River, were loaded on Pennsylvania Railroad trains for shipment to Springfield, Ohio.

The shipment was made by C. L. Woodfield, of the Woodfield Oyster Co., who said he had experimented with the shipping point last Christmas and had found it the most convenient point of outlet for seafood caught in his section of Anne Arundel County. Other shipments are expected to follow.

Prince Georges Farm Bureau Is Reorganized

Membership Rate Reduced as Eighty Growers Revive Cooperative.

The Prince Georges County Farm Bureau will be reorganized, it was announced yesterday at Upper Marlboro.

The farmers' organization, which ceased to function several years ago, was voted back into existence during a banquet Wednesday night at Upper Marlboro, attended by approximately 80 agriculturists.

Principal speakers at the banquet were Dr. T. B. Symons, head of the University of Maryland extension service; Charles T. Cockey, president of the State Farm Bureau, and C. E. Wise, jr., secretary of the State bureau.

Brief remarks on the subject of reorganizing the local bureau were also made by Joseph E. Blanford, James B. Perry, H. D. Copeland, F. H. Billingsley, W. R. C. Connick and W. B. Posey.

The speakers emphasized the imporance of farmers' organizations in securing favorable legislation, as well as the benefits in marketing farm crops and purchasing supplies. They declared that it was largely because of lack of organization that farmers' incomes formed only 7 per cent of the country's annual incomes, although 22 per cent of the national population is engaged in farming.

The rate for membership in the bureau, which had formerly been $10, was set at $3 a year. Farmers are given the choice of signing up for one year or three years.

Night clubs, the Office Cynic tells us, fall into two classes: one where you take your Best Girl to dance, and the other where you take her to watch other people dance. The Office Cynic, who can't dance himself, prefers the second type.

But Kay Ware, who knows more about Washington's after-dark amusement places than a Broadway columnist knows about key-holes, likes 'em both, and she tells you all about them in the columns of The Washington Post. She suggests just the place for you to take Aunt Minnie, who is visiting you from Peoria, or Cousin Mary, who is down from college for the week-end. After you've read Kay's breezy column, you'll be eager to give this little girl a great big hand.

You see, living here in Washington, the Nation's Capital and all that sort of thing, you naturally have friends visiting you from the hinterlands, such as New Yorkers, and people from Baltimore, or Crimson Gulch. And you know how friends are . . . they expect entertainment, and . . . well, you've got to take them to a swell night club or a famous restaurant, and how on earth are you going to know just which club or cocktail lounge will suit the occasion? Aunt Minnie, we are sure, would prefer a nice tenor and soft lights, but Uncle Henry, who is a Tired Business Man, probably wants to see a fan dancer between the salad and the coffee. Kay will tell you where to find the tenor, and if there's a fan dancer in town, she'll give you the name of the club.

Or, if you prefer something different, you'll find just the thing mentioned in her column on Wednesday and Friday mornings. Do you like Russian or Swedish food . . . string quartets or hi-de-ho jazz bands . . . ballroom dancers or a high-kicking chorus? You'll find just what you are seeking when you follow Kay Ware's advice.

Night clubs have grown up now that a Martini is legal once again, and if you've been missing this side of life, you'll enjoy taking your party to any one of Washington's famous entertainment spots. Call up the Girl Friend, get the dinner-jacket out of the closet, or, better still, buy that new one you've been needing, and read Kay Ware in The Post to find out what to do next. She'll help you have the time of your life . . . and you'll soon be so worldly wise that you'll know a headwaiter or two. Kay Ware's column is found each Wednesday and Friday morning in

Elvove Asked To Join Debate On Red Issue

National Student League Resents Charge Made at Conference.

The National Student League yesterday challenged Joseph T. Elvove, University of Maryland student, to defend in a public debate his charges against the recent Baltimore student "antiwar" conference.

Elvove, who told the conferees they were "communistic, alien-inspired and anti-American," was asked to debate on the subject, "Resolved, that the National Student League's stand for the abolition of the R. O. T. C. is justified."

He said that the challenge, which was received at the University of Maryland late yesterday, would probably be accepted, "provided they do not send a Columbia University professor against me."

Text of Challenge.

The letter to Elvove, addressed from the league's headquarters in New York City and signed by Joseph Cohen, executive vice president, read:

"That speech contains a number of assertions concerning the National Student League which are completely at variance with facts. You are very much opposed to the fight which is conducted by the N. L. S. for the abolition of the R. O. T. C.

"In order to bring the issue involved before the student body, and in order to afford the opportunity for a presentation of both sides on this question, we take this opportunity to challenge you to a public debate."

Delegates at Meet.

The conference, held November 10 at Johns Hopkins University, was visited by a delegation of three students from the University of Maryland, including Elvove, Warren Tydings, president of the Student Government Association, and Paul Welsh, president of the student Democratic Club. They announced that Elvove's speech represented the attitude of their student body.

In the speech Elvove declared that the Maryland University students would in no wise support "anything so communistic" as the Johns Hopkins gathering, supported by the National Student League and the League for Industrial Democracy.

Winchester Firm Accused of Infringing on Rights.

Winchester, Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Whether the National Fruit Product Co. of this city is infringing on patent rights of Food and Fruit Industries, Inc., in the treatment of fruit in closed retorts was argued in the Western District Federal court in Harrisonburg before Judge John Paul today.

The Food and Fruit Industries, Inc., Eugene Grab, president, charges that the process used by National Fruit is an infringement on a patent held by the plaintiff. Evidence in the suit was heard for three days in May, after which Judge Paul allowed both sides time to file briefs. He said before he hands down a decision he expects to visit the plant to inspect the apparatus.

Representing the plaintiff are Herbert J. and William J. Jacobi, of Washington, and Harry R. Kern, of this city. Defense attorneys are Clarence B. Des Jardins and Halbert P. Brown, of Washington, and R. Gray Williams, of Winchester.

Delegate From Hawaii Traveled 5,000 Miles to Be at Meeting.

"Mr. President."

Make such an utterance today in the lobby of the Hotel Mayflower and you'll be inviting a crowd. It was the same way yesterday, too. For the National Association of State Universities has descended upon the Capital for its biennial meeting and college heads are so thick you can slice them with a niblick.

Their convention officially opened Wednesday night but honest-to-goodness sessions did not start until yesterday. With President L. D. Coffman, of the University of Minnesota, in the chair, President George Washington Rightmire, of Ohio State University, got up and talked about "social and community projects in FERA student employment."

But neither one, so far as could be learned, had anything to say about the proposed Minnesota-Ohio State post-season football game, which to date has involved Franklin D. Roosevelt, the two Governors, Senator-elect Vic Donahey and Harry L. Hopkins, FERA administrator.

No Discussion.

Of course, President Rightmire and President Coffman may have said something to each other about the projected skirmish, but it's like this: The association meets strictly in executive session, and its members must not discuss the conversations and discussions with outsiders.

("Why, if some of the things we said got back home there would be more than one presidential vacancy to be filled," as one president jokingly remarked yesterday.)

Investigation, though, yielded the information that one of the most interesting talks was given by President F. P. Graham, of the University of North Carolina. His topic was "The Universities and Intellectual Liberty."

Other speakers yesterday were President J. J. Tigert, of the University of Florida; President W. B. Bizzell, University of Iklahoma, and President J. C. West, University of North Dakota.

Lindley a Speaker.

Last night, at the dinner meeting, the members were addressed by two college presidents and—there's the catch—a newspaperman. The former were A. G. Ruthven, University of Michigan, and Carleton Stanley, Delhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia. The latter was Ernest K. Lindley, of the New York Herald-Tribune's Washington bureau.

Thirty-eight universities are represented at the association's thirty-ninth convention. The oldest delegate in point of membership is President Frank LeRond McVey of the University of Kentucky. For him it is a double celebration—the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance into the organization and his election Wednesday as president of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities.

David Livingston Crawford traveled about 5,000 miles to attend. He is president of the University of Hawaii. Whether Huey Long had anything to do with it or not could not be learned, but James Monroe Smith, president of Louisiana State University, could not make it this time. Nor could Glenn Frank, famous liberal and head of the UUniversity of Wisconsin. President Goerge Thomas, of the University of Utah, is the president of the Presidents' Association. He was elected vice president, but succeeded to the presidency upon the death last month of President Elmer B. Bryan, of Ohio University.

The meeting will close today with a discussion of the New Deal's relationship to State universities.

On a narrow bridge over Difficult Run, on the Jackson highway a mile above Fairfax, Va., two trucks collided last night.

The smaller caught fire, and passing motorists took its two passengers, Lee Coates, 40, said to have been the driver, and Charles Coates, 17, his brother, both colored, of Herndon, Va., to Georgetown Hospital. Hospital authorities reported Lee Coates' condition serious as a result of bad burns over his entire body, while Charles Coates suffered deep lacerations of the forehead.

George L. Meredith, 52, colored, of 1207 Sixth street northwest, alleged driver of the larger truck, a trailer truck, was held for investigation by Sheriff Eppa P. Kirby, of Fairfax County. Meredith was said to have been returning to Washington after delivering a steam shovel in Virginia, and had rounded a sharp curve just before reaching the bridge.

Symphony Concert December 4.

University, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—"The Gay Nineties," a composition by Prof. Arthur Fickenscher, head of the McIntire School of Music in the University of Virginia, will have a place on the program of the Richmond Symphony Orchestra here on December 4 in the third and final concert of its fall series in the memorial gymnasium.

Clean Out Kidney Poisons

Wash Out Your 15 Miles Of Kidney Tubes

If kidneys don't pass 3 pints a day that contain nearly 4 pounds of waste matter, the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters become clogged with poisonous waste products and the danger of acid poisoning is greatly increased. Bladder passages are difficult . . . which often smart and burn like scalding water and cause discomfort.

This acid condition, brought about by poor kidney functions is a danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Most people watch their bowels which contain only 27 feet of intestines but neglect the kidneys which contain 15 miles of tiny tubes and filters. If these tubes or filters become clogged with poisons, it may knock you out and lay you up for many months. Don't run any risk. Make sure your kidneys empty 3 pints a day.

Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out the 15 miles of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs or so-called "kidney cures" that claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS . . . the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist.

Publisher Asks Realty Groups To Cooperate

Cooperation of the real estate interests with the bankers and Government in meeting the housing need here was urged yesterday by Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, speaking at a special luncheon meeting of the Washington Real Estate Board at the Racquet Club. Need for real estate and allied interests to stand squarely behind the Federal Housing Administration's efforts to meet the situation was also voiced by Hugh Potter, Houston, Tex., president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, another speaker at the meeting.

Dealing with real estate conditions in the National Capital, Mr. Meyer, former governor of the Federal Reserve Board, said there was not another community in the United States that would not envy Washington's fortunate position; that no other city of comparable size could point to such favorable conditions as those enjoyed here, where no apartments in any volume are to be had, where people have to wait for accommodations, where office space is being rapidly absorbed, and hotels are crowded.

Rents May Rise.

But with this temporarily pleasant situation, he warned real estate and banking interests must not sit idly by and have certain unfortunate situations develop. If necessary housing is not provided by the lenders, the dealers and the bankers, as soon as the balance of space is absorbed, rising rents are inevitable, he predicted.

He said that people will come in and bid for space and that the thin margin of deficiency would cause a rental rise of radical proportions which would be highly undesirable to the real estate business. Should such a rent rise occur, real estate interests would be endangered by rent control from Congress.

The alternative, according to the speaker, was housing construction with private funds insured under the Federal housing act, or competition of public funds with the real estate business.

President Potter, of the national real estate organization, said that real estate men, those engaged in mortgage financing and all others in related lines should support the work of the Federal Housing Administration and adopt a sympathetic and patient attitude toward its efforts in setting up the machinery under which the act is to be administered.

130 at Lunch.

One hundred and thirty members of the local board, salesmen of member organizations and guests were in attendance at the meeting, one of the largest luncheon gatherings ever held in the history of the organization.

Besides Mr. Meyer and Mr. Potter, at the speakers table were John L. Weaver and W. C. Miller, past presidents of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; A. C. Case, of the Greater National Capital Committee; Edwin C. Graham, president of Hamilton National Bank; Joshua Evans, jr., vice president of that institution; Ord Preston, president, Union Trust Co.; Harold E. Doyle, president, Washington Real Estate Board; F. Eliot Middleton and Morton J. Luchs, vice presidents of the board, and Roger J. Whiteford, the board's counsel, who was toastmaster.

Charles J. Rush, executive secretary of the organization, read a communication from Thomas P. Littlepage, chairman of the Washington Better Housing Campaign, advising that November 27, had been set apart as "Washington Real Estate Board Guest Day," at the Better Homes Exhibition. Members of the board were also invited to the opening of the exhibition on November 26.

Wanderbirds Plan Scenic Tour Through Hilly Woods Sunday

Hikers Will Visit Indian Workshop Which Has Interesting Relics.

By Robert Shosteck.

After a series of trips to such distant places as Goose Creek and the Rapidan gold mine, members of the Wanderbirds Hiking Club will welcome the plan for a cross-country jaunt on Sunday, starting from nearby Chain Bridge. The hikers will traverse three scenic and rocky valleys and go through hilly woodlands. In addition, Dr. Ulke promises to reveal the site of a very important Indian workshop where thousands of implements have been found.

Club members and readers of The Washington Post planning to go on this 7-mile hike will meet at the District end of Chain Bridge at 10:30 a. m. The bridge is accessible from Stop 20 on the Cabin John car line. The fare is one token. Those wishing to take a longer hike may continue south on the palisade trail from Donaldson Run to Georgetown, a total distance of nearly 10 miles.

From Chain Bridge an excellent view is obtained of Little Falls near which Capt. John Smith trapped beavers and traded with the Indians. In rocky shelters and caves beneath the 250-foot palisades on the Virginia side are many caches in which the Indians are known to have hidden flint, arrowhead materials, and ornaments traded with mountain tribes.

Crossing the new concrete bridge over Pimmitt Run, the group will follow the dirt road along the left bank of this stream. There are several springs along the way. About a mile upstream the Wanderbirds will turn off on to a dirt road as shown on the map. From this road another leads toward Walkers Chapel on Glebe road.

Opposite the church we follow a dirt road into the woods, soon reaching Gulf Run, a quarter of a mile down. There are a number of excellent campsites along this stream as well as three springs. Those planning to explore this region are advised to secure permission from the owner, who is anxious to keep out depredators and those careless with fire.

The hikers will turn south on the Cherrydale road, following it as far as Donaldson Run. The famous Indian village site is located upon a hill overlooking this stream. Permission to enter the farm which now occupies the site is being sought and it may be possible to enter and search the fields for tomahawks and arrows.

Donaldson Run enters the Potomac River as a miniature Yosemite Falls. The hikers therefore must make their way down the steep palisade by a detour off to the left as shown on the sketch. The river trail, both north and south, is easy going. Georgetown is about 3 miles south, while the Chain Bridge car stop is about 2 miles north.

If the weather permits, a campfire party is planned on the rocks at the mouth of Gulf Run. Nearby are the remains of a dam and millrace, which once supplied power to a gristmill.

The nearby rocks are covered with the rock or polypody fern, the columbine, ground moss, and miterwort occupying more shaded places. This region is excellent for those interested in collecting the seeds of wild flowers. Those going on this hike may return downtown as early as 5:30 and as late as 8 p. m. Hikers should bring lunches and a drinking cup. A trip to the beautiful Alexandria Reservoir is planned for next week.

Production of Soft Coal Totals 7,250,000 Tons

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Bituminous coal production in the United States during the week ended November 17 amounted to 7,250,000 tons, according to estimates of the National Coal Association. In the same week last year production was 7,665,000 tons.

Buchanan Sees Budget Figure of 2½ Billions

(Associated Press.)

An estimate that ordinary Government budgetary figures would aggregate $2,500,000,000 in the next fiscal year—exclusive of undetermined relief needs and public debt requirements—was drawn yesterday by Chairman Buchanan, of the House Appropriations Committee.

As for a possibility of balancing the budget in the 1936 fiscal year, the Texas Democrat said there was "not a reasonable chance," unless relief appropriations were curtailed.

Buchanan, head of the group that formulates all of the appropriation bills, said four such measures would be ready for congressional action in January. Hearings will begin about December 4, he said.

In that connection, Buchanan made known the Budget Bureau had not completed its work of preparing estimates and justifications for the nine regular supply bills and that the Administration had yet to decide on how much money it planned to ask of Congress for relief purposes.

Explaining that relief outlays will be included in a deficiency appropriation bill, "which may be larger than all the other money bills combined," Buchanan said:

"While much of the present outlays through the RFC and public works loans will be returned to the Treasury, that spent for relief is gone and will never come back.

"Continued recovery, however, will increase revenues and lessen the need for tax legislation, because expenditures would decrease. I hope there will be no need for a new tax bill, but if one is passed in the coming Congress it won't be a big one that will interfere with recovery. I hope we can get around it."

Washingtonians Can Aid Santa To Fill Children's Stockings

Social Agency to Furnish Tools to Fix Toys in Post's Drive.

The father who can not afford to buy toys for his children at Christmas can repair old toys like a professional Santa Claus—if Post readers will supply the worn toys for him to work on. And recognized agencies with which The Post cooperates in conducting its annual toy and gift fund supply the equipmen to renovate toys for their own families.

Neighborhood House, at 470 N street northwest, is one of the member organizations of the Council of Social Agencies which employ this modern method of making Christmas as personal an affair in the homes of needy families as it is in your own.

Here's the plan at Neighborhood House, as outlined by Mrs. Clara Neligh: Used and broken toys donated are allotted to unemployed fathers, according to the number, age and sex of the children in each family. The organization also loans the use of tools and other equipment which a man needs to renovate the toys so skillfully that they will look as bright and new as if they came right out of Santa's pack, when the youngsters receive them on Christmas Day.

But it takes time to repair toys thoroughly, and several men can not use a limited number of tools at once. That is why early contributions to The Post fund, which distributes the toys to cooperating agencies promptly, is highly appreciated.

Letting father be Santa Claus has several advantages in Mrs. Neligh's opinion. Not the least of them is the fact that it personalizes Christmas, for the father takes loving care in renovating the toys for his own children. It gives him occupation, too, to take his mind off financial difficulties and so highly appreciated is this opportunity that when men have finished working on toys for their own children, more often than not they set to work on those for some widow's family.

Other organizations carry on equally worthy projects by setting up workshops where toys are reconditioned for families who cannot do it themselves. Post fund toys go to these as well as other organizations affiliated with the Council of Social Agencies.

Children Help.

Marsh and Kimball Clark, 6-year-old twin sons of Senator and Mrs. Champ Clark, of Missouri, and grandsons of the late Speaker of the House, yesterday expressed their willingness to help the fund. Mark Hardin, who did not stop to leave his name and address, delivered a generous box of discarded toys. And from S. J. Kann & Sons came two huge cartons of gift toys.

They will be put to use, for the following letter, received yesterday, is typical of hundreds that will be sent to The Post in the next month:

"Dear Post:

"My name is Grace. I hear Santa Claus is to be at The Washington Post again this year. We are on relief and Daddy only works a few days a week and Mother says there is no money for toys. Please Post Toy Fund do not forget us. I have three little brothers and two sisters. Anything will do just so we are not forgotten on Christmas morning."

Grace and her brothers and sisters will be taken care of, and so will hundreds of other equally pathetic cases, for Washingtonians can be depended upon to give generously.

Senator Backs Safety Project

Reynolds Will Support Program of Motor Club in District.

A definite legislative program designed to curb the loss of life on Washington streets was urged by Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, a member of the Senate District Committee, yesterday in a letter to Commissioner Hazen indorsing a nine-point safety program recently submitted to District officials by the District of Columbia Motor Club.

Senator Reynolds said he hoped the commissioners would have such a program ready for submission to Congress early in the forthcoming session and promised that it would have his "whole-hearted support."

Speaking of the motor club program, Senator Reynolds said:

"I believe it contains many helpful suggestions and deserves the most careful consideration by the members of your honorable body and other District officials concerned with our traffic problem.

"We now have examinations to ascertain the fitness of motor vehicle operators, but we allow some of these owners to operate cars that are, to say the least, unsafe.

"Obviously, compulsory inspection of motor vehicle equipment, increased traffic personnel, a more effective set-up of our traffic court and enactment of a strong safety-responsibility law for the control of reckless and irresponsible drivers, will go far to improve conditions."

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—WITHOUT CALOMEL

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. ©1931 C. M. Co.

Club Habana's Curtains Rise On Wednesday

By Kay Ware.

Curtains rise upon the new Club Habana Wednesday night. Against a back drop of waving palms, scenes of the South Seas—"Jolly," a titian-haired entertainer, will sing, Moe Baer and orchestra will play, and guests will eat, dance, and relax.

Washingtonians look forward to Guy Scott's newest venture, to Chef Francis Salagado's culinary achievements, to the decorative effects by one of the Daniel boys, of Daniel, Daniel & Daniel, architects.

Dinner at eight.

Tea dancers are already making plans to try a tango this afternoon. At 4:30 Da Costa's Tango Orchestra at the Shoreham lounge will invite you to try those intricate and graceful steps that characterize the dance.

Soon you'll be speaking, not of the Cocktail Hour, but of the Tango Hour. (The "hour" really lasts until 6:30.) And if you've heard the amusing and sprightly songs of Tiny, you'll call it the Tango-Tiny Hour.

Floor show includes Carmencita and Rigo, Spanish dance team. Carmencita says they enjoy dancing so much they'd dance right on, even if no one was looking. Nine Whitney, of Ballet Russe and Radio City Music Hall, is easy on the eyes. She creates all her own dances and costumes. Anita Wyland, another dancer, goes modernistic. Theo Alban, tenor, fills the bill.

Here's a row of cocktail lounges:

New songs by Ernestine Gardner and Fenton Froom, at the Willard's bamboo room, plus Johnny Slaughter and band, help that wan, weak hour before dinner. Bamboo trees grow around in tubs. Favorite spot for collegiates.

• • • •

Harrington's Pink Elephant is ideal for those business talks that accomplish more outside of the office. Size is small enough to be cozy and a trifle secluded, though not crowded. Pink elephants in the decoration prove amusing, cocktails hit the spot.

• • • •

For the tete-a-tete or the date that must leave an impression, stop at the Carleton. Sidney's unit provides musical diversion, the wall panels are worth at least a good five minutes' scrutiny. Concert ensemble includes Emil Smith, leader and pianist; Derwood Bowersox, first violinist, formerly with Vincent Lopez; Richard Lorieberg, cellist, and Fritz Bolzer, obbligato violinist. European and domestic musical fare.

• • • •

Hi-Hat is the rendezvous of social, diplomatic, business, Government, sports, theater, dinner groups. Anybody, in fact. Informal atmosphere and music by Manuel Bofril and his Filipinos, who serenade from table to table, sing and play request numbers.

Alexandria is all excited about the new ballroom of the George Mason Hotel. Opens next Friday.

If you go to the Mayflower ask Anatole, assistant to Headwaiter Teddy, if he's Polish. He'll straighten his shoulders, finger his tie and correct proudly, "No, madame, I am Rooshian!!"

Gaillard, at Madrillon, has a rare herb garden and a fish pond. These flourish best in the summer time, of course. His fish pond contains carp, which he feeds on spaghetti. He is interested in interior decorating, too, and has his walls covered with mingled animals, flowers and what not.

Have you seen the 42-pound live turkey in the window of an Eighth street store?

What singing master of ceremonies had a fight with that smooth orchestra leader the other night? You know all about it now.

There's a violinist at Club Troika who has an arresting personality and history. Michael Michaeloff has waving hair, long sideburns, snapping eyes, and the air of a gypsy. He is a concert violinist of some note, organized the Romany Trail Gypsy Orchestra and conducted its broadcast for seven years. He was program director for WBAL for six years; has given concerts in all the larger cities of the East.

He has a repertoire that extends from "The Last Refrain" to the Bach Chaconne, and if you get him interested, he'll give you an entire concert. Ask him for his own composition, "Gypsy Fantasy." It has all the fire and spirit its name suggests.

"Mike," as he is called, has a young son, age 9, who is closely following his father's footsteps. We remember when this boy, younger by several years, used to tuck his fiddle under his chin for his teacher, Frank Gittleson, the present concert master of the National Symphony.

Heigh-Ho—Enrico and Chula, Spanish dancers; Archie Hawk, with taps. Orchestra trio—cello, violin and banjo. At 12:30.

Club l'Hiver—Continental atmosphere and show. Formal opening next Wednesday. If you don't remember, it's at Maryland Club Gardens.

Club Michel—Esther and Hazelton, dance team, Ruth Kidd, singer; Payton and Parks, in "Harlemania," and an exotic dancer.

Quick lunch counter:

"Toasted cheese, an' coffee. Snappy!" Flash of a white-aproned waitress, whose lipstick is smeared thickly . . . "Toasted American, comin' up!" . . .

Steam rising, the smell of hamburger . . . Sawdust on the floor is streaked with the hurrying of feet . . . Sandich boy cuts, spreads, flaps plates, tosses pickles with one motion . . . Trays of dirty glasses, trays of clean silver . . .

Fat man on left puts butter on apricot pie . . . Sallow youth at right smears fried egg with honey . . . "A glass of water, please . . . and hurry."

Slop of coffee in thick saucer, cheese running off corners of toast. Little pink check is tucked under salt shaker.

Couple argue, their hands waving. Girl's eyes are red and swollen . . . Paper boy's yell from the door, "Late edition!" Man with cigar wants to know how late, and hunts up racing news. Beckons to friend, they talk softly, intensely . . .

Last-minute news from Club l'Hiver. Wednesday's opening will bring Bryan McDonald, master of ceremonies, and a Broadway revue of new acts and faces. This week's bill features Kitty Simons, blues singer.

As You Like Them

Hulet Wells Regains Rights, Gets Job Here

Seattle, Nov. 22 (AP).—Hulet M. Wells, who was convicted here on a charge of seditious conspiracy during the World War, will join the secretarial staff of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, it was announced today coincident with revelation that Wells' citizenship had been restored recently. He will leave soon for Washington.

Wells, former President of the Central Labor Council and Socialist candidate for mayor several times, was convicted in a conspiracy case, and served time in the Federal penitentiary before President Wilson canceled the balance of his sentence.

Hagerstown Jail Plans Snow Cure Of Short Termers

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 22 (Spl.). Short-term prisoners, mostly persons sentenced to jail for intoxication, will not lead a "life of Riley" this winter, if city officials have anything to do about it.

Magistrates have been sentencing those found guilty of intoxication to from 5 to 10 days on the weed-cutting gang, and now that summer is at an end, they have been studying means of keeping them busy during the winter, and have concluded that the best way to discourage habitual drinking is to sentence them to cleaning up the city dump and clearing the streets of snow.

There was a noticeable decrease in the number of drunk and disorderly cases when the weed-cutting sentence was instituted.

The second highest will be commissioned "assistant council bugler." and receive a bugle banner. Each will receive a bugler's arm insignia.

Eight out of the following fifteen calls will be used: First call, scout call, reveille, mess, swimming, to the colors, officers call, drill, assembly, retreat, recall, taps, church, fire, call to quarters. Form counts equal to a call.

Scouts to Help.

Scout troops are asked to aid in a most worthy "Good Turn," distributing posters in all sections of the city for the sale of Christmas Seals to care for tubercular children.

The sale of these seals is the sole source of income of the Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis of the District of Columbia, hence the better it is advertised the better the sale.

Scouts will be given a route in their own locality, as far as possible.

Date: Saturday, November 24, 1934.

Place: To get posters and carfare, 1022 Eleventh street northwest.

Posters will be in packages with the route given. Two Scouts will work together.

Good Turn Season.

As a city-wide Scout good turn hundreds of basket of food will be made up by Washington to distribute to the poor for the Thanksgiving holiday. In many troops the various patrols have started competing to see which individual patrol can collect the largest and most wholesome baskets.

The scoutmasters of the troops have instructed the boys who gather the baskets to make the food well varied and of such nature as to furnish the most wholesome and nourishing meal possible.

Thanksgiving is one of the times of the year when Washington Scouts, along with Scouts all over the Nation, join in the crusade to spread good cheer and pleasant holidays over the city.

Troop 14 in Action.

Under the supervision of Assistant Scoutmaster George Towberman and Junior Assistant Scoutmaster William Cronenberg, Troop 14 has organized a rifle team recently for first class Scouts who are interested in marksmanship merit badge. During the summer a rifle range was completed at Camp Jennings and practice will be held while on hikes. All members are required to take the Boy Scout marksman's code and have the written consent of parents.

Scouts Aid In Dedication.

Thirty-five scouts aided in the dedication ceremonies of National Memorial Park on the Falls Church road several miles below Washington in Virginia. Troop 14 sent 26 members; Troop 83 sent 10 members, and Troop 636 sent one member to aid in parking, distributing programs, maps and other literature concerning the plans and development of the park. They also aided in directing highway traffic and as special orderlies and messengers to the speakers.

Getting Ready.

Enthusiasm for the Silver Jubilee to be held in Washington next summer, August 21 to 30, has been steadily increasing for the last few months. Many troops have started "know-your-city" programs and many other plans and preparations are being formulated to enable Washington Scouts to act properly as hosts to 30,000 visiting scouts.

Harriet Anderson Weds In All Souls' Church

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

One of the outstanding weddings in Capital society took place yesterday afternoon when Miss Harriet Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chandler P. Anderson, became the bride of Mr. Daniel C. Long, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Colfax Long. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in All Souls Memorial Church by the Rev. H. H. D. Sterrett in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends from official and diplomatic circles, as well as members of society from New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Maryland, for both families are prominent, and that of the bride is particularly identified with New York City and York Harbor, Me., where they have spent the summers for years past.

The chancel of the church was banked with palms, ferns and great clusters of white chrysanthemums, while lilies filled the altar vases.

The bride, who was escorted and given in marriage by her father, wore a handsome gown of deep ivory satin made on princess lines with a long, graceful train, on which was appliqued rare point lace, worn by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Chandler P. Anderson, jr., at her wedding in St. Margaret's in London, several years ago. Her great-grandmother's lace wedding veil was mounted on a voluminous tulle veil and simply arranged. The bride carried a bouquet of gardenias and lillies of the valley.

Miss Mitchell Maid of Honor.

Mrs. Chandler P. Anderson, jr., of New York, the matron of honor, and Miss Eliza Mitchell, the maid of honor, were gowned alike in cerise crepe, with gold lame tunic coats cut knee-length and tied at the back of the neck and at the waistline with a slit between to show a glimpse of their gowns.

Their tricorne hats of velvet of the exact same shade of cerise were small and were worn slightly on one side. They carried bouquets of bronze chrysanthemums tied with gold streamers.

The bridesmaids, Miss Elizabeth Shouse, Miss Christine Ekengren, Miss Kate Hyde Scully, and Miss Catherine Poe, all of Washington; Miss Ruth Horton, of Greenwich, Conn., and Miss Elizabeth Christian, of Richmond, Va., wore chic models of cerise crepe cut on long graceful lines, with cerise tunic coats, and their tiny tricorne hats were of black velvet. They carried bouquets of white chrysanthemums.

Eleanor Anderson, niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a white dotted Swiss frock with the square neck and puffed sleeves edged with narrow frills of real lace, and it had a sash at the back of dotted Swiss. Her hat of the same material had lace on the brim. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet in a lace holder.

Reception at Residence.

Mr. Chandler P. Anderson, jr., was best man for Mr. Long, and the ushers were Mr. Raymond C. Woods, Mr. John F. Sweeney, Mr. Charles Gaines, Mr. Corcoran Thom, jr., Mr. Alan Rinehart, Mr. Ingram Mack, and Mrs. James Mitchell, all of Washington; Dr. John Tilden Howard, of Baltimore, Md., and Mr. Tristam C. Colkett, of Philadelphia, Pa.

A reception followed at the residence of the bride's parents on Twenty-first street, where the various rooms were elaborately decorated with white chrysanthemums and lilies, intermingled with palms and ferns.

The bridle couple received in a bower of ferns and palms in the music room, and they were assisted by Mrs. Anderson, the bride's mother, who wore a very handsome wine-color velvet afternoon gown with a hat of the same shade, and Mrs. Long, the bridegroom's mother, who chose a modish green velvet gown with hat to match.

Mr. Long and his bride left later for the wedding trip, the latter traveling in a cardinal red crepe dress, with a Russian coat trimmed with Persian lamb, and a high Russian turban of the same fur. On their return the couple will reside at 2400 Sixteenth street.

The presents sent the bride and bridegroom, which number several hundred, include handsome silver ornaments, a silver punch bowl, candelabra, dishes, platters, trays and the like; many lovely things in crystal, several sets of service plates, very beautiful in design and of famous makes, are in the collection and there are beautiful lamps, several clocks and other unusual and lovely things.

The out-of-town guests include Mr. and Mrs. Robert Daniels Christian, of Richmond; Dr. and Mrs. Richard O'Neill and Miss Anna Cutler, of Boston, Mass.; Miss Carol Foster, of Morristown, N. J., and Mrs. Winslow Williams, Mrs. Spalding Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs. James Piper and Mr. and Mrs. John Crosson Cooper, all of Baltimore.

Glimpsed at the reception were Senora de Riano, aunt of the bride and wife of the former Ambassador of Spain, one-time dean of the Diplomatic Corps, who is spending the winter here; the present Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Calderon, the latter wearing a costume of black, trimmed in Persian lamb; Senora de urjo, in a costume of brown with a Russian turban of brown felt and a scarf of silver fox fur. Others there were the retiring Minister of Greece and Mme. Simopoulos, Representative and Mrs. James M. Beck, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Assistant Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt, and their daughter, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt; Justice and Mrs. Lawrence Groner, Mr. and Mrs. John Hamilton, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas A. John Briggs in the Italian room, where Miss Simpson was formally presented to Capital society December 26 of last year. Only members of the two families and a few friends will be present.

Princess Murat Marries French Envoy to Italy

A wedding of international interest which took place in Rome yesterday, according to Associated Press dispatches, was that of Princess Marie Murat, and Count Charles de Chambrun, French Ambassador to Italy. The civil ceremony was performed in the Capitol building in Rome.

The princess is the daughter of the late Duc and Duchesse de Rohan, and made her home in the twelfth century feudal castle of the de Rohans in Brittany. She has written several historical works, including a life of Lafayette, for children. She was the widow of Prince Lucien Murat, who died a year ago, and has one son, Prince Achille Murat. She is one of the most popular and talented members of French royal society. Her salons are among the few remaining celebrated gatherings of the intelligentsia of the French capital. She has preferred living in a private apartment to the family mansion and maintains that today's aristocrat can be idle no longer.

It is fitting that the windows of her apartment faced the tomb of Napoleon, for it was that Emperor who made a man named Joachim Murat King of Naples in 1808. Many a young artist has received an impetus and gained a foothold in his profession by being introduced by the Princess Murat, who incidentally preferred to be called Marie Murat.

Count de Chambrun, who is an honorary citizen of the United States, is a direct descendant of the Marquis de Lafayette. He was born in Washington, and is a brother of Gen. de Chambrun, who married Clara Longworth, sister of the late Speaker of the House. Another Marquis de Chambrun married Miss Margaret Rives Nichols. Count de Chambrun visited Washington at the conclusion of the World War on a special mission, and it has been rumored several times that he was coming here as French Ambassador.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

When in the islands I learned a bit about Japanese weddings. Some of the information gleaned was that the young bride wears, not just one gleaming satin ensemble, but changes from one gorgeous kimono of brilliant hue to another one even lovelier—sometimes using as many as six bridal gowns.

Now it would seem that the idea of changing costumes and startling the other guests during the course of some large social function has reached us here, for at Diana Rowland's tea Mary Kay Spinks arrived wearing a handsome black coat trimmed with blue fox. When she started to leave, in the laughter and talk of the crowded cloak room, she put on what looked like her own coat only to find in the daylight that it was green and trimmed with silver fox. The question is—did her coat turn chameleon and change its color—if so why and how did the initials B. D. appear and what do they stand for?

Just another addition to the growing list of coat mysteries. Not long ago Bob McCandlish and his coat with the keys were separated at a dance, but were happily reunited the following day.

Colonial Dance Will Be Given In Alexandria

Alexandria, once the scene of the gayest colonial parties, which were outstanding for their charming dignity and exclusiveness, is again to be the mecca of socialites from near and far.

Two years ago, in March, an elaborate ball was given in Gadsby's Tavern. The quaint little invitations of parchment and sealing wax promised an exact reproduction of the inaugural ball of George Washington. It was! The clock was turned back and the old paneled walls, soft draperies and mellow lights seemed far removed from the occasional modern noises from outside.

Virginia society members including Mrs. Robert E. Lee, Mrs. Charles R. Hoof, Mrs. C. A. F. Sinclair, Mrs. Frederick Richardson and Mrs. Joseph Crockett, have formed a committee and are planning a dance, which will be a yearly affair, to be given in the historic old tavern. The guests will include debutantes and members of the younger set whose ancestors long ago were guests at parties given for and by George and Martha Washington.

The ball will take place Friday, January 11. Preceding it there will be a large dinner given by Mrs. Frederick Richardson, of Fairfax, and Mrs. Richard Rice Barrett, of Warrenton, for their debutante daughters, Miss Randolph Richardson and Miss Anne Camden Barrett, when the guests will be members of the younger set from Washington and nearby countryside.

Craft Is Made an Art by Combining Sculpture With Styling.

By Frances Mangum.

ONE MAN has sown the seeds of revolution.

He is M. Antoine of Paris, the acknowledged maestro of the hairdressing world.

When he left his native France recently to visit America, his purpose was to bring new concepts of coiffure beauty to women of this country. The result has been an unprecedented departure from traditional hair styles to bizarre and classical trends.

He has banished all that was careless, casual or accidental about hairdress. He stresses deliberate, sculptured effects.

"Hair," insists Antoine, "must be worn just as you wear your hat, or your tiara. It must be a vital, living part of you that is purposely decorative. It must suit your gown, your face, your personality. It must speak for you and tell about you!"

"Mad Magician of Hair."

Antoine, who has been called "the mad magician of the hair," does extravagant things. He flaunts conservatism as he gilds, lacquers, swirls and curls the hair fantastically, but always with the genius of an artist. Because he has dared to combine sculpture with styling he has made an art of what was previously the craft of hairdressing.

Now Antoine is dazzling America with his extraordinary creations. For years he has annually surprised the blase Paris—both by his work and his idiosyncrasies. Even there in the city where eyebrows are seldom lifted to convey amazement he has created sensations. First, there was his glass house. And then his glass coffin bed. Antoine believes that one receives inspiration for life from thinking of death. He wears a ring which bears the inscription, "Remember the moment of death." He has designed a glass tomb and has requested that his pallbearers be the six most beautiful girls in Paris.

Speed, too, inspires him, Antoine confesses. Although he owns a fleet white monoplane, he has an overpowering desire to possess the fastest airplane in the world.

Eccentric in Wardrobe.

His eccentricities have even extended to his personal wardrobe. Sometimes he wears a white satin formal evening suit. With this he dyes his hair white and heavily powders his face to resemble a statue—or ghost, say some.

Despite the fact he is extremely sensitive to color, he dyes his dogs purple and on occasions bedecks himself in a purple velvet suit with a long, white, satin-lined cape. With this, he dyes his hair purple by a special process of his own. One time he startled an opera audience by appearing in his box garbed in a deep blue velvet tail coat, satin trousers of the same shade, blue velvet stock tied around his neck, and his hair—blue.

Antoine has many accomplishments besides his uncanny knack for hairdressing. Once he was a professional wrestler. Now he is a sculptor of some note. His works have been exhibited at leading continental and Americans salons of art. He swims and dives like a sea god, and fences like a master.

But it is his gift for hairdressing that has spread his name across two continents and made him virtual dictator of coiffure styles. This year his creations are conspicuous for several features. There are few parts. He views these as artificialties too suggestive of wigs. There is the inevitable upward movement. Ringlets are flat, ears visible. Waves and straight hair are cleverly combined. And there are hair ribbons again, and many hair ornaments.

Clings to Classic Lines.

Sausage curls, long bobs and shingles are out of Antoine's picture. He clings closely to classic lines, varying these by touches of his own which he creates for the individual. For Antoine does not believe in too great generalities.

"When I say hair must be worn this way or that," he explains, "I always mean in accordance with the type of person. For instance, if I say bangs, I do not mean every one to have them. Some, yes, thick, long bangs; others mere fringes, and some no bangs at all."

That is Antoine's way. And it is because of his definite and daringly different ideas that he has amassed a fortune in his art. Not that he has an eye for business. No one would expect that of Antoine. He himself admits that business has little interest for him. He is the creator.

To look at Antoine you would suppose him to be 35. In reality he is 51. He frankly admits he has had facial operations to remove the marks of age. His superb physique, however, he maintains through his many forms of violent exercise.

M. Antoine, of Paris, models one of his fantastic lacquered coiffures. Note the sculptured effect of the curls massed high on the head, the classic trend in clustered small ones at neck.

What Today Means

"Sagittarius."

IF NOVEMBER 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m. from 4:45 to 6:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m.

The right of free speech should not be exercised due to the controversies tactless remarks might cause. They are likely to rub someone the wrong way. Individuality may count a great deal in business transactions, so it might be advisable to see prospects personally, rather than try to negotiate transactions over the telephone or by letter. Financial affluence will relieve the monetary pressure felt by many, and is likely to be productive of briskness in business.

Social activities are likely to absorb a good deal of your time during the next forty-eight hours. Married and engaged couples, as well as those desirous of giving expression to their suppressed sentimental emotions, will do well to make up their minds to exercise the greatest amount of patience, regardless of how trying on their nerves and tempers dilatory tactics on someone's part might be.

If a woman and November 23 is your birthday, you are essentially a home-loving individual, requiring a lot of affection and attention. You have very decided opinions of your own, as well as being gifted with a clarity of understanding surpassing that of the average person. Whatever financial problems might confront you will very likely be overcome with a great deal of ease.

Marriage should prove more desirable than either a professional or commercial career, although you might be successful in either office detail work or on the stage. If you will take an interest in social affiairs a great deal of popularity should be achieved.

The child born on November 23, as a rule, when it arrives at school age, proves to be very advanced for its years and usually does exceptionally good school work. Attention should be paid to this child's physical development, as its studious habits might incline it to stay too much indoors. A well-balanced diet will assure excellent health.

If a man and November 23 is your natal day, frills and ostentatious display are apt to have an irritating effect on you, but it would, at times, be diplomatic not to express yourself too forcibly. You are a great lover of nature and anything of a horticultural order should be of great interest. Legal medical or mechanical work and writing offer you excellent mediums for self-expression.

Women Retard Development By Wasting Their Efforts Upon Trifles and Details

By Malvina Lindsay
(Woman's Page Editor.)

THAT CLUB WOMEN are frittering away their time over the banquet nut cups while Rome burns is the accusation of Mrs. Anna Steese Richardson, widely known writer on women's affairs.

• • • •

Several times in the past Mrs. Richardson has frankly told club women what was the matter with them. Now she says they are wasting their time at conventions in "pretty platform courtesies, long eulogistic presentation speeches, the bestowal of armloads of flowers, the listening to the 'elder statesmen' tell of founding their little club out in Squeedunk, while life is whirling so swiftly about us that we may be engulfed by some social disaster without even being aware of its approach."

• • • •

Mrs. Richardson undoubtedly is right. But her indictment should not be limited to club women. An overconcern with the minutiae of life is a universal feminine trait. And it is right now one of the chief things that is retarding woman's personal development and her contribution to civilization.

THE WOMAN in the home is as much a victim of this mental myopia as is the club woman. She still dusts the fruit jars in the cellar while her children's souls starve. She still thinks of a home in terms of tiled bathrooms and electric refrigerators. She squanders her leisure in a round of petty social duties, going places she doesn't want to go, seeing people she doesn't want to see, all because she hasn't the daring to go after the things in life she really wants.

Business and professional women are even better examples of this feminine inability to see the forest for the trees. Too often they let their days deteriorate into hodge-podges of little things. They stew over trifles, become immersed in office politics and become wasted in strength and sterile in mind to the bigger undertakings. They are forever cleaning their desks and getting ready to get down to the big job.

• • • •

Far too often the employed woman is shortsightedly doubling in brass. She does a day's work in the office, then goes home to work on a night shift. She leaps into a kitchen apron the minute she enters the door and begins setting the table or making the salad while the exhausted men folk relax over the evening paper. Even though there are servants, the burden of the domestic responsibility is hers.

SHOULD SHE be fortunate enough to escape work in the kitchen, she is likely to find it over the wash bowl or the sewing basket. A man may depend on a tailor, a laundress or a wife to keep his wardrobe, but not a woman. She would feel extravagant, lazy, even treacherous to her sex in shirking such traditional feminine duties.

Women through custom and man's shrewdness have for ages found themselves saddled with detail and frippery. As a result, in their personal lives, they have formed the habit of dallying with the odds and ends and neglecting the fundamentals. In their public life, they have taken to chasing rabbits down alleys while lions roam at large.

• • • •

Women deserve no sympathy for this situation. Now that they are boasting of their emancipation, they should carry the revolution a step further and throw off the shackles of minutiae. Life is a series of choices. The art of living consists in choosing between the essentials and the non-essentials. Women will never reach their full potentialities in the office, the club or the home until they quit nibbling at the shell of the nut.

Reader Agitated Over Young Woman Marrying Aged Man; Mary Haworth Discusses Question Pro and Con.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: What do you think of an old man who is senile and in his dotage considering marriage, although he is a grandfather?

Do you not think it is a great mistake for a younger woman to marry an old man and have to wheel him around in a wheel chair? I feel that such a marriage is a great waste of a young woman's youth, and that a young woman should always marry a man of her own age.

MARY S.

Tragi-comic Possibility.

DEAR MARY S: If the dictionary's definition of "dotage" is to be taken literally: i. e. "feebleness of mind, especially in old age; excessive fondness; weak and foolish affection," I should think it rather to be expected that an old man, senile and in his dotage, would be considering marriage, providing he was given some slight encouragement.

And while I can't see that his being a grandfather has any particular bearing on the case, certainly the state of senility has. But if he is not wholly responsible for his conduct, as feebleness of mind indisputably implies, then neither is he to be harshly condemned. However, those rightfully responsible for his welfare should avert such a tragi-comic possibility as his marrying. Are they able and willing to supply proof that he is "senile and in his dotage?"

As to whetner it is a great mistake for a younger woman to marry an old man and wheel him around in a wheel chair, that, I should say, is a matter of relative values. It is far from being a romantic setup, certainly; but in some instances, under certain circumstances, it might be a feasible partnership candidly negotiated for the mutual material benefit of the contracting parties.

It may or may not be "great waste of a young woman's youth! It might, on the contrary, be grateful acceptance of goods the gods provided; intuitive refusal to look a gift horse in the mouth. Perhaps the woman has had no alternative offer, either of romance or of economic security, and is judiciously willing to direct her life into the only channel available.

Of course, where a woman is confronted with a choice in the matter, I think unquestionably she will find her youth blossoming into a richer maturity and into greater happiness, if she marries a man who is near enough her own age to be enduringly compatable, mentally, spiritually, and physically.

Constant Duty Is Given Flute In Orchestras

The fifth of this series of articles on the instruments of the orchestra is devoted to the flute. Students planning to attend the children's concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra, to be sponsored by The Washington Post early in December, are urged to clip this series for scrapbooks.

THE FLUTE is an instrument of great antiquity. The old form of the orchestral flute was a slightly-tapered tube. The modern Bohem flute has a cylindrical tube, and is easier to play. Like all wood-wind instruments, the flute has holes cut exactly where they should be to produce perfect intonation. Keys on levers are provided to open and close these holes as the player operates the keys.

The flute is in constant service in the orchestra, taking the melody for the wood-wind group just as the violin does for the strings. Often it is combined with the violin for this purpose. The lower wood-wind instruments have for some time consisted of the oboe, the clarinet and the bassoon, while more recently the group has grown to include the English horn, contrabassoon, and bass clarinet. The flute is the highest of these and is surpassed in pitch only by the piccolo, which is used chiefly for special effects.

The flute has often served to picture birds. Beethoven used it in his pastoral symphony to represent the nightingale. Mozart was not fond of the instrument, although he wrote a concerto for harp and flute, and the well-known opera "The Magic Flute."

The piccolo, really a half-size flute, gives tones an octave above those of the flute. It has three distinct registers. Its lower octave is too weak and hollow for orchestral use; its second octave is bright and joyous; while its upper notes have a piercing quality that gives the infernal suggestion to this "imp of the orchestra."

Tomorrow: The Harp.

Women of Rio Best Dressed, Says Journal

North Americans Second, With English Next, Declares Paper.

WHO ARE the most expensive women in the world?

"They are not Parisian women, as generally believed," the Prager Tageblatt, of Prague, writes, "but South Americans. It is in Rio de Janeiro or in Buenos Aires that one finds the best-dressed and the most expensively dressed women in the world.

"Second place goes to North American women, of the highest New York classes, who live around Park avenue. Next come ladies of the English gentry, and Parisian women are only fourth on the list.

"The same statistics show that Czechoslovakian women are among the less ostentatious in the world, as regards dressing. But Italian women, second only to their German sisters (who are temporarily under dress restrictions established by Reich Propaganda Minister Goebbels), are the least 'expensive' of all women who follow the Occidental or Parisian fashion."

Turkey to Abolish Titles.

The Agas, Effendis, and Pashas will soon be no more. These titles have been ruled out by Turkey and only the title Bey, equivalent to Mr., is left. The more fanciful titles will cease to exist when the Turks adopt their new official family names on January 1. Bey will be inserted between the first and last names.

Plan to Educate Blind Italians And Americans Is Outlined Here

Proposal Similar to the Exchange System Is Advanced by Woman.

A PLAN whereby blind Americans will be educated in Italy and blind Italians will attend schools in the United States is being worked out by Mrs. Mary Raiola, an American who lived in Italy for several years.

The plan, similar to the exchange student system of universities, is backed by Donna Tommasina Colosimo, founder of the Institute Colosimo in Naples. At the institute, blind soldiers have been taught to weave fine linens, and to do exquisite embroideries, wood carving and wrought iron work.

It was the sight of those blind men getting back their courage, their hold on life, that made Mrs. Raiola want to offer the same opportunities to her countrymen.

Raps Charity for Blind.

"For too long the blind have been given charity and pity instead of chances to develop latent abilities," she said yesterday at the Mayflower. "Most of the blind men in this country can make only things that are inferior. It isn't their fault. Some of them may be geniuses for all we know. We've never had time to find out what they really can do. We've never had time to teach them.

"A blind man to win recognition must do something better than a man with sight."

Surrounding her on the hotel's mezzanine were products from the Institute Colosimo. Rich brocades that looked as if they had come out of a medieval castle were draped on modern chairs. Princely table linens were arranged in neat stacks. A straw flask made by a blind Italian general was prominently displayed.

"Weave Souls Into Them."

"See how beautiful these things are," she exclaimed as she fingered rich embroideries. "The men weave something of their souls into them. It is a joy to see them work. They are so proud of creating beauty, of paying their own way in the world."

Mrs. Mary Raiola Inspired by Work of Colosimo Institute in Naples.

If the exchange plan goes through, the blind Italian men will come to the United States to learn English and commercial subjects. Our men will learn to spin flax, to weave, embroider and carve in the manner of the Italians. Thus far the plan makes no provisions for women.

"First we will take the men," smiled Mrs. Raiola. "Later perhaps we can do something for the women."

The Institute Colosimo was founded in 1924 by Donna Tommasina Colosimo in memory of her son, Paul. More than 200 blind soldiers are now learning and working at the institute, which is in the ancient Carmelite convent at Naples.

Lauds Donna Colosimo.

"A brave woman, a great woman," said Mrs. Raiola, of Donna Colosimo. "She had to overcome many obstacles in carrying out her memorial. She had no money. She had no position. And as an Italian woman she was supposed to center all her interests in her own home. But she borrowed money, about $300, to start the institute. She persuaded wealthy, influential persons to help. Now the patricians are backing her. She is making history in the field of social service."

When a blind soldier enters the institute he is taught the Braille system over a period of six months. Then he takes an examination. If he passes he chooses a design and sets about learning it.

He spins the flax grown in the old convent garden and weaves it into his chosen design. From then until he is graduated three or five years later, depending upon his aptitude, he spends all his time mastering that one design.

Paris Matches Lips and Nails In Red Shades

By Ruth Anne Davis.

PROOF that Washington is neck-to-neck with Paris in the way of cosmetic innovations lies on the counter of an F street store. No sooner had the report come that smart Parisian women were matching their lips and nails than this local shop displayed new lipsticks and nail polishes in identical shades.

Paris, it seems, denies the rumors that bright polishes are passe. While the odd greens, golds and purples that ran the gamut of the color scheme during the summer months are discarded, crimsons, corals, carmines and cardinals are having lasting popularity. Fortunately, these are the shades which are easily adapted to rouges, and becoming to most types.

In shopping for your new matched lipstick and polish keep in mind that if you are a dark brunette type the deeper reds will be most becoming. If, however, you are fair-skinned and flaxon-haired, try a coral, or a light yellowish red. Another consideration, too, is your costume. You want to select a polish and a lipstick that will contrast most flatteringly with the color of your ensemble.

Fortunately for those whose budgets are held in bondage due to a nearing Yuletide both polishes and lipsticks are quite modestly priced.

"Snuggies" on Display.

"Snuggies" is the name of the warm, winter underwear on display now in a local store. Just as their name implies, they fit closely and literally snuggle up to the body keeping in warmth and permitting no winter chill to start you shivering.

They're ideal for school children for several reasons. They wash easily, cost but 39 cents and take the place of the heavy bundlesome coats which children discard on the least pretense.

Sportswomen, too, find them convenient for outdoor activities. Instead of wrapping up in heavy coats and sweaters, they wear snuggies which give them freedom of movement but keep them warm at the same time.

Slumber Socks Advised.

You'll never be bothered with cold feet if you sleep in the slumber socks knitted from the softest wool imaginable. Pull these on at night before you slip in between the icy sheets and you'll soon be so warm and snug you'll doze off before you know it.

Children, especially, find slumber socks blessings on winter nights. But adults, too, for that matter try them once and discard the hot water bottle and the heating pad.

These are knitted in pink and lavender in a size that fits any foot. Wool cords around the ankles fasten them securely so they won't slip off.

Small Boys' Neckwear.

Little boys are tickled to death with the new neckwear designed especially for them and selling for 25 cents. There are solid color ties in small sizes decorated with figures of the Big Bad Wolf, Skippy, and Mickey Mouse. Others in peppermint candy stripes come complete with collar and tie pins. These are 50 cents.

A Glove Always Clean.

Doubting Thomases may have to see this to believe it, for it sounds too good to be true. A Connecticut avenue store has some gloves and bags that never have to be cleaned. Suppose you find a streak of dirt across your new beige pair. You simply rub one glove against the other and as quickly and far more effectively than if you'd say abracadara the soil has disappeared. With the bag it's the same way. If you drop it stepping from the car, or your hand leaves a perspiration mark, you just give it a rub or two, and it's clean again.

Think what you save in cleaner's bills. A bag and gloves in light colors is generally cleaned every three or four weeks. In a year you've paid for them thrice over. With this new arrangement, there's no cleaning necessary and no cleaning bills—sheer profit from beginning to end.

The gloves are in plain gauntlet styles, simple enough for any occasion. The bags, too, are plain, but beautifully cut and finished in an elegant fashion.

Woodenware in Use.

Woodenware is taking its place on the smartest tables. For informal dinners, Dutch suppers, or bridge luncheons, it offers the hostess a chance to serve in a "different" manner.

A Connecticut avenue shop has some interesting knives and forks with natural wood handles and stainless steel prongs and blades. These would be attractive for your own use, and, of course, are unique gift suggestions.

Gift in a Big Box.

Nothing pleases a man more than to receive a gift done up in a large box. Perhaps it was this psychology that prompted a certain house to place a shaving cream, a brushless cream, an after-shave talc, a shave lotion and a container for blades in large ornamental boxes. They give you a feeling you're buying out the store for only $1. At any rate, they're attractive and useful gift sets.

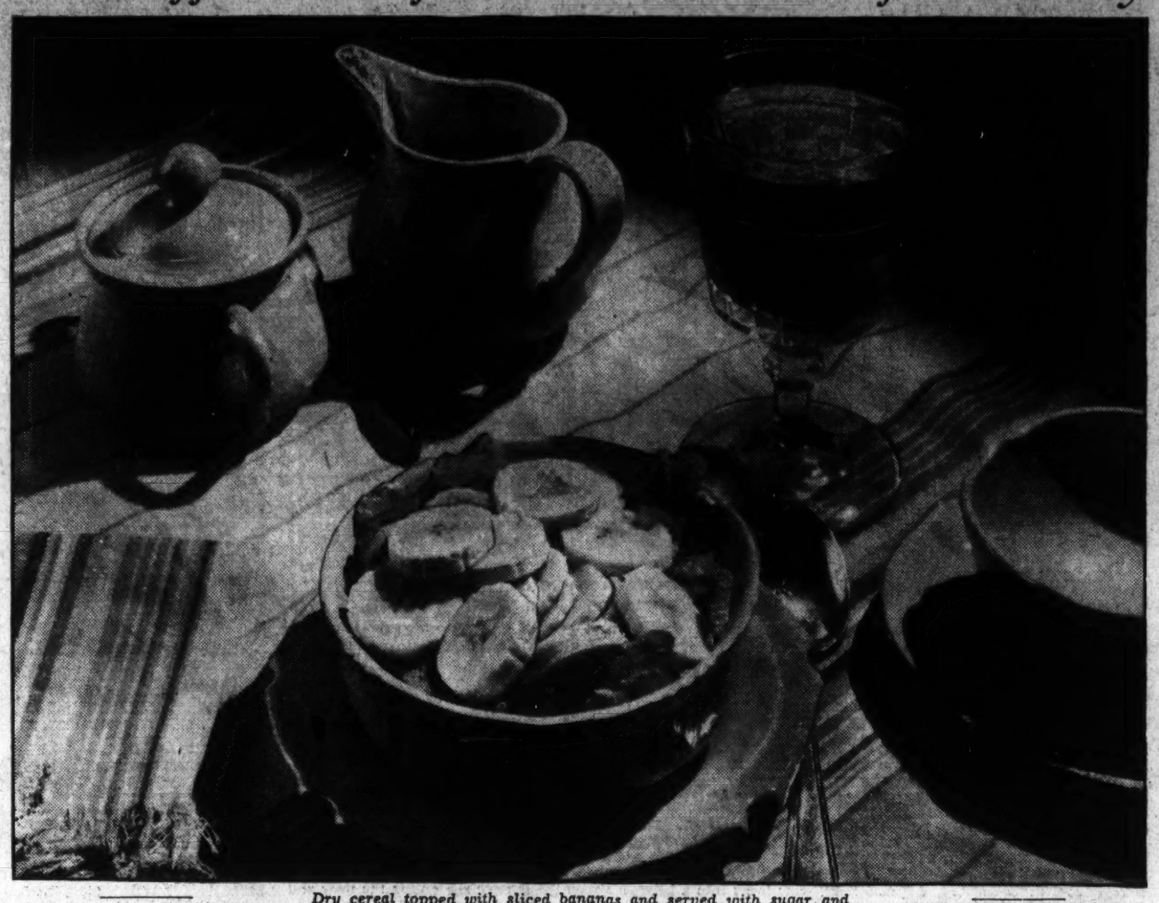
Attractive Menus for Week-End Are Suggested; Buffet Breakfast Recommended for Sunday



Dry cereal topped with sliced bananas and served with sugar and cream! Plan on this dish for the type of Sunday breakfast where each member of the family gets his own meal. It is quickly prepared and pleasantly satisfying.

Most of Food May Be Prepared and Kept in Icebox.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NEVER NEGLECT to make breakfast menus attractive. This meal is every bit as important as luncheon or dinner. In fact, any day whether it be set aside for hard work or pleasure, will be more successful if begun by a satisfying breakfast.

Week-end breakfasts are often "slip-shod" affairs, especially the Sunday breakfast. Where there are several persons of different ages in one household, Sunday breakfast is rather a progressive affair or else it is omitted entirely. In other words, Sunday morning is the time to sleep late. With members of the family arising at odd hours, it is difficult to set any certain hour for breakfast.

If this is the case in your house, plan a buffet breakfast. Let each member get his own breakfast, but have the food accessible and tempting so that this meal will not be omitted. Almost all the food may be prepared the evening before, and set on the table or in the refrigerator. The menu can be a light, but nourishing one, if dinner is to be in the middle of the day, and a little heavier if the main meal is served in the late afternoon.

In the following week-end menus there are two buffet breakfasts for Sunday, a light and a medium one.

A Squeeze at Trick 2.

The other day I ran across one of the most novel situations in play which I have ever encountered. East, one of the defensive players, led out a high card at Trick 2 and completely squeezed the dummy, thus preventing the declarer from fulfilling a three-notrump contract despite the fact that nine tricks were cold and both of the opponents' suits were stopped. East's squeezing play forced the declarer to discard one of his sure winners, as if he had retained all of his winners he would have been forced to discard a stopper in one of the opponents' suits.

East, Dealer.

East	South	West	North
1♡	Pass	Pass	Dbl.
1♠(1)	Pass	Pass	3◇
Pass	3NT(2)	Pass	Pass
Pass

1—East saw no reason not to show his other suit at the level of one despite the fact that his partner had passed.

2—South, with a sure heart stopper, and some protection in spades, decided to gamble on three notrump, encouraged by his partner's very strong bidding.

West, on lead against the three-notrump contract, decided to open a heart, knowing that his partner almost certainly held five cards in that suit and only four cards in spades. Dummy's Queen was topped by East's King, and this card naturally held the trick.

East now knew from his partner's lead of the eight-spot—marking the latter with a maximum of three cards in the suit—that South had two sure heart stoppers and, accordingly, that a heart continuation for the purpose of setting up tricks in that suit would be hopeless. However, East naturally stopped to inspect the dummy and as he inspected it he suddenly realized, to his great joy, that the gods of chance had been very good to him on this hand, provided only that his partner held one litle ten-spot. East saw that the dummy had nine sure tricks—seven in diamonds and two in clubs. East further saw that dummy had the spade suit stopped unless the queen could be led through. But—most important of all—East discovered that the dummy would be in difficulties on a second heart lead. Accordingly, East now played his heart Ace, even though he knew this lead would set up two tricks for the declarer.

On the heart lead, South followed from his own hand, but was forthwith confronted with the problem of discarding from dummy. He could not discard a spade, as he knew East would then be able to run four spade tricks, so he had to discard one of his good diamonds. East now shifted to a club and then prayed. All his partner had to have was the diamond ten, guarded only once, and South would be effectually shut out of his own hand. Fortunately for East, his partner did have the diamond ten, and the declarer was helpless. He ran his good tricks from Dummy, but was forced to concede the last three spade tricks to the East player, and his contract was defeated one trick. Had South instead of West held the diamond ten, South would not only have fulfilled his contract, but would have made five-odd, as with the diamond ten as a card of reentry to his hand, a third club trick and two good heart tricks could have been cashed.

It is obvious that had West opened a spade instead of a heart, the defense would have taken six tricks and set the contract two. However, West can not be blamed for deciding to open the longer of his partner's two suits, particularly since his own holdings in those two suits were practically identical.

Bird Washes Food Before Eating It

A huge blackbird who habitually washes every bite of food before eating it has been observed in the Grand Canyon district. Known to the inhabitants of Grand Canyon Village as Darby, the fastidious blackbird has a wingspread of more than four feet. But its size is less extraordinary than its habit of washing its food, say the naturalists who have described it in Grand Canyon Nature Notes.

Whenever Darby and its current Joan visit the village's bird feeding station, Joan waits in a nearby tree to be served First Darby picks up a morsel of food in its beak, then drops it in the bird bath to wash it off. Next it retrieves it and carries it to the waiting Joan. This same procedure is used for the entire menu, which consists of suet, bread, biscuits and doughnuts.

Packing Ideas Are Worked Out By Travelers

FASTER trains, planes and boats have simplified travel, but the old problem of packing for the trip is still a complex one. It is a safe bet with most travelers that what they need most they leave behind, while their bags bulge with unessentials.

Some of the famous women globe trotters of this country, however, have perfected the technique of travel and have worked out sensible systems of packing that are described in the November House Beautiful.

For instance, Mary Lewis, vice president of a New York store, who practically commutes to Europe, travels light by leaving at home all the trick suitcases, fitted bags and gadgets that her friends give her. In her trunk she stows away a duffel bag that can be used as a catch-all later. She never forgets cleansing tissue, a gargle, dark glasses and a typewriter and always ties a colored ribbon on the loop of her trunk so that she can spot it anywhere.

Trunk Painted White.

Gracie Allen, the radio star, identifies her trunk easily because it is painted white. She can also find her personal possessions inside, because she packs certain hard-to-find articles in revealing cellophane envelopes. Nightgowns, underwear, gloves and accessories are stowed away in different colored silk envelopes.

Ruth Page, the dancer, also leaves fancy baggage at home and travels only with fiber suitcases and fiber trunks, and when going on an extended tour she fills them with good clothes that will stand up under climate and hard wear. Any purchases she makes she has sent home directly so that she does not accumulate cargo as she goes.

Grace Moore, the opera singer and motion picture star, and Whitney Bourne, the society girl, now in pictures, both take their own sheets when they travel, and Miss Moore has also a special atomizer for spraying her throat en route. Mrs. Marshall Field always carries a smart red morocco bag, that looks like a pillow bag, but is quite apt to contain magazines, bottles and various other odds and ends she wants at hand.

Takes Wardrobe Trunk.

Carola de Peyster Kip, beauty editor, always takes a wardrobe trunk for anything less than a week-end, and packs everything methodically in the trays so that she needs only to transfer the trays to dresser drawers. Alice Hughes, the journalist, however, never takes a trunk, even if she goes to China, and limits herself to three bags, one of which contains a typewriter.

Irish Women Enter Professional Field

Dublin (AP).—Those smiling eyes of the Irish colleen these days are studying the figures on clinical thermometers and scanning down the entries in ledgers.

In increasing numbers women of the island are shouldering their way competently into the crafts and professions. Two decades ago women physicians were rare. Today they form a large bloc of the Irish medical profession.

Women vote, and do so in a vigorously independent manner. There are only three women in the Free State Dail Eireann, but many women won political offices in recent elections for local councils.

LUXURY

By MARYSE RUTLEDGE.

When Jocelyn Crane accepted the invitation of the Oliver Keenes to be their guest on a trip to Paris, she could not foresee that in screening Rita's flirtation with Prince Glazanoff and protecting Ollie from the gold-digging Carrie Franks, she would lose half a pearl necklace loaned her by Mary Derby, in love with Dick, Jocelyn's husband.

Mary cables for the necklace, intending to sell it and invest the money in Dick's business, which is nearly on the rocks. Jocelyn sends back a reproduction, planning to replace it later with genuine pearls. To earn the necessary $2,000 she agrees to pose for Ogden Temple, multimillionaire and amateur sculptor.

Meanwhile Mary and Dick have discovered the substitution of the pearls, and Dick sails for Paris, to learn what is back of it.

Jocelyn goes to dinner with Ogden Temple to arrange the details of posing. When he leaves her at her hotel, she finds Ollie in the lobby, drunk.

He let her take his arm and lead him toward the elevator, grimacing and muttering like a child about to fly into a temper. He stood scowling behind her while Jocelyn, with her hand on the door of the suite, paused.

No sound inside—yet why that sudden premonition that Rita was in the salon—not alone! After all, it was only midnight. Rita often brought friends back after the theater for a bite of supper.

Prince Was There.

With a slight shrug, Jocelyn opened the door and Ollie fretfully pushed by her into the hall of the suite. Then Jocelyn heard a man laugh behind the salon door. Glazanoff, of course. Oh, what a fool Rita was! If she had brought this man here alone——!

Despising them and herself for feeling the need of any warning, Jocelyn called, "Hello there, Rita!" and with one of her slim, winged movements she brushed by Ollie into the room, calling back over her shoulder, "Shut the door, will you, Ollie?" Here she was doing exactly what Temple had accused her of—screening Rita's mad infatuation.

"Why, Lyn—back so early!" Rita's breath came unevenly and her big blue eyes stared beyond Jocelyn.

Glatzanoff moved light-footedly toward Jocelyn. "Ah madame—toujours belle!" he said. But his leopard eyes still smoldered with the fires Rita had lit.

Ollie stood sneering from the doorway. Drunk enough to be ugly, sober enough to realize he and Jocelyn had interrupted a tete-a-tete between the Prince and Rita. "Nice li'l family party," he said. "Should have 'vited Carrie."

The big tawny Russian slowly, deliberately, lit a cigarette. "Do not be ridiculous, Keene," he said, in his low gutturals that could have a rasp to them, as well as a caress.

Tense Situation.

Rita grasped Jocelyn's arm "Don't let them have a scene," she begged, and in her small, white face her eyes widened in their deep iris blue. Rita was afraid of Ollie. Afraid of Boris.

"It's your own fault," Jocelyn said coldly, but she went over to Ollie, who was camped in front of Glazanoff, glaring with a pout of his underlip. A match to this dynamite, and there might easily be a blow-up that Rita's foolish, greedy heart had never reckoned with.

"Prince Glazanoff is your guest, Ollie," Jocelyn's voice was gentle.

"I don't like him," Ollie mumbled. Suddenly, savagely, he waved his hand. "Get out of here! Get out——"

"Ollie—please——" Rita was half furious, half pleading.

"Would you mind going, Prince?" Jocelyn's poise controlled the violence that flicked out in Glazanoff's greenish-gold eyes.

"I'm sorry, Boris. I'll see you tomorrow." Defiance in Rita's red, sullen lips.

Glazanoff bent over her icy little hand, "I always obey you, cherie amie."

He clicked his heels before Jocelyn "Mes compliments, Madame," and without another look at Ollie, strode out. There was a deadly arrogance and a threat in the lazy grace of his superb body.

"Oh, I've never been so disgraced, so humiliated!" Rita cried.

Jocelyn felt like shaking her. "Some day you'll lose Ollie," she said. "Why can't you behave yourself, Rita. You're not a child. You haven't even the courage to be in love with a man," Jocelyn went on, exasperated.

For a second the thought of Temple flashed through her head. Each, in his own way—Temple and Glazanoff—was a man who could not be played with. Yet was she any better, any wiser than Rita? Wasn't she attempting to play with Temple?

In a fever of anxiety, Dick Crane's mind went plunging across the three thousand miles that separated him from Jocelyn. All he wanted now was to reach her quickly, to end an intolerable suspense that was a premonition of danger and trouble.

His honor and faith were bound up now in clearing, for Jocelyn and himself, the mystery of Mary Derby's pearls. They had been genuine when Mary clasped them around Jocelyn's neck on the Ile de France. How and where, then, had they been changed? Not an ordinary theft, for the artificial beads carried the original clasp.

There were lines in Dick's young face that had not so marked stress even in the past weeks of business worries. "I won't cable her I'm coming," he told Mary the next day after their discovery. "It would upset her too much."

She sat in his cubicle of an office, high up among towers against the June sky.

There was a curious fate sense in Mary today. Her heart cried out: "Don't go. Jocelyn isn't the woman for you. She doesn't belong in your life." Her reason said: "He will find that out if he goes. He will find out why my clasp was on these imitations. And he'll come back to me."

Dick was talking. "Bill Marsden's lending me a thousand on the house. But it seems damned unfair to you, Mary. We—of course, you understand I'll see that you don't lose."

"Dick!" He had hurt her.

Jerkily he turned to the window, away from the photograph of his beautiful Jocelyn that graced his desk. For there had been a look in Mary's blue eyes that moved him more than he dared confess to himself.

She slipped over to him, her fingers pressing into his arm. "Dick, whatever happens, our partnership stands. I'll get the money I promised you——"

Mary lifted her small, boyish head, coppery hair glinting under the trig quilled hat. "It isn't the money that bothers me, darling," she said, and her lips, a pale pink this morning, twisted into a smile.

Mary sat down again opposite him, a narrow column of a girl-woman. "You've guessed a lot, Dick, haven't you?" she asked simply.

Mary Was Unhappy.

"I haven't been very fortunate—or happy—in my private life. My former husband," she added, after a pause, "never understood that what I wanted most was a home and children. You see," and she sounded the weariness she could hide so successfully, "being advertising manager for a furniture firm, however grand and prosperous, isn't any real answer. Being brilliant in business for a woman alone is a dreary award. Oh, my dear, having no one to share anything with——" She caught her breath, stopped short.

"I know that, Mary." Dick looked across at her, his arm flattened on the desk. Silence deepened between them again.

"Well, one way or another, it's going to be all right." Mary rose at last with a flinging back of her shoulders, her voice determ[illegible]dly gay. "When can you sail?"

"Wednesday." Dick unfolded his long limbs. With awkward gentleness he took Mary's hand. "I'd like to tell you something," he said, "You're such a grand person, and I—well, if I were that sort of rotter, I could fall for you hard—in a way. Not good enough for you, Mary. We're both—one-man dogs."

"Yes, we are," Mary answered steadily. "So there it is! Well, you'll find me when you come back. We can still be partners——" And she was gone.

Then the hours whirled by when, keyed to one purpose, Dick closed his eyes to every problem that might hold him from Jocelyn. Already he was arrowed for the trip. Beyond Paris and Jocelyn he could not and would not think.

Now the landing gongs were beating among vague floating smells of rubber, perfumes, salt air. Sounds again of music above, voices pitched to farewells.

How often he and Jocelyn had talked and dreamed of a journey like this—a belated honeymoon to France, Italy. Lands for lovers. When he should be rich! Thoughts half bitter, half sweet that creased little lines about his mouth.

He pedaled on the days to make them go faster. The mystery of the pearls threaded ghostily through his longing for Jocelyn—the rich chestnut tones of her eyes and hair, the chiseled wings of her nose and lips.

"What is she doing now?" he kept impatiently asking himself. She could never be real again until he held her tightly in his arms.

Situation Was Unreal.

Had Dick but known it, the same feeling of unreality that sped him toward her was drifting Jocelyn away from him. She was paying for Mary Derby's pearls—paying in an increasingly enchanted way. Ogden Temple, with his millions, his powerful personality, had all glamor and magic at his command. And he was far too wise and fastidious a man to repel and frighten the spirit he had divined in Jocelyn.

It was not easy for Jocelyn. There had been a difficult moment the morning after Ollie's unpleasant encounter with Prince Glazanoff. One of Temple's cars, low-swung, long-nosed, waited to glide Jocelyn away from an atmosphere barbed with ugly suspicion and envy. She had to tell Rita where and why she was going for the day.

Jocelyn, fresh and exquisite in the silk-knitted green of a sports suit, glanced from the doorway at her host and hostess. "I won't be back until rather late," she said.

Ollie's trembling, morning-after hand conveyed a glass of bromo-seltzer to his lips. He groaned. Rita was being particularly sweet to him, for obvious reasons. It had not needed Jocelyn's warning the night before. Rita wasn't letting go of Boris Glazanoff, but neither did she intend to lose Ollie.

The glance she cast at Jocelyn was not too friendly. "I thought we were lunching at the Ritz, Lynn." It was her whip-lash voice, reminding Jocelyn of obligations as a dependent guest. "I'd rather counted on you. Is your engagement very important?" Rita's deep blue eyes sharpened to curiosity between the thick, black fringe of lashes.

Lunching With Temple.

"I'm lunching with Ogden Temple in the country," Jocelyn said as she drew on her suede gloves.

"Oh—!" Rita swayed from behind Ollie's chair, the dusky scarlet of her mouth curling into a little smile.

Jocelyn disliked the implication in that smile. She said, "I've promised to pose for him," and immediately regretted the impulse that put her at Rita's mercy.

She was to regret it during all the days that followed. To begin with, Ollie made her feel that in some way she had "gone back on him." He had a grievance now. Hadn't she promised to play around with him if he gave up Monte Carlo—and Carrie Franks?

Rita's attitude, too, changed slyly. In her own greedy little mind, Rita was relieved, and cynically amused. Jocelyn Crane, the virtuous, haughty Jocelyn, making a play for the most difficult millionaire in the world! Exactly what Rita had wanted her to do, for many reasons. It gave her, so she thought, a hold on Jocelyn. It made them allies.

These Blouses Suggested For Teas and Bridges

Pattern No. 606.

THE SEASON for late and formal teas, large bridges and cocktail parties will soon be in full swing. Girls and young women need lots of variety in clothes for these occasions. And the cocktail blouse comes to their rescue. Just one dressy skirt plus several of these pretty blouses will make an interesting afternoon party wardrobe.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

LUMBAGO.

THE word lumbago means pain low in the back. The term is another of those disease designations in which the geography of the pain gives the name. Many authorities prefer the term back pain, recognizing that the condition may be due to many causes.

Pain is not often associated with kidney inflammation, although in the lay mind this is a common belief. The kidneys are situated rather high in the body—above the waistline in most persons—while lumbago is usually felt at the lower end of the spine.

Although many sources of back pain can be accurately identified, there is one type of lumbago the cause of which has so far defied detection. It occasionally occurs in epidemic form. Whatever the cause, the toxins produced have a special fondness for the muscular structures of the lower back region. The onset is, in most instances, instantaneous. The patient, seemingly in excellent health, may have occasion to bend his back and on attempting to assume the erect posture is suddenly seized with an excruciating pain, paralyzing in intensity. The pain increases in severity whenever an attempt is made to use the muscles of the back. Try as he will, the patient is utterly unable to move. It is often necessary to carry him to a car or ambulance, although some are able to walk with great difficulty. With good care the pain often subsides after a few days in bed. It may be necessary, however, to resort to powerful drugs to relieve, even partially, the intense suffering.

Sometimes the onset of the disease follows exposure. The patient may recall that he became chilled and the condition is fairly common among those who have indulged in vigorous exercise, have perspired freely, and have cooled off by sitting in a draft.

The treatment is rest in bed. The patient will require no instructions to remain quiet. On the contrary he will resist the slightest movement. Heat gives the greatest relief. Sometimes strapping the back with broad adhesive tape will assist. Recovery is usually slow. Once the individual has suffered an attack he is rather inclined toward a recurrence. In the recurrent type of the disease the use of potassium iodide has in some cases been followed with most satisfactory results. After recovery the X-ray may reveal no changes whatsoever in the bones of the lower spine.

In any case of low back pain a careful search must be made for the source of the infection. There may be a chronic backache that is more noticeable in chilly, damp weather.

The condition is so painful and at times so stubborn that prevention should be our first consideration. Dry feet, warm clothing and avoiding overfatigue will help keep lumbago away.

Color Is a Big Health Factor In Vegetables

Yellow, Green and Red Leaves, Roots Supply Needed Vitamin A.

THE YELLOW, green or red coloring of vegetables has a meaning. The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture tells us that one of the many discoveries about foods in the last few years has to do with coloring.

In the green leaves and stems of plants, in the yellow roots, also in the yellow fruits, is a yellow pigment called carotene. Now it is discovered that carotene, in the animal body, turns into vitamin A. When cows have good green pasture and good hay all winter, their milk is rich in vitamin A. When hens have plenty of green foods, the yolks of their eggs are richer in vitamin A. So we get vitamin A both ways, because we eat both vegetable and animal foods.

When we eat green or yellow vegetables—and certain red ones—we get carotene, which turns into vitamin A, probably in the liver. When we drink milk or eat eggs or butter or liver, or salmon, we get vitamin A itself, made from the carotene in the green food of the cow, hen, calf, pig, lamb or fish, as the case may be.

Dietary Necessity.

Vitamin A is a dietary necessity, because it protects the nose, throat, eyes, ears and sinuses from infection. To put it in scientific language, "the function of vitamin A in the human body is to maintain the integrity of the epithelial tissues"—and those tissues are linings.

As an extra protection for them we give to the children and often to ourselves, either cod-liver oil or halibut-liver oil, which are exceedingly rich in vitamin A that comes apparently from carotene in the green sea plants that fishes eat.

In green leaves, the yellow color of the carotene seems lost in the green, but it is there. So in the red pepper, or the tomato, it seems lost in the red, but it is there, too. In the yellow squash, of course, the pumpkin, carrot, yellow turnip and sweet potato, the yellow stands out for itself.

The green and yellow vegetables have other food values, of course. They furnish other vitamins, and several of the minerals that we need. They are important also because they help to keep the balance between the acid and the alkaline foods we eat—the green and the yellow vegetables are nonacid, or alkaline-forming foods. They also furnish bulk, which the digestive tract demands. With winter coming on, it is well to remember that the vegetables rich in carotene keep your linings in good condition and help you to avoid colds or other infections that attack those parts of the body in particular.

Carrots Best Yellow Vegetable.

Remember, these vegetables should have an important place in your diet this winter.

Carrots are the best of all yellow vegetables for carotene and, hence, for vitamin A. Squash comes next, and then pumpkin and yellow turnips.

Among the leafy vegetables, the greener they are the more carotene. New, green cabbages are a better source than the whiter heads. Collards are good, and they are a standby in the South all winter. Turnip greens, too, are hardy enough to grow well into the winter.

The pepper family is a good source of carotene and also of vitamins B and C. Green peppers and red peppers are equally good.

Corbin's Hollow Benefit Planned

AT THE FIRST ray of light on Thanksgiving morn, a happy jumble of young people, food, furniture and clothing, all crammed into one big truck, will set out from Washington for Corbins Hollow in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

The young people, including several nurses, are from the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park. For the last few weeks they have been collecting gifts to take to the isolated little community far back in the hills.

The mountain children, as big-eyed and shy as colts, know the truck is coming. It came last year. If it hadn't there wouldn't have been much Thanksgiving in Corbins Hollow and the neighboring settlement, Nicholsons Valley.

To raise money for this year's journey to the little settlement, 100 miles from the Capital, the Young People's Society of the Washington Sanitarium will present a program at 7:45 o'clock Friday night in the gymnasium of the sanitarium. A silver offering will be collected following readings, musical numbers and informal talks about the mountain people.

Those who wish to contribute clothing, food, bedding or household articles are asked to call Mrs. Barr.

Feminism Receives Setback in Netherlands

Amsterdam (AP).—Women of the Netherlands are retreating a little after having attained most of the objectives of feminism in the years immediately following the war.

They are being driven back by the economic misfortunes of this little state. Female employes of the government must resign upon marrying, and the practice carries on to commercial fields.

It is not a "back to the kitchen" movement such as goes on in Germany. The woman of the Netherlands expects to reclaim her rights when the clouds of the depression scatter.

Dr. Bittinger Dead at 73; Noted Pastor

Had Held Leading Posts in His Presbytery and Synod.

Dr. Bittinger's death closed a long and active ministerial career. He was born in Monroe County in 1861, second son of the Rev. M. H. Bittinger, pastor and pastor emeritus of the Centreville Presbyterian Church at Greenville, W. Va., and Martha Moffett Bittinger. He was graduated from Hampden-Sidney College in 1883; turned first to teaching and then to the law, and finally to the ministry, entering Princeton Theological Seminary in 1884, and being graduated there three years later.

He was obtained by the Lexington Presbytery in 1888 in the Tygart's Valley Church at Huttonsville, W. Va. In 1896 he went as pastor to Rich Valley and Saltville, Va., in 1914 to Mossy Creek Church, Jefferson City, Tenn., and came to this circuit in 1919. He was especially interested in home mission work during his ministry and in the four Presbyteries to which he belonged was a member of the Home Mission committee and chairman of two of them.

Moderator Five Times.

In 1919 he formulated the steering committee of the Synod of Virginia and was its chairman for ten years. He was moderator of the Presbytery to which he belonged five times and commissioner of five general assemblies. For over 30 years he was a member of the board of Hampden-Sidney and from its beginning a member of the board of trustees of Massanetta Springs Bible Conference. He was for a number of years a trustee of King College and Stonewall Jackson College for Women. King College conferred upon him the honorary degree of doctor of divinity.

Surviving are the widow, formerly Miss Belle Price, of Huttonsville, W. Va., and the following children: Dr. S. Moffett Bittinger Sanatorium, N. C.; Miss Mary C. Bittinger, Bunker Hill; Dr. William Rice Bittinger, Summerlee, W. Va.; the Rev. John B. Bittinger, jr., Amory, Miss.; M. Henry Bittinger, Minneapolis, Minn.; Charles L. Bittinger, University of Virginia; a sister, Mrs. R. A. Arnott, Greenville, W. Va., and a brother, H. E. Bittinger, Washington, also survive

Funeral rites for the Rev. Dr. Bittinger will be conducted at Gerrardstown, near here, Saturday morning. The rites will be conducted by the Rev. T. H. Daffin, who succeeded Dr. Bittinger as pastor of the Presbyterian churches at Gerrardstown and Bunker Hill on the latter's retirement.

W. A. Bair.

He made the run from Harrisburg to this city early today and told fellow trainmen he planned to rest until time for the return trip.

Bair had been in the employ of the railroad for 35 years. His widow and two children survive.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Dorah Fazenbacker.

Virginia Gas Tax Shows Large Gain

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—Despite a 20 per cent drop in State revenue from automobile license taxes, revenue collected from automobile and gasoline taxes combined for the first eight months of the 1934 calendar year is nearly $200,000 more than that for the same period last year.

These figures were made public by the division of motor vehicles today. The statement showed that automobile registrations totaled 300,068 for the first eight months of this year, or more than 30,673 above the same period last year. The revenue fell off because of the sharp reduction in the tax. Collections through October this year were $4,718,285.41, compared with $5,906,074.91.

Code Violation Charged To Department Store

Winchester, Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Charged with violating the section of the code of Virginia which provides that hours worked by female employes shall be posted, B. H. Hamman, manager of a department store here, has been summoned to appear at a hearing December 7 on the alleged violation. Miss Carrie B. Farmer, of Richmond, director of the women's and children's division of the State department of labor, is named as complainant.

Maryland Unit Of P.-T.A. Asks Film Reforms

Havre de Grace, Md., Nov. 22 (AP). The Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers today pledged itself to work for "more desirable" motion pictures for children and "intelligent adults," for the development of the educational phase of radio broadcasting, and for the education of children in "world understanding as the best guarantee of world peace."

The pledges were contained in resolutions adopted at the final session of the nineteenth annual congress, which adjourned its three-day session here this afternoon. There were 127 delegates and about 100 visitors present at the convention. Mrs. H. Ross Coppage, president, who last year was elected for a two-year term, presided.

Protest on "Block Buying."

"We are alarmed by the present motion pictures," stated the delegates in their resolution. "We protest the blind buying and the block buying of pictures and other trade practices which prevent local exhibitors from responding to the public demand for more desirable entertainment for children and intelligent adults."

The congress urged all members of parent-teacher associations to work for Federal legislation which would force a change in the practice of motion picture distribution to correct the situation of which it complained.

Radio broadcasters, the congress thought, were not giving as much attention to educational and cultural programs as they should. The parents and teachers of the State were asked to use their influence in securing a change in policy.

Both children and adults should be instructed in international matters as a means of understanding other people and countries and of ending war, the congress resolved.

Recommendations Made.

More frequent physical examinations in schools.

Federal legislation and organized consumer organizations to force truthful advertising of the properties and effects of food and cosmetics.

Moonshiner Bares 'Plot' To Kill Him

Federal Grand Jurors Probing Franklin County Stills.

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 22.—One of the key witnesses in the expose of Franklin County's daring moonshine whisky ring believes an attempt was made to kill him by poison.

The witness is Tom Cundiff, burly mountaineer moonshiner. He was brought here under guard to testify today before the Federal grand jury investigating the liquor syndicate, which already is suspected of one murder and of resorting to other violence to intimidate witnesses. Cundiff was before the jury most of the day.

The jurors yesterday heard "Willie" Sharp, a mountain girl reputed to have been one of the most dare-devil drivers in the cavalcades of swift automobiles that carried Franklin County "corn" to Roanoke and other cities. She recently finished a prison sentence for aiding and abetting transportation of illicit lquor.

Girl Liquor Runner.

The girl drove a pilot car, protecting the liquor-laden machines that raced down the mountain roads. Often she drove her car bumper-to-bumper with the other to prevent any pursuing machine from cutting in. Cundiff is a prisoner in the Franklin County jail. He is under a three-year sentence resulting from a brawl with another mountaineer.

Evidence has not yet been produced publicly to support the poisoning charge. But something happened to cause Cundiff to take the desperate chance of breaking out of jail. He slugged a jailer with his fist, darted out of the prison with a cellmate, stole an automobile and fled back into the mountains.

That it was no ordinary jail break, may be judged from the fact that three days later he surrendered voluntarily in the next county to U. S. Treasury agents who worked up the evidence against the Franklin county ring. They had to take him back to the Rockymount jail, but they have kept a watchful eye over him.

County Jail Kitchen.

The Franklin County Jail stands just back of the old courthouse on the straggling main street of Rockymount. The jail is entered through the kitchen. It is a neat, home-like kitchen. The wife of the jailer is busy over the stove, baking pies. "And they're going to have chicken tomorrow," she says.

The jail fare may be good, but the odor back in the prison section of the building is hard on appetites. It is a big brick room, two stories high, with cement floors. In the center of it are four steel cage cells, barely high enough to permit a man to stand.

Cundiff complained he had become infested with lice, but aside from that he was cheerful, and confident of the final outcome of the case. He is a big, husky man, with something of a reputation of being a "bad man" in the mountains.

Along the Tri-State Trail

With

C. B. Carr

Post State Editor.

We have frequently talked of huntsmen in this column—the fox-hunting kind—and this morning we present the following yarn regarding the hunting ability of a councilman at Hagerstown, Md., which we believe, is little different from many of us, particularly your writer:

"A rabbit supper was awaiting City Councilman J. David Bowman when he returned empty-handed from a hunting expedition the other night.

"Mrs. Bowman received a package earlier in the day from some one who probably knew the ability of the councilman as a marksman with the following attached note: 'Your husband went hunting today, but I don't think that he will get anything. In order that neither you nor the children will be disappointed, I am inclosing this rabbit!'

"The identity of the sender is unknown."

And up at Ohiopyle, Pa., they have found a great Northern bittern, a water bird commonly found in the northern part of the continent.

The bird had an injured wing and efforts are being made to heal the injury. Should the injury heal sufficiently, the bird must be liberated, as these birds are protected by Federal law.

Observers believe the bird was headed for a warmer climate this winter when it suffered an accident necessitating a "landing."

Mitchell Takes Place on Bench

Court of Appeals Judge Represents Seventh Maryland Circuit.

Annapolis, Nov. 22 (AP).—Judge Walter J. Mitchell representing the Seventh Judicial Circuit of Maryland, took his seat on the court of appeals bench for the first time today, succeeding the late Judge W. Mitchell Digges.

Judge Mitchell, former State senator from Charles County and president of the Senate, is the chief judge of the Seventh Circuit, which includes Prince Georges, Charles, Calvert and St. Marys counties.

He was appointed by Gov. Albert C. Ritchie on the death of Judge Digges and was elected for a 15-year term at the last election, having no opposition.

There was no ceremony connected with taking his seat. The new jurist simply donned the judicial gown and took his place on the bench with his colleagues when court convened.

Two Stricken Farmers Get Aid of Neighbors

Hagerstown, Md., Nov. 22 (Spl.). Neighbors of two Washington County farmers, John Wiles, who is confined with a fractured skull received when he fell from a load of hay, and Elmer Kephart, who is ill, husked and cribbed their corn.

Maryland State Briefs

Salisbury—Henry Messick was held in the county jail here on a tentative charge of assault with intent to kill pending developments in the condition of Walter Smullen, who, police say, was struck by a lead pipe wielded by Messick. Smullen is in the Peninsula General Hospital with a lacerated head.

Frederick—Dr. G. Bruce Crist, of Frederick, has been elected president of the Frederick County Medical Society, and Dr. Joseph W. Long, of Walkersville, first vice president. The only other new officer elected was Dr. Frank D. Worthington, of Frederick, second vice president.

Frostburg—John R. Watson, of Eckhart, Md., will head the Allegany County Baptist Sunday School Association for the coming year, assisted by Jesse Judy, Cumberland, vice president, and Melvin Grindel, also of Cumberland, secretary. The new officers were elected at an association meeting in the First English Baptist Church here. About 400 members attended.

Salisbury—Construction work on water and sewer projects here, to begin by December 15, will give employment to more than 150 men, Mayor E. Sheldon Jones estimated. The work will be financed by a $53,000 bond issue and is part of a program of municipal improvements.

CCC Corps' Continuance Aim of Bill

Rep. Darden of Virginia to Ask Year's Extension of Program.

A bill to continue for another year the Civilian Conservation Corps program is being prepared for introduction at the coming session of Congress by Representative Darden (Democrat), Virginia, according to the Associated Press.

The Virginian's measure would extend for 12 months beyond March 31, 1935, the present authorization under which nearly 365,000 men now are at work on conservation projects over the length and breadth of the land.

Representative Darden said his plan is to provide a corps of its present size with approximately the same supervisory force. Nearly 400,000 persons, including the CCC men, Reserve Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers, foresters, engineers and skilled mechanics now are on the CCC pay roll.

Although budget estimates for the CCC for the coming year have not been made public, it appears, from past costs of operating the emergency conservation work that $350,000,000 would be needed to extend the program for another year.

Only two of the 63 CCC camps in Virginia now are located in Representative Darden's Congressional district—at Seashore State Park, on Cape Henry—but the Virginian asserted he is interested in having the program continued in the interest of conserving the Nation's youth.

"Flirtation Walk" to Be Given Military Inaugural at Earle Tonight at 8:45

Army Officers Will See Story Of West Point

Army Helped Make Film; Frolic to Be Aired; Amusement Notes.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Martial music, waving flags, brilliant lights and something more than the stereotyped fanfare of a typical Hollywood "permeer" will attend the military inaugural of "Flirtation Walk" at the Earle Theater tonight at 8:45 o'clock.

It will possess an authentic Army flavor that could not be lent it in any other city in the country than Washington. It will be dignified by the presence in the audience of the highest ranking officials and officers in the military wing of the service. General Zone Manager John J. Payette has seen to that.

Perceiving in "Flirtation Walk" a story of Army and West Point life of sufficient substance and merit to justify it, Zone Manager Payette has invited the Army's most distinguished personnel resident in the Capital to be guests of the Warner management at tonight's "Army Premiere."

Army Cooperated.

The film, incidentally, was made under War Department supervision and with the full cooperation of the West Point authorities.

One of its high lights is the "Hundredth Night Play," presented by the cadets 100 nights before graduation. Other formal and informal scenes of the life of the cadet corps comprise important intervals in the action of the story.

Among those who have been invited to attend tonight's spectacular "opening" are George H. Dern, Secretary of War; Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War; Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff; Geo. George S. Simonds, commandant, Army War College; Maj. Gen. James F. McKinley, adjutant general; Maj. Gen. John F. Preston, inspector general; Maj. Gen. Arthur W. Brown, judge advocate general; Maj. Gen. Louis H. Bash, quartermaster general, and the ranking officer and his assistants of practically every branch of the military establishment.

Word reached Washington last night that when "Valley Forge," Maxwell Anderson's new play of George Washington and a critical period in the progress of the American Revolution, with Philip Merivale in the role of Washington, arrives in the National Capital on next Monday night, Ruth Weston, whose likeness adorned these pages yesterday, will not be seen in the leading feminine role.

Miss Weston has been succeeded by Margalo Gillmore, despite the fact that the Pittsburgh reviewers spoke kindly of her contribution to what they described as a great play.

Miss Gillmore's last notable appearance on a Washington stage, to the best of my recollection, was in the role of the rebellious Henrietta Moulton-Barrett, with Katharine Cornell in the stage version of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," the part played on the screen by Maureen O'Sullivan.

Will Broadcast Frolic.

The Variety Club's first annual banquet and frolic at the Willard Hotel tomorrow night will be broadcast over WJSV from 10:30 on, and for at least an hour over the network of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Arrangements for this airing of the gay goings-on were completed yesterday afternoon by Lou Brown, chairman of the publicity committee of the Variety Club, and Jess Willard and LeeEverett of WJSV.

The broadcast wil start promptly at 10:30, when George Jessel, master of ceremonies, will take over the stage and put on one of the most elaborate shows ever offered in the Capital.

There will be two bands to furnish the music and a score of big-time vaudeville and radio acts, representing the cream of all those playing in Washington, Baltimore and nearby territory, will be presented in rapid-fire succession.

Don't forget to twist that dial!

Sure enough, I was wrong about where Tom Olsen, former director of advertising and publicity at the Fox, in the Capital on a visit for a few days, has been spending his time recently. He did go from here to Seattle, his home town, and remained for quite a time, but a year or so ago gravitated to Southern California and for the past few months has made his home in Ohio, where he has been managing a string of theaters. Tom will remain in Washington at least until Sunday, then will edge into New York for a look at the high ones and when the roof of his mouth is sufficiently sunburned once more will return to the Middle West. Nice boy, Tom.

Two Ducats For a Donkey!

King Richard III may have offered his kingdom for a horse—and in the person of the eminet Walter Hampden, he already has a couple of times this week at the national—but little Perrine, "Nobody's Girl," wants a donkey!

Have you a little donkey in your home? (This is meant literally rather than figuratively!) A donkey that is a good actor? One that can play Palikare, the little friend of "Nobody's Girl," that brought her all the way from Greece to Paris, where she was forced to part with him? Of course, the parting wasn't permanent, because the little beast was faithful that the grandfather of "Nobody's Girl" finally restored him to her.

You can see for yourself that he is vitally essential to the story, but donkeys that can travel even such a comparatively short distance as from New York to Washington are rare in this automobile age.

Would Borrow A Burro.

So it comes about that the Children's Theater of New York must find themselves a nice, tractable, actable donkey right here in Washington for their production to be given in the National Theater the morning of Saturday, December 8.

It offers a reward of two free tickets for the performance of "Nobody's Girl" for information leading to the whereabouts of one small, docile donkey with stage presence that can be on hand at the National at 10:30 a. m., December 8, and remain until th efall of the final curtain.

Information should be addressed to "Perrine," the Children's Theater of New York, care of the Women's International League, 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

It has already been announced in this space that Burton Holmes' travel talk on "Soviet Russia," delivered in the National Theater last Sunday afternoon, proved so sensationally popular that it would be repeated on December 2. There is a bit of further information, however, that should be added to that.

Instead of being presented for a second time at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, "Soviet Russia" will be offered to a possibly wider public on the evening of Sunday, December 2, at 8 o'clock. On the occasion of its first engagement, this subject sold out the house. The night crowd should have them standing in the aisles.

Fun for the Kiddies.

Tonight at 7:30 the members of the National Capital Ring, No. 67, International Brotherhood of Magicians, will entertain the children at St. Vincent's Home, Fourth and Channing streets northeast, with a full hour and a half program of magic.

This is the first show of the winter season and every institution of its kind in the city will be visited. These entertainments to be given each Friday night. November 30 a performance will be given at St. John's Orphanage, 1922 F street northwest.

Gilbert Miller, in association with Lee Shubert, will produce J. B. Priestley's play, "Laburnum Gorve," in this country, in addition to the individual enterprises which have already been celebrated in these columns. The first performance will take place in the National Theater in this city on New Year's Eve, December 31. It is reported that many members of the original London company have been engaged. The play ran at the Duchess Theater in London from November 28, 1933, until September 1934. Washington is coming into its own again.

Curiosity Note.

Who knows whatever has become of Oscar & Etheldreda, that old team of roadside acrobats that used to make their jumps in a Ford? They were the past master of slow motion.

Or am I thinking of Al Schacht?

Star Visits Old Friends and New Post

Walter Hampden, distinguished interpreter of classic roles, appearing at the National this week in four famous plays, yesterday afternoon paid a visit to the executive and editorial offices of The Post. He was accompanied by Frank P. Morse, prominent Washington investment broker, who was dramatic editor of The Post when Mr. Hampden scored his memorable success here in the title role of Charles Rann Kennedy's impressive play of "The Servant in the House," with Henry Miller and Tyrone Power. Photographed above on the steps of The Post, left to right, are Mr. Morse, Mr. Hampden and Nelson B. Bell, present dramatic editor.

Wounded in Foot, Prisoner in Break Is Shot in Other

Police escorted the youth to the hospital, stood by as doctors exposed a plate, and started back to jail. In the street Robinson made a break. Deputy Sheriff L. P. Buchanan drew his gun and fired and Robinson rolled in the gutter.

He had a new wound—in the right foot.

(Trade-Mark Applied For.)

By Morgan Baker.

CONGRESS should never allow people of the distant States to feel that they do not have equal representation in the National Capital with areas in and about Washington, is the opinion voiced by Representative Virginia E. Jenekes that dims the hope of unemployed Washington, Virginia and Maryland people.

BAKER.

Many of these unemployed persons, Civil Service records show, are former Government workers with high Civil Service ratings, evidence of their qualifications to hold scores of various types of positions.

Disregarding the taxed-without-representation plight of the citizens of the District, Representative Jenckes warns local people against further effort to obtain Government jobs.

"I feel it my duty to sound a note of warning now," the Indiana Representative firmly declares, "that the Congress will never desert the policy of apportioning the appointments in the Federal service at the seat of Government among the States, Territories and the District of Columbia on the basis of population.

"Any agitation in Washington to tear down that policy can do nothing but create a feeling of antagonism on the part of Congress and the American people toward the District of Columbia and its people."

Mrs. Jenckes is reported to be one of the most active members of Congress in obtaining Government jobs for her constituents outside of the Civil Service. She recently compiled a list of all the college people in the Agricultural Adjustment Administration where, incidentally, Indiana's quota of appointments is said to be far above normal. The list was designed to show that the patronage appointees were as well qualified and efficient as Civil Service employes.

All alumni of the University of Washington in Government service particularly are invited to attend a luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. today at the University Club. Dr. L. P. Sieg, university president, will be the guest of honor.

The Government Printing Office baseball team is sponsor of a benefit dance to be given tonight from 10 to 1 in Harding Hall. Proceeds will go to the team. Walter Shomo (P), manager, announces that the next of the winter series of baseball dances will be given in January.

An instrument for measuring a series of distances has just been invented by Roy L. Swenson (F), Forest Service. It will facilitate, he claims, measurements such as the cambium layers of trees.

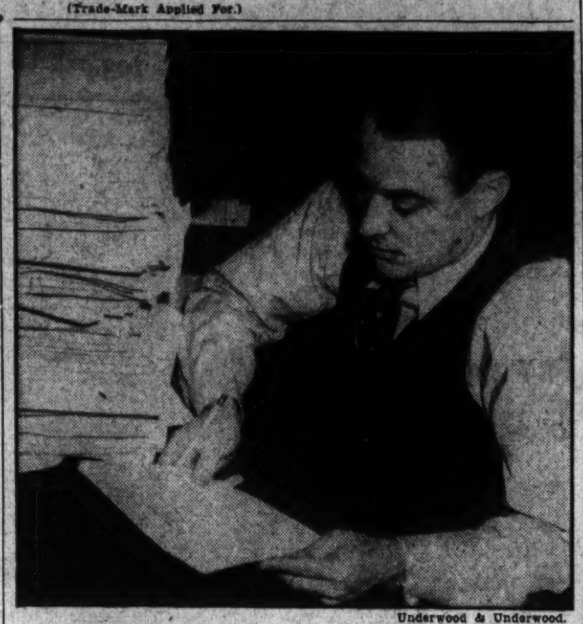
You will receive tickets to (F) Loew's Fox (stage, George Jessel, Shirley Ross and other acts; screen, Ketti Gallian in "Marie Galante"); or to (P) Loew's Palace (Greta Garbo and Herbert Marshall in "The Painted Veil"); or to (C) Loew's Columbia (Maurice Chevalier and Jeannette MacDonald in "The Merry Widow.")

Diary office hours are, daily, except Sunday, 12 noon to 1 p. m. and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays, 12 noon to 2:30 p. m.

Employes of Federal Housing Administration will give a dance at the National Press Club tomorrow night, beginning at 10 o'clock.

SIX new varieties of chrysanthemums originated by hybridizers of the Bureau of Plant Industry have been named by F. D. Richey, bureau chief, and B. Y. Morrison (F), in charge of the division of plant exploration and introduction in that bureau. The annual "mum" show in the greenhouses at Agriculture, Mr. Richey points out, is the outgrowth of the chrysanthemum breeding work which the department has been doing for more than 30 years.

Names of the new mums are: The Beverly T. Galloway (named in honor of the first chief of the bureau), a rosolane purple seedling; Navajo, Antares, Aldebaran, Pleiades and Marie Brilliant.



Underwood & Underwood.

Although Congress will not convene until January, William J. McDermott, jr., (F), bill clerk of the House, is already doing a land office business and expects to have about 4,000 new bills ready for introduction when the Speaker's gavel falls at the opening session. Mr. McDermott is seen at his desk with a few of the bills. Should the Senate succeed in producing another 1,500 new bills, an all-time record will be established.

Coming "ANNE of GREEN GABLES"

Sidney Howard Is Author; Premiere at National; Star Is Favorite.

Twenty-four hours after the announcement in this space that Gilbert Miller planned to present two new plays in the National Theater in this city the weeks of December 10 and 17, titles unknown, it leaks out that the first of these will be Sidney Howard's "Ode to Liberty," a gay Parisian sort of thing, in which Ina Claire will find precisely the type of vehicle to which her manifold talents are best suited.

It is being a little more than vaguely intimated, also, that the following week, a piece called "Petrified Forest" will turn out to be the medium of Leslie Howard's return to the American stage from the American and British screens.

It has become one of the axiomatic rules of the contemporary theater that whenever a playwright indites a comedy calling for a glittering, beautiful, quick-witted and lovable heroine, he writes it with Miss Claire in mind, hoping fervently that she will accept the role. Since Miss Claire can appear in only one play a season (for an "Ina Claire production" never runs for less than a season, and more frequently for two or three) she selects them with care.

Nimble Dialogue.

In "Ode to Liberty" she has a vehicle which provides her with the rich and nimble dialogue and the deliciously up-to-date dramatic situations that her style demands.

With "Liberte Provisoire," the most successful play of the last Paris season, as his source, Sidney Howard has written a play about a woman and three men in a Paris penthouse, one a banker, one a literary man, and the third, believe it or not, a radical of the deepest dye. Walter Slezak, the engaging young actor who scored a triumph in "Music in the Air," appears as one of the three gentlemen—we shall not divulge which.

Other roles are performed by such distinguished players as Nicholas Joy, Paul McGrath, Colin Hunter and Stanley Jessup.

Record of Successes.

For the record, in case you have forgotten, among the plays in which you have seen Miss Claire are "The Awful Truth," "Grounds for Divorce," "The Last of Mrs. Cheyney," "Our Betters" and "Biography."

Mr. Howard's productions include his adaptations of "Dodsworth" and "The Late Christopher Bean," and such outstanding plays as "They Knew What They Wanted," "The Silver Cord, "Ned McCobb's Daughter," "Lucky Sam McCarver" and "Yellow Jack."

It was Eddie Foy, one of America's finest comedians, who wanted to play "Hamlet." It was David Warfield, a master of slapstick, who wanted to make them cry in "The Music Master"—and did. And now it is Ina Claire, America's foremost comedienne, for whom playwrights have been writing gay, amusing roles for years, who wants to change everything and play an unpleasant role, "just to see what would happen."

Miss Claire is very earnest about it all.

Tired of Scintillating.

"I am tired of saying all the scintillating things playwrights have been giving me to say year after year," she says. "I am tired of being the light, airy lady who amuses everyone. What would happen if I were to play a mean, cruel, bitter woman for a change? I don't know, but I would like to find out."

In the first place, it is Miss Claire's theory that it is much easier to be tragic on the stage than funny. She finds the burden of keeping an audience amused a heavy one. If a tragedienne loses the tragic note for a moment, she says, few in the audience notice the difference. But if a comedienne lets down for a single second she loses her audience completely and the play itself comes tumbling down on her unfortunate head.

Plays at High Pitch.

"There is a tenseness about comedy," she declares, "that an audience never suspects. It must be kept at high pitch all the way. One false note and an entire scene may be destroyed. Being pleasant for an entire evening is no laughing matter for an actress. But being unpleasant—well, I'd like to try it for a while."

Miss Claire can say what she will, but the fact remains that she is without equal among American comediennes, and it would be a great loss to the theater if she suddenly decided to turn into a sort of Theda Bara.

There is no danger of that, however, in the current comedy, "Ode to Liberty," for in that play she is a nimble-witted, beautiful gay lady, whose affairs become extricably wound up with three gentlemen.

Sidney Howard, in his inimitable fashion, has written a comedy admirably suited to the witty Miss Claire, who will have to reserve her impulse to be tragically wicked.

Certificate of Election Is Obtained by Hale

Augusta, Me., Nov. 22 (AP).—Gov. Louis J. Brann and the executive council today issued a certificate of election to United States Senator Frederick Hale, of Portland, whose election was protested by the Democrat he defeated by 1,200 votes in September.

Over a period of several days the principals, Hale and Democratic National Committeeman F. Harold Dubord, of Waterville, inspected the 306,000 ballots cast for Senator. The inspection reduced Hale's apparent victory margin of approximately 1,700 to 1,200.

Straight From the Studios

Artistes of Hollywood Go in for Interior Decorating; About That Charleston Contest, Back in '24; Gelatin Jots and Tittles.

By Speed Kendall.

Hollywood, Nov. 22.—One important profession is being hit hard by a new fad among the feminine beauties of filmland. It is interior decorating.

MADGE EVANS.

The married, as well as the single, are going in for it with a vengeance, and they claim there is no end to the fun of shopping around for furnishings.

Director John Cromwell returned with his wife, Kay Johnson, from a trip abroad and the first thing she announced yesterday was that she will do her own interior decorating at their new home in Hidden Valley.

Maybe the film folk are getting their ideas from their own people. It will be remembered Bill Haines became an interior decorator when he temporarily gave up his screen career, and so did Jetta Goudal.

Mae West, Elissa Landi, Madge Evans, Adrienne Ames, Glenda Farrell and June Knight are only a few who supplied their own ideas for the interiors of their homes. Miss Knight even furnished the design for her home in Van Nuys.

Credit Goes Where Due.

Comes now Theodore O'Day, a screen writer, with the claim that he, and not Betty Grable, won that Charleston dancing contest in St. Louis on November 13, 1924.

Bert Wheeler, who was master of ceremonies at the contest, recalled that Miss Grable won it and that he had told her to look him up when she grew to be a young lady. She did, and is now making a personal appearance with Wheeler and his partner, Bob Woolsey, in Salt Lake City.

O'Day writes in to say Miss Grable may have been a winner in one of the preliminary events, or a runner-up, but that he was the final winner. He has newspaper clippings, he says, to substantiate his claim.

Glad to make the correction.

Navy Relief Aid Sought on Radio

Support of Dance Asked by Mrs. Swanson.

Tracing the history of the Navy Relief Society to 1904, when it was founded after the annual Army-Navy football game, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson made a radio appeal yesterday for support for the organization.

"In 1933 the Navy Relief Society distributed over $100,000 for relief, including loans and outright gifts. The vast majority of this went to dependents of the enlisted men of the Navy and the Marine Corps," she said.

Mrs. Swanson asked the public to participate in the society's Navy-relief ball, to be held Thanksgiving night at the Willard Hotel.

The Rev. Buck to Speak.

The Rev. Calvert Buck, superintendent of the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, will discuss "The Church and the New Social Order" during a meeting of the Washington Open Forum tomorrow at 8 p. m. in the Annapolis Hotel. Discussion will follow the talk, and the meeting is open to the public.

Kindler Scores With Selections From the 'Ring'

Eloquence and Sincerity of All-Dagner Program Is Commended.

By Ray C. B. Brown.

National Symphony Orchestra, Hans Kindler, conductor; concert in Constitution Hall Thursday afternoon. All-Wagner program; excerpts from "Der Ring des Nibelungen."

In undertaking this exposition of selections from the "Ring," Dr. Kindler made the orchestra face another test of its calibre. That the outcome was not so successful as in the case of Sibelius' second symphony not long ago should be no ground for discouragement. The shortcomings observable yesterday were those that one would note in comparison with an ideal performance by an organization fully manned in all choirs. A large string section and augmented power in the brasses and woodwinds would have added the missing factor of overwhelming sonority.

Minor Flaws Only.

While it is true that there were some patent flaws in performance, such as the very slight lagging of the brasses behin the beat in the Walkurenritt and some weak entrances in all the choirs, they were of minor import. A completely satisfactory performance of this epical music is possible only by a virtuoso orchestra. As for the productions of the "Ring" in the Metropolitan Opera House, with its inadequate and overworked orchestra, they have to be heard by auditors whose imaginations supply many deficiencies.

What Dr. Kindler and his men gave us on this occasion was enjoyable for its fine spirit, its fidelity to the composer's intentions, its moving eloquence, and its essential sincerity of purpose. The well-chosen selections were the Entrance of the Gods into Valhalla, Siegmund's Spring Song, the Ride of the Valkyries, Wotan's Farewell and the Magic Fire music, the Forest Murmurs, Siegfried's Death and Funeral March, and Bruennhilde's Immolation. They constituted a good epitome of the saga.

Voices Unnecessary.

Listening to this purely instrumental unfolding of the tale, one was struck afresh by the fact that the absence of singing voices detracted no whit from the efficacy of the score. Wagner's thories did not work out exactly in practice. One is reminded of Cecil Gray's remark that "the composer who most insistently proclaimed the aesthetic falsity of the symphonic poem and the inability of programme music to make itself intelligible without the elucidatory aid of stage action, achieved his most complete and honomgeneous artistic success with a work which is to all intents and purposes a symphonic poem to which voice parts have been not too skillfully added."

Mr. Gray was referred to "Tristan und Isolde," but the comment applies as well to the "Ring," which is extended symphonic poem of epic dimensions. Singers who move upon the stage, trying to impersonate beings of more than human potencies, and straining their vocal chords against the surge of the orchestra, only interfere with the illusion wrought by the music. Wagner thought in terms of minor gods and demigods, and then called upon earthlings to fill the roles.

An active imagination in the hearer is better than a cast of "stars" in any one of these music-dramas. With fancy alert for the suggestions of themese in the rich harmonic fabric, one can gain more enjoyment from such readings as the National Symphony gave us yesterday than from a theatrical setting.

N.Y. Is Ready For Irish 'Alumnus'

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (Spl.).—The annual visit of the football team of the great University of Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., to New York City for the football game with West Point scheduled for Saturday, brings about a phenomenon, one of the strangest and most curious in all this country and therefore probably the world, since it could happen no place but in this mad, grand land.

This is the annual gathering of that amazing clan of self-appointed Notre Dame alumni which will whoop and range and rant and roar through our town from sunup till long after sundown Saturday in honor of a school to which they never went.

The West Point supporters at the Yankee Stadium will be numerous and vociferous, but of the 78,000 or so spectators, three quarters will be bawling at the top of their lungs for Notre Dame du Lac. Of this group, probably no more than 1 or 2 per cent has ever trod the sacred campus.

Braggart and Pest.

The graduate of Notre Dame is a quiet, well-educated gentleman for the most part, loyal to his team but willing to see the other fellow's side of it and concede him his virtues. The self-appointed Notre Dame alumnus is a drunk, a braggart, a windbag and a pest. He comes charging through the crowded subways bearing their tightly packed human cargo gameward, his face red, his mouth distorted, the blue and gold feather in his hatband, reeking of gin, loud-mouthed, unsteady and offensive.

He waves his vulgar roll of greenbacks and screams for bets on "Noter Dame." He sweats and smells, and treads upon the ladies and shoves his way through the crowds, elbowing and pushing, yelling—"who wansha bet on the Army? I got money here sash Noter Dame'sh bes' team in the country. Who'll gimme odds? Hey, feller! You with the Army colorsh! You wanna bet?" I have often wondered what the grave, quiet fathers of Notre Dame would think if they could catch a glimpse of the creatures who ally themselves with the school.

They start all the disorder and fights at the game and manage to insult and annoy every one sitting within 20 feet of them. When the game is over you see them on the field, brawling and rolling and tumbling, or massed around Col. Ruppert's goal posts, swaying them or clawing them down. And Lord help us later in the day if Notre Dame has won. They fill the bars and tap rooms and hotels, the lobbies and the dining rooms, theaters and the cinemas, louder, drunker, more objectionable than ever, yelling, boasting, climbing over people and behaving like insufferable boors.

Reports to Headquarters.

The worst specimens manage somehow to ferret out the stopping place of the football team, or the headquarters of the coaching staff and members of the university, and they jam the lobby of this place, and the hallways, and the rooms if they can get in, fawning on the players, slapping the back of the coach, drinking up what liquor is available, roaring and yelling, starting fights, get themselves ejected by the management and, all in all, make their splendid contributions

Magoffin and Guyon Chief Speakers at Banquet.

The annual football banquet given by Eastern High School was held last night in the school dining hall. It was largely attended by members of the faculty, captains of the five high school grid teams, coaches and Eastern players.

Reserves Seen Giving Edge To Army

Odds, However, Are Even on Battle With Irish; Stanford Choice.

By Stuart Cameron.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—The toughest football game of the week to forecast is Army-Notre Dame and here, without further ado, is one vote for West Point.

As was the case last year Army and Notre Dame present the handicapper with a choice of precision and smartness as contrasted with terrific but unharnessed power. For better than three-fourths of the 1933 game precision and smartness had it. Then Notre Dame's scattered strength jelled and the Irish surged on to win by a single point.

Army is a smart club again this year with plenty of forward strength in Stillman and Clifford, among others, and a half back, Jack Buckler, who is once more flirting with all-America honors. Notre Dame counters with Robertson at center and Melinkovich and Elser in the back field.

Odds Are Even.

Betting commissioners make it an even wager. Forecasters of this section probably will be divided fairly even. The reason, then, for picking the West Pointers can be attributed to little more than hunch. Hunch, plus a belief that Army this year has the reserves it lacked in 1933.

This is the last big Saturday of football and, except for the two local contests, the pathway of choices seems fairly easy. Second game of the New York list is Syracuse vs. Columbia, and the invaders seem to form the safest bet.

Midwestern experts look for one terrific battle in the meeting of Minnesota and Wisconsin, but they figure that the all-winning Gophers are due to continue their string after a tough fight. Illinois is picked to whisker past Chicago, and Purdue to do likewise with Indiana. Northwestern is generally favored over Michigan, but our midwestern operative figures Michigan, so Michigan it is.

Three on the Coast.

There are three games of consequence on the far coast. Our selector likes Oregon State over U. C. L. A., which may seem surprising, but New York is too far removed from Los Angeles to raise question. He also names Stanford over California, which is easily understood, and Washington over Washington State.

From the Southwest came selections of Texas over Arkansas (Friday), Southern Methodist over Baylor, Rice over Texas Christian.

Back in the East again: Yale over Harvard, Princeton over Dartmouth and Colgate (by miles and miles) over Rutgers are other choices. The Colorado Aggies are picked over Colorado College in the chief contest of the Rocky Mountain sector.

Kansas Jayhawkers Ready for Spartans

Lawrence, Kans., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—Stressing both offensive and defensive measures, the Jayhawkers of the University of Kansas practiced outdoors this afternoon for the first time in two days in preparation for the invasion of Michigan State's once-defeated Spartans Saturday.

Temple Seeks Rose Bowl Bid

Undefeated Team, Coached by Warner, Anxious for Invite.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22 (U.P.).—Temple University, youngest major "football" school in the United States and the East's only unbeaten big-time eleven this season, today launched a determined drive to send the Cherry and White players to the Rose Bowl.

Placards and banners during a big parade, speakers at the mass rally in Mitten Hall and grizzled Pop Warner, one of the Nation's best-known coaches, broadcast that the Temple Owls were logical candidates for a trip to Pasadena—if they win the two remaining games on their schedule against Villa Nova and Bucknell.

A Good Record.

Although Temple has been playing football only ten years, the Owls of 1934, who represent a student body of 11,000, has the best comparative record of any major eleven in the East—after a season that was extremely sanguinary for other would-be champions.

The Owls are particularly desirous of going to the Rose Bowl if Stanford is selected Saturday, as expected, to represent the Pacific Coast Conference in the bowl for the second straight year.

Glenn Scobey (Pop) Warner, 63-year-old founder of the football system that bears his name and current pilot of the Owls, came out flatfootedly for the first time today and told the United Press, "Certainly I hope Temple goes to the Rose Bowl, and I hope we play Stanford there. If we win our two remaining games, I know of no other team in the East or South that will have a better right to make the trip."

Pop, who is older than Temple University, which was founded 50 years ago by the late Dr. Russell H. (Acres of Diamonds) Conwell, emphasized that a meeting between Stanford and Temple would be a gridiron "natural"—not because of the "vengeance" angle which some writers have concocted, but because of the teacher and pupil angle.

Harbors No Ill Will.

The venerable "Carlisle Fox" stressed that he harbored no ill will toward Stanford nor toward Tiny Thornhill, the assistant who succeeded him as Stanford coach after the 1932 season.

Warner emphasized that when he quit as head coach at Palo Alto to come to Temple he did not do so under fire at Stanford, as is widely believed.

"I left Stanford," he explained, "because I was offered a larger salary at Temple and because I saw a grand opportunity for building up in this Philadelphia school. I considered the Temple offer more

George Zaharias Meets Garibaldi

Wrestling roughness in the raw will return to the Auditorium next Wednesday night when George Zaharias resumes an old enmity with Gino Garibaldi in a 2-out-of-3 fall exhibition.

Appearing here several times previously, these two brawling bruisers always have set new high for rough-house action. They are about even on their meetings to date and both will be seeking to establish unmistakable superiority in the impending bout.

G. W. Is Host To Nodaks Tonight

Is Favored to Win Final Night Game of Year at Stadium.

BACK in winning stride after a well-deserved 10-7 victory over West Virginia last week, George Washington's multi-colored football team opposes North Dakota tonight at Griffith Stadium in the final night game of the season. The kick-off will be at 8 p. m. and the odds favor another George Washington victory.

The Sioux, however, disagree with the odds, and, with the memory of a crushing 27-6 defeat suffered on their own field last season still fresh in their minds, are bent on upsetting the Colonials. The visitors are certain to offer plenty of resistance, and win, lose or draw, they'll cause G. W. many anxious moments.

For six visitors it will be the final game of their collegiate careers. Capt. Len Sauer, center; "Sunny Jim" Gehrke and Bill Goethel, guards, and Irving Kupcinet, full back, are the regulars finishing their careers. Reserves are Harold Tait, end, and Herman Witasek and Clyde Huddleson, half backs.

Eye on Leemans.

North Dakota is determined to stop Tuffy Leemans, George Washington's nominee for All-American honors. Coach Jack West has constructed his defense especially to trap the slippery half back, believing the Wisconsin Wizard to be 90 per cent of G. W.'s offense.

West also has several offensive tricks up his coaching sleeve, saved especially for this game. Scouts who saw the Nodaks beat St. Thomas last week opine that they pulled their punches, and that tonight will see the full force of their attack hurled at the Colonials.

He will not appear in the starting line-up, but G. W. will have its collective eye peeled for Bobby Campbell, fastest half back on the visiting roster. Campbell is a climax runner and a good one. He can zif-zag through broken fields or smash a line, although he never has been called upon to hit a line as stout as G. W.'s.

Starting Back Field.

Kupcinet, Witasek, Blanchette and Charbonneau will comprise North Dakota's starting back field. The line, which will match George Washington's in heft, will be Falgren and Smart, ends; Chumich and Gainor, tackles; Goethel and Sowl, guards; and Sauer, center.

The same eleven that took the field against West Virginia last week will start for the Colonials. Victory in this game would give the downtown school a record as good as that of any previous year since Jim Pixlee took up the coaching reins, six wins, two defeats and one tie.

Outsider Wins At Downs

Black River Pays Backers $46; Other Long Shots Score at Track.

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—Black River, a rank outsider, won the La Salle claiming purse for juveniles, the feature event on today's card at Epsom Downs. High Hand II was runner-up in the 5½ furlongs race and New Flag finished third. Black River paid $46.00, $17.10 and $6.90.

The outsider, ridden by L. Haas, got away to a flying start, took a three-length lead and withstood the game challenge of the favored High Hand II in the stretch drive.

Long shot players had a good day, with most winners paying off in two figures.

Jockey G. Arnold was suspended for eight racing days because of adjudged rough riding on Try King in the second race. It looked from the stands as if he bumped out Sun Worship turning into the stretch.

Cloth Top won the cofeatured seventh race over the mile and one-sixteenth, Fingal was second in this event for 3-year-olds and Thistle Guy, third. The winner rewarded his backers with $6.30 on each $2 straight ticket.

Cantrell Sold.

St. Joseph, Mo., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—Guy Cantrell, veteran former major league hurler, and Eddie Marleau, both right-handers, were sold today by the St. Joseph Club of the Western League.

Two School Tilts Here Today

Western Plays Gonzaga; Landon Faces Friends; Central Travels.

A COUPLE of old football rivalries flare up today on scholastic gridirons as Western High meets Gonzaga and Landon Prep faces Friends School in the only two local contests of the week.

Central High journeys to Petersburg, Va., where it plays Petersburg High this afternoon, while Alexandria High goes up against the formidable Fredericksburg High eleven at Alexandria.

Annually one of the most colorful schoolboy clashes of the season, the Western-Gonazga tussle promises to wax every bit as heated this afternoon as it has in the past. The game will be played on the Gonzaga Field, starting at 3 p. m.

Rated About Even.

Gonzaga, fresh from its 7-6 win over Eastern High, is nearly an even choice to fight the Georgetowners to a standstill. Western, though tied by Eastern, 6-6, boasts a 27-0 win over St. John's, which, in turn, tied Gonzaga. Western beat Roosevelt, 13 to 6, while Gonzaga defeated the Rough Riders, 9 to 0.

Coach Orrel Mitchell of the Purple will be without the services of one of his outstanding backs, Jim Durkin, who broke his collarbone in the Eastern game. Heckner, powerful tackle, also may be on the sidelines with a badly injured thumb.

Western, a week ago, defeated Washington-Lee High, 13 to 0, exhibiting plenty of strength in the process. Gonzaga fell, 6 to 0, before the Little Generals in the opening game of the season.

Impressive Improvement.

With Dick Tressell, newly eligible tackle, in the line-up, Western has displayed impressive improvement in its recent games, allowing Buzz Parker to take an end position.

The Friends-Landon scrap, scheduled at Landon's new field for 3 p. m., finds Friends a slight favorite. St. Alban's strong team beat Friends, 19 to 2, and Landon, 47 to 6. Bill Stallings, Landon's star full back, will be playing his last game of the season, as will his teammates, Capt. Bob Sands, Lamar Brown and Vernon West. Sands and Brown are a pair of hard-running backs, and West a guard.

For Friends, Jack Barr, Roger Davis, Charles Busby and Bob Perkins, backs; Charlie Grant and Don May, centers, and Wilson Compson, left end, also are playing their final games.

Central, a vastly improved team from that which played through the early part of the season, leaves at 8:30 a. m. for Petersburg.

Risks Fine Record.

Alexandria's powerful aggregation runs the risk of ending a fine season with a defeat by tackling the Fredericksburg outfit coached by Johnnie Fenlon, former George Washington back-field ace. It will be the graduation game for such stars of the Twins as Lee Fones, Nappy Nugent, Paul Shu, Buck Ewald and Lee Varney.

Dave Harris Sold To Cracker Team

Catcher Roy Spencer Goes to Baltimore Orioles.

Two former Nats figured yesterday in the various trades engineered by club owners at the Louisville player mart.

Outfielder Dave Harris, released by the Nats to Albany after the close of the 1934 season, was sold by the latter club to the Atlanta team of the Southern Association in exchange for Outfielder Taft Wright and $4,000 in cash.

Catcher Roy Spencer, whom the Nats traded to Cleveland in the winter of 1932-33, was sold to the Baltimore Orioles yesterday by the Buffalo club, which had received Spencer from Cleveland in a deal last summer.

Generals in Scrimmage Pointing for S. Carolina

Lexington, Va., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—Tilson's Washington and Lee regulars and reserves battled for half an hour in scrimmage this afternoon for the second consecutive day, perfecting their attack for South Carolina.

The first-stringers reeled off a succession of first downs after about ten minutes of play, after which Preston Moore, sophomore, broke away for a 25-yard run and the only touchdown of the afternoon.

Chicago Cubs traded Pitchers Guy Bush, Jim Weaver and Outfielder Babe Herman to Pittsburgh for Pitcher Larry French and Outfielder-Infielder Freddie Lindstrom.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—The tireless hunt of Chicago's Clubs for a first-class southpaw hurler finally succeeded today at the big major-minor league player mart when they obtained their long-sought prize, Larry French, along with Outfielder Freddie Lindstrom in a straight trade with Pittsburgh for pitchers Guy Bush, Jim Weaver and Outfielder Babe Herman.

In swinging the deal, the Cubs beat Manager Bill Terry, of the Giants, to the draw. Terry offered Carl Hubbell to the Pirates for Lindstrom and French. He planned to send Lindstrom to the Cubs in another trade.

Not since 1920, when Big Jim Vaughn's star was setting, were the Cubs able to get a left-hander of established worth until they pulled the outstanding deal of the Louisville meeting today.

Optimistic Over '35.

They had Art Nehf several years ago, but he was on his way out then. And, while they still hoped to complete the big reorganization of their hurling staff through the acquisition of Fred Frankhouse, star Boston Braves right-hander, they were almost hilariously happy and optimistic tonight over prospects of a National League pennant in 1935.

The deal for Frankhouse was close to consummation, with the Braves ready to part with their star but insistent on receiving Outfielder Kiki Cuyler and Infielder Woody English in exchange. The Cubs balked on English, offering Stanley Hack, young third baseman, and Cuyler.

Pittsburgh, which has been casting bait for Bush a long time, also was well satisfied although it disliked to part with French, one of the greatest workhorses of the National League. The Cubs also have scught Lindstrom, a Chicago sandlot product, for years and planned to convert him back to a third baseman.

Broke Finger Twice.

It was a known fact that Lindstrom wasn't exactly popular with the Pirate front office, althought injuries, including a twice broken finger, had more to do with his disappointing performances since leaving the New York Giants than poor spirit.

The hard-working French pitched 262 innings in 49 games for the Pirates last season, winning 12 and losing 18. He is 29 years old. Lindstrom broke the same finger twice, and played in only 96 games, batting .288. Bush, who has been one of the Cubs' most ardent workers for nine seasons, was the third most effective pitcher for Chicago last season, winning 18 and losing 10, despite a battle against falling weights. Weaver, obtained last season by the Cubs when the St. Louis Browns refused to make a final down payment of $15,000 for his contract, won 11 and lost 9. He is the giant of baseball pitchers, standing 6 feet 5.

Herman Hit .304.

Babe Herman, obtained from Cincinnati two years ago, suffered an early slump last season, but batted well at the finish for a season's average of .304. The Pirates, however, may use him for trading purposes.

On the basis of the number of deals made, the Cubs so far have been far busier than any other major league team in rebuilding. Since the close of the 1934 season, these developments have reorganized the team:

William Walker was replaced by Philip K. Wrigley as president; Manager Charlie Grimm was named vice president with full power to make deals; Pitchers Dick Ward

GEORGE EARNSHAW.

Doesn't Know Whether Any Other Team Is Anxious for Him.

Assumes He's Through; Went to Chicago in Big Mack Deal.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22 (A.P.).—The Evening Ledger today quotes George Earnshaw, Chicago White Sox pitcher, as saying that because he was offered a salary cut in his 1935 contract he, apparently, is "through with baseball."

"Unless I'm traded," the Ledger quotes Earnshaw as saying, "there is every reason to believe I will not be with Chicago next season. The Sox have sent me a contract calling for a cut in salary.

"It looks like I'm through with baseball. I don't know whether any other team wants me. I don't know if Chicago wants me. So I am assuming I'm through with baseball."

Earnshaw went to the White Sox in Connie Mack's big day of trading a year ago, when the Athletics disposed of Mickey Cochrane, Lefty Grove, Rube Walberg and Max Bishop.

J. Dean Seeks $25,000 for '35 Season

Tells Moguls He Would Accept "Not One Cent Over or Under."

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—The price Jerome "Dizzy" Dean will charge the world champion St. Louis Cardinals for his 1935 services will be $25,000—not 1 cent more nor less—he said tonight.

Dizzy, whose words had a business-like tone that belied his nickname, said that when he was in St. Louis recently, Sam Breadón, owner of the Cardinals, and Branch Rickey, business manager, offered him $15,000 and offered his brother, Paul "Daffy" Dean, $7,500 to sign contracts for next season. The Deans refused. Dizzy said.

The elder Dean said he didn't know what price Paul would ask for his contract.

One-Year Contract.

What Dizzy wants, and what he will get, he said, is just $25,000 for a one-year contract. He indicated he was in no hurry to sign—that he might wait to learn whether rumors that Lew Wentz, wealthy Oklahoma oil producer, had purchased the Cardinals were true.

Rickey tried unsuccessfully today to get Dean to talk terms. Dean said he had come to Louisville in connection with his outside money-making activities, and that he wouldn't talk contract. He revealed his holdout price in an interview.

Dean also disclosed that the Cardinal management recently did him a favor by reducing the commission his business manager, Bill DeWitt, gets on his revenue outside the money he gets from the ball club.

Commission Is Cut.

DeWitt, who is treasurer of the Cardinals, at first had a contract to get one-third of Dizzy's outside earnings. This commission now has been reduced to 10 per cent.

Dizzy came to Louisville unannounced last night and said he would stay a day or so. He insisted his visit had no connection with his pitching services, saying he came here to transact business matters with DeWitt.

Louisville is the Nation's temporary baseball capital and trading headquarters with owners and managers assembled in connection with the minor leagues' convention.

"I am glad," Dizzy said, "that Louisville has a chance to see me."

Gophers Take Train for Wisconsin

Eight Thousand Rooters Follow Team for Final Game.

The annual renewal of the feud between Gophers and Badgers is expected to turn into a vicious struggle with Minnesota expressing annoyance over Wisconsin's failure to protect its field from rain and snow.

Accordingly, the Gophers are ready to shoot their "double full back" back field of Beise and Kosta into action.

The Gophers have virtually given up on getting much service from Glenn Seidel, regular quarter back, whose condition still seems precarious, and Babe Levoir will be the starting signal caller.

Eight thousand Gopher rooters will follow the team.

Madison, Wis., Nov. 22 (A.P.).—A dummy scrimmage against the freshmen eleven today completed Wisconsin's practice on defense in preparation for Minnesota's invasion. Before starting on defense, which has been emphasized all week, the Badgers took time to brush up on their offense, paying particular attention to their pass plays, which are expected to comprise their only weapon against the Gophers.

Northwestern Ready For Michigan Game

Evergold Gives Star Porter Horse Laugh

By Walter Haight.

EVERGOLD was insulted. In the parade to the post he glanced at the odds board. There was no mistaking it. That was 15-1 quoted on No. 3 and No. 3 was the figure on the saddlecloth of the gelding. Evergold glanced down the board. Yes, No. 4 was 4-1 and that was Star Porter. Evergold chuckled, or the equivalent in horse language, and lifted his head with a motion which seemed to say, "Well, we'll see about that. Star Porter is that thing from the Ral Parr stable that broke my track record at Laurel. I'll beat him today or my daddy's name wasn't Ladkin."

COUCCI.

Old Evergold was right. Over at Laurel, he ran the best race of his career to set a new mark of 1:11 for six furlongs and the next day Star Porter ran the course in 1:10 4-5. Evergold's name was printed on the program as the record holder just once.

Gains His Revenge.

And so Evergold gained revenge yesterday. It was Star Porter which seemed to have the race safely stowed away at the eighth pole and it was Evergold, under a slashing ride by Silvo Coucci, which fairly flew up on the outside to stick a head in front of the Parr colorbearer at the all important wire. And it was Evergold's tickets that the betters cashed down under the stands at the rate of $30.90 for each $2 investment.

Whether Evergold was determined to keep an eye on Star Porter will never be known, but the fact remains that Evergold was away last. Coucci did hurry the gelding, but allowed him to work his way into best stride. Star Porter had broken just ahead and responded to the urging of Jockey Robertson, to gain on the leaders.

Weaves Finding Path.

Coucci evidently knew Evergold was in a running mood, for he weaved this way and that trying to find a path through the field.

Meanwhile, Hope To Do, a recent surprise winner, and Merrily On were burning the early oil out in front of the field, with the others of the field of 11 packed behind them. They had reached the far turn before Evergold began to move. Star Porter had already begun to shoot through on the inside, but Coucci took Evergold wide. Around the field went the white and green of his shirt, but he was still too far out of it to give his backers real hope.

Star Porter lost no time in collaring Hope To Do, and with that one disposed of, it appeared that the Parr horse would be an easy winner.

Wins By a Head.

But those who were in the act of circling No. 4, Star Porter as the winner on their programs, did not reckon with Coucci and Evergold. Five lengths away from Star Porter at the sixteenth pole, Evergold shot up as if perched on a projectile. With Coucci riding like a little mad man, Evergold came across the line with a head margin to spare. The tiring Hope To Do was a stagering third.

Once a man wears a pair of these shoes he turns into a "shoe fanatic"... a regular footwear bigot! He'd almost rather go barefoot than wear any other shoe.

Bowers Wins Exciting Semifinals Match From Axtell in Rock Creek Tournament

Winner Gets 74 Against Rival

Meets Rippy in Finals; Vinson and McCarthy to Clash Sunday.

HAROLD BOWERS, who learned most of his golf tricks from East Potomac's Mel Shorey, arose from a sick bed yesterday and defeated the elongated Pat Axtell, 2 and 1, in the semifinals of the Rock Creek turkey tournament.

Bowers' victory sent him into the finals against Claude Rippy, heavy favorite. They will clash for the title at 2 p. m. Sunday.

The match was hotly contested from the start, ten of the holes being halved. Bowers, flashing his slow, lazy swing, and playing in his characteristic care-free fashion, shot the 18 holes in 74, while Axtell did 76.

Axtell took the lead by winning the third with a par 3, lost the fourth, and won the eighth to go 1 up again. Bowers sank a 15-footer on the ninth to even the count.

After Axtell had won the tenth with a 4, Bowers rammed home another 15-footer for a birdie deuce on the eleventh for a win, captured the twelfth to become 1 up, and the thirteenth to go 2 up. They halved the next four holes. During his three-hole winning streak Bowers was 1 under par. He shot the incoming nine in 35.

Gene Vinson, of Manor, District champion, and Martin F. McCarthy, of Beaver Dam and Columbia, District "champion of club champions," will meet Sunday at 12:45 o'clock at Congressional Country Club. They will clash over the 18-hole medal route, with the winner to be declared the "Capital Champion." Roland Mackenzie, Congressional pro, completed arrangements for the match which was suggested by Col. Edwin Halsey, secretary of the Senate.

Vinson is the favorite, but in McCarthy he will be meeting a rugged, scrapping golfer. Vinson was medalist in the National Amateur sectional trials at Five Farms, in which McCarthy also qualified. In the National proper, at Brookline, Vinson was eliminated in his first match by Rodney Bliss, and McCarthy defeated two good golfers before losing to Bob Kepler in the third round. Recently McCarthy won the ...ual "Champion of Champions" tournament at Congressional.

A nine-hole blind bogey turkey tournament will be held Sunday for women golfers at Manor. Mrs. D. M. McPherson, in charge, already has received 50 entries. The entrance fee is 25 cents.

Maury Fitzgerald, stocky Kenwood golfer, had nine one-putt greens yesterday at Congressional. This streak of putting enabled him to shoot a 77. He used up only 28 putts for the 18 holes.

Putting like a champion, and aided by four birdies, R. T. Knight defeated Al Waters, 3 and 2, yesterday at Anacostia to enter the semifinals of the intra-mural golf tournament at University of Maryland. J. R. Smith defeated Bob Leapley, 2 and 1, and Alfred Rabbitt put out H. White, 5 and 4. Knight will engage P. Walton and Smith meets Rabbitt. Ray Turner engages the winner of the Smith-Rabbitt match.

Shute Defeats Paul Runyan By 4 and 3

Ezar Tops Harry Cooper, Winning on 37th Hole With Eagle 3.

MELBOURNE, Nov. 22 (AP).—Joe Ezar, of Waco, Tex., scored a sensational victory over Harry Cooper, of Chicago, on the thirty-seventh hole today to reach the semifinals of the Melbourne Centenary Professional golf championship, along with three other Americans.

An eagle 3 on the thirty-seventh enabled Ezar to down Cooper.

Craig Wood, of Deal, N. J., eliminated Jimmy Thompson, of Los Angeles, winner of last week's $5,000 Centenary Open, 2 and 1. Densmore Shute, of Philadelphia, 1933 British Open champion, defeated Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., American pro titleholder, 4 and 3, while Leo Diegel, of Philadelphia, pushed out Australia's sole remaining contender, Martin Smith, of Victoria, 7 and 6.

McLean Triumphs.

The struggle between Ezar and Cooper was one of the most thrilling ever seen here and was followed by a great crowd, a majority of whom were openly sympathetic with the Texan.

Plainly disturbed by the gallery's behavior, Cooper missed a 3-foot putt on the thirty-sixth which would have given him victory. Ezar made a brilliant tee shot on the short thirty-first, the ball landing squarely in the cup but bouncing out.

Shute, reaching top form at last, cracked out a superb 66 in the morning round against Runyan, 2 under the official record, to lead, 8 up. He slumped slightly in the afternoon, but easily coasted through to victory.

Thompson's poor putting cost him any chance to remain in the $2,500 tournament. Wood, who was steadier with the irons, made several remarkable recoveries from bunkers,

Experts Feel Upsets Due In Tomorrow's Big Games

NEW YORK, Nov. 22 (AP).—It will be even money and take your pick so far as Notre Dame and Army are concerned on Saturday, but what are the odds against Wisconsin, California or Harvard pulling another football miracle such as Yale's conquest of Princeton last week?

Underdogs of the deepest dye are these three as Doc Spears' Wisconsin Badgers prepare to face Minnesota's thundering herd; California attempts to stop the rush of Stanford's mighty Cardinals, and Harvard, already beaten four times, casts about for ways and means of halting Yale.

Most experts concede the Crimson by far the best chance to score an upset. Strictly speaking, however, it won't be much of a form reversal should Harvard win. The soundness of the usual advice to toss away the form charts whenever two members of the Big Three get together was never more strikingly illustrated than last Saturday when Princeton, unbeaten in 15 games, went down before Yale's savage defense, although the Tigers were 3-to-1 shots with virtually no takers on the short end at game time.

The same psychological situation which helped Yale last week will be battling in Harvard's corner. More to the point, perhaps, it seems impossible that Yale's "iron men" can duplicate their Princeton performance and inevitable that there should be a big letdown in the Eli camp. Harvard, ready to shoot the works, will be fully prepared to take advantage of any opening the Elis may give.

Wisconsin scored one of the season's many stunning upsets last week by eliminating Illinois from the Big Ten championship race, but even the Badgers' most enthusiastic supporters can see no real chance of stopping Pug Lund, Stan Kostka and others of that powerful Minnesota combination which has ridden rough shod over seven successive opponents this fall. Any tendency toward Gopher overconfidence was quickly corrected when the Badgers upset Illinois. Minnesota, with at least a share of the conference title within its grasp, unquestionably will apply the pressure from the start and there does not seem to be the man-power in Spears' squad to cope with the Gophers at their best.

Colgate Holds Final Workout for Rutgers

Hamilton, N. Y., Nov. 22 (AP).—The Colgate squad of 33 players left for Summit, N. J., tonight after a final workout for the Rutgers game. The team will go from Summit to New Brunswick Saturday. Coach Andy Kerr warned his squad to expect a hard game as he said Rutgers is in fine psychological position to score an upset.

Two Changes Made In Cornell Line-up

Pearce of Eastern To Wed Miss Fick

College Romance Culminates in Marriage Dec. 27.

A college romance will culminate in the marriage on December 27 of Hardy Pearce, Eastern High School assistant football coach, and Miss Marion E. Fick, former Eastern High School student.

Pearce and Miss Fick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick A. Fick, 520 Seventh street northeast, became acquainted at George Washington University. They were graduated in the class of 1933.

Pearce, a tackle on G. W. football teams of 1930, '31 and '32, received his master's degree last June and was appointed to the Eastern coaching staff this fall.

Tigers Practice Passing, Defense

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 22 (AP).—Passing and pass defense occupied the attention of the Princeton squad most of the afternoon as the Tigers held their last long drill in preparation for the Dartmouth game. Coach Fritz Crisler was not satisfied with the team's aerial work against Yale, but it did well against the third team today, knocking down most of the passes tossed from Dartmouth formations and connecting frequently on long heaves by Garry Levan and Katz Kadlic.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 22 (AP).—Larry Kelley, Yale's brilliant sophomore end, is getting a perfect view of college games this year, and, what's more, isn't paying his way in to do it.

And the greatest kick Kelley is getting out of this football season, he said today, is wondering what his high school coach is thinking these days as he picks up the papers and reads, "Kelley Catches Pass and Runs for Touchdown."

The 19-year-old sophomore, whose feats on the gridiron this year are recalling to the sons of Eli the work of Tom Shevlin and Frank Hinkey, two of Yale's football immortals, smiles as he says, "My high school coach told me the only way I would ever see a college team play would be to pay my way in."

Lawrence Morgan Kelley was born in Conneaugh, Ohio, and moved to Williamsport, Pa., at the age of 8. In due fashion he eventually reported for the high school team there and finally managed to play one season.

It was at the end of that year of high school football that Kelley's coach predicted how the present Yale star was to view college games, if he was to see them at all, going to believe in you?"

"I must have been too terrible for words," said Kelley, "but I was determined to show him he was wrong. I'm sure he's getting as big a kick out of reading that I am seeing college games from an end's position as I am in proving to him he was wrong."

Kelley, who wonders if anybody ever doubted he is Irish, went to Peddie from high school, and although 9 miles from Princeton, selected Yale mainly because he "liked" Early McArthur, former Blue star, who was his coach at the prep school.

The youth who scored the winning touchdown against Princeton last week, shattering the Tigers' great record, admits he has "lots to learn." "I wrestle 'em now," said Kelley. "Anything to get them down and make them stay down."

Kelley credits Jerry Roscoe with a great deal of his success this year. "He throws a feather ball," said Kelley, "and could hit a dime anywhere, if he had to."

The 6 feet 2, 185-pound wingman is cocky and self-confident, and explains it by saying, "If one doesn't believe in himself, how are others

V.M.I. Gridders To Lose Seven Veterans

13 Members of Varsity Are Seniors; Play Last Game Nov. 29.

LEXINGTON, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Seven of the 11 players who have started most of the games for V. M. I. this season will be playing their last intercollegiate football when they meet the Gobblers of Virginia Tech on Maher Field, Roanoke, Thanksviging Day.

In all, 13 members of the Flying Squadron are seniors, and most of these have seen service at one time or another during the season. Nine letter men and one or two prospective monogram wearers will be lost by graduation.

Capt. Jack Zimmerman, center, and three other regular starters in the line will have their last chance at Tech's gridders and their final chance to register a Thanksgiving Day victory, which has eluded the Cadets since 1929. John Burgess, guard; Carlyle Lowe, tackle, and Charlie Hancock, end, are the other members of V. M. I.'s stout forward wall.

Meredith Urick, driving full back, and Tucker Watkins, called by Coach Bill Raftery the surest blocker he has ever coached, are back field regulars that will close their gridiron careers next Thursday. John Penn and Eddie Law have been in action repeatedly during the season, though Law has been kept on the bench for several weeks by an old injury.

John Childress and Felton Riley are two other letter men who will be among the missing next year. Childress has performed gallantly as Zimmerman's understudy, and Riley has been under fire at guard after having been shifted from the back field.

Three reserves are numbered among the players that wind up their careers on Maher Field. They are Bill Brown, center; Temple Ryland, end, and Bill Williamson, another wingman.

Carolina Court Stars Turn Professionals

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 22 (AP).—Two members of the University of South Carolina's Southern Conference championship basket ball team of 1933 departed unannounced for Texas at 2 a. m. today, taking with them a large portion of the Gamecocks' prospects of climbing back to a circuit title in 1935.

Plebes Keep Middies Posted: '— Days Until Army Battle'

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 22 (AP).—A visitor to the Naval Academy, unfamiliar with the position the Army-Navy football game occupies in the life of the institution today, is likely to overhear the following conversation:

"How many days, Mr.——?"

"Nine, a sleep and a butt, sir."

Which, when interpreted, meant that an upper classman asked a plebe how many days remained until the football game, and the plebe replied, nine, a night and a part of a day.

From the time that the Academy begins the school year in the fall it is the duty of the plebes to keep track of the days until the game. Time is reckoned around the clash of the two services' elevens.

Over the side entrance to the gymnasium, where the building is joined by an arcade with Bancroft Hall, the midshipmen's dormitory, is a huge blue and gold schedule of the Navy team, ending with "—— days Army."

Every day it is the duty of specially detailed midshipmen to place the proper number in the blank space so that everyone entering the gymnasium can tell at a glance how long before the middies and the cadets meet in their traditional battle.

Harvard Holds Light Drill For Yale

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 22 (AP).—The Harvard varsity football squad went through one of the shortest and lightest workouts of the season today when it completed its serious preparations for Saturday's objective clash with highly favored Yale. None of the traditional final practice ceremonies was observed, for no stirring speeches were made by the coaching staff and the tackling dummy escaped the fire.

The Crimson squad remained in the stadium only an hour, barely time for a satisfactory signal drill by the starting eleven, which lined up with Dubiel and Kelly, ends; Burton and Adlis, tackles; Brookings and Capt. Gundlach, guards; Comfort, center; Haley, quarter back; Moseley and Watt, half backs, and Jackson, full back.

Head Coach Eddie Casey, his assistants and every one of 38 players who will entrain for New Haven at 9 a. m. tomorrow, appeared hopeful of toppling the Elis, although "Ducky" Pond's men have piled up against four mutual rivals, Brown, Army, Dartmouth and Princeton, the impressive total of 63 points, 26 first downs, 529 yards gained by rushing, and 338 by passing. Against those teams, Harvard totaled only 17 first downs, 247 rushing yardage and 69 by passing.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 22 (AP).—Cheered by its students and band, the Yale football team today completed heavy preparations for the traditional Harvard battle with a spirited two-hour workout, which began in the bowl and ended under the floodlights on Anthony Thompson Field.

Following the practice, Coach Ducky Pond said, "I will start the same eleven men who played last week against Princeton in the Harvard game. Both Jerry Roscoe and Kim Whitehead are in shape along with the rest of the squad."

Generals Looking For Tough Battle

Carolina Is Reported to Be Eager for an Upset.

Lexington, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Those who have seen South Carolina play this year brought word to Lexington this week that next Thursday's game will offer the Generals plenty of opportunity to prove their mettle. And with a Southern Conference championship at stake, there has been plenty of hard work for Coach Tex Tilson's squad this week.

Again this afternoon the Generals were sent through a tough practice session, and a scrimmage is on the menu for tomorrow as a climax for the week. The squad will get a rest Saturday, but will be back in uniform Monday afternoon.

Navy Stresses Trick Plays In Drill

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Forward and lateral passes, spinner and other trick plays were stressed by the Navy gridiron squad in a lengthy offensive scrimmage session this afternoon as the Middies continued preparations for the forthcoming battle with the rival Army Cadets. The opposition was furnished by a strong combination of varsity and B Squad players.

The big team twice carried the ball the full length of the field to touchdowns, after which a good deal of the time was spent in reeling off scoring plays inside of the enemy's 20-yard line. Borries, back field ace, was the big cog in this phase of the workout, the scrubs being almost wholly powerless to stop him. Tossing and receiving of passes, whether of the rifle kind or long heaves, generally was of a high order.

Officials of the Navy Athletic Association today began distribution of tickets for the big game, a day in advance of the usual time. Approximately 8,000 tickets were placed in the mails. The work will be completed within a few days.

Said Colonel Paul Jones: "It takes more than skill to make whiskey like this . . . it takes pride"

ANY man can make whiskey. A few can learn to make it well. But only a man with a jealous pride in his product can make a great whiskey.

And because Paul Jones Whiskey is made today by that kind of men, we believe you will prefer it. It is made by Frankfort, America's largest independent distilling organization—a company that for four generations has been making the finest quality whiskey by the slow, sure quality methods of the past.

Frankfort Distilleries make Paul Jones by the slow, costly, old-fashioned method that yields a full, rich flavor you can get in no other way. Evergold, Paying $30.90, Gains Revenge Over Star Porter in Bowie Feature when Coucci brought him back to the winner's circle and I believe I heard a horse laugh when that $30.90 mutuel was displayed.

Great Drive Brings Head Victory

Coucci, who rode three winners for the day, put up another of his incomparable finishes astride Dark Hope in the mile and 70 yards of the fifth race to get the 4-to-5 favorite home on top by a head. Gallant Mac offered stubborn opposition and was an easy second, six lengths clear of Royal Guard. Coucci rated Dark Hope perfectly while Gallant Mac cut out most of the running. The choice just got up in the last stride.

Hidden Lore Victor.

Hidden Lore, a 10-1 shot, came up on the outside to win the first race by a nose from the favored Grand Prince, with Hereward, a fast finisher, taking the third money. It was a 6-furlong sprint run in the slow time of 1:15 3-5, and Jockey Meade was in trouble most of the way with Grand Prince. Brown Torch and Alcodema, prominent in the first furlong, were nowhere in particular at pay-off time.

A poor start marked the second race, for maidens over the 5½-furlong course, but it did not affect the favorite. Robertson had Headin Home away winging and the son of Strolling Player was never headed. Saxapal, a paddock tip, was second most of the way, but failed to menace the leader. Third money was garnered by Flying Snow. Headin Home paid a $3.90 mutuel.

Canterboy scored his second victory of the meeting in the third race. Ridden by J. Lynch, the Canter colt galloped home a length in front of Twoaday and three lengths ahead of Backfence. The last-named battled with Minna for the early pace-setting honors and hung on well for the show money. Canterboy was well played at $9.60.

A lot of money was dumped into the machines on Stocks in the sixth race, and the gelding made no mistakes. Charlie Rosengarten took the plater to the front around the upper bend and kept him there in a hard drive with the unreliable swatter. The latter came from far out of it to run the winner to a half length. Big Show was headed out of the place. Stocks paid $6.80.

Coucci rounded out a triple when Out Bound, paying $9.80, won the nightcap by two lengths. Meridian Queen was second, a length and a half before Deedie.

Americans Win From Japanese, 6-5

Nagoya, Japan, Nov. 22 (AP).—America's barnstorming baseball players nosed out another one-run victory over the Nippon All-Stars today. Thirty-five thousand fans saw them win, 6-5, despite the more powerful stick work of the Japanese.

The Niponese combed Joe Cascarella for four triples, four doubles and six singles before Jimmy Foxx relieved him in the eighth. The Americans combined their ten hits with four Japanese errors to win. The longest blows of the invaders were doubles by Lou Gehrig and Earl Averill.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIDDEN LORE, $23.60, $6.30, $3.90; GRAND PRINCE, $2.90, $2.60; HEREWARD, $3.60.

HIDDEN LORE, keppt close to the leaders after getting away nicely, came stoutly when entering the home stretch and held on strongly after gaining a slight lead. GRAND PRINCE saved ground the entire trip, raced ALCODEMA into defeat, then fought it out stubbornly. HEREWARD worked his way up on the outside, but could not better his position during the stretch drive. TRUE ROMANCE went well. HAIR TRIGGER was held safe when the final issue came. BROWN TORCH had brief early speed.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good for all but King Rock. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 1:43. Off at 1:48½. Winner, E. McGhee's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEADIN HOME, $3.90, $2.40, $2.50; SAXOPAL, $3.50, $3.50; FLYING SNOW, $4.20.

HEADIN HOME, hustled into the lead directly after the break, shook off stout contention from SAXOPAL after reaching the home stretch, then drew out slowly. SAXOPAL, a strong factor from the beginning, made frequent efforts early, then held on well. FLYING SNOW raced strongly in the first half-mile, then weakened, but was best of the others. PEEPER was unable to threaten. BRAYDON failed to rally when placed to strong urging. SWEEP VESTAL broke well, but dropped back immediately, then was held safe. ETHAN ALLEN stopped early. KING ROCK was away poorly.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:17. Off at 2:18½. Winner, H. Dongan's b. g. (2), by Canter—Comice. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTERBOY, $9.60, $6.10, $4.20; TWOADAY, $7.30, $5.30; BACK FENCE, $7.60.

CANTERBOY found racing room on the inside after the start to enter a forward position. Came around the pacemakers when reaching the home stretch to move clear at mid-stretch, but was shaken up approaching the finish. TWOADAY, suffled back during the opening furlong, secured racing room in the last half-mile and closed stoutly while bearing out at the end. BACK FENCE was used up racing with Minna and he weakened. JIM JOHN went well placed and had no excuses. MINNA tired after a half-mile. BANISH FEAR was in much trouble during the opening furlong and fell back. She was steered very wide thereafter.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Thomas Tench Claiming Handicapp. For all ages. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:48. Off at 2:53½. Winner, Shandon Farm's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EVERGOLD, $30.90, $12.20, $6.70; STAR PORTER, $6.10, $6.50; HOPE TO DO, $4.80.

EVERGOLD, lacking early speed and a trailer during the first three furlongs, gained resolutely on the outside of his field in the late stages, then closed with a rush to get up in the final strides. STAR PORTER found racing room on the inside when reaching the leaders and held on stoutly after gaining command inside the closing furlong. HOPE TO DO set a fast pace for five furlongs, then faltered. LADY HIGLOSS could not threaten during the final drive. BOLD LOVER was strongly ridden and had no excuses. POMPEIUS lacked speed and could not enter contention. ST. STEPHENS tired. MERRILY ON displayed early speed. MISS PATIENCE was taken to the outside for the start. She stopped as did GIGGLING.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Benjamin Tasker. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:23. Off at 3:23½. Winner, J. W. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARK HOPE, $3.60, $2.30, $2.20; GALLANT MAC, $2.60, $2.50; ROYAL GUARD, $3.20.

DARK HOPE, full of run while following in close attendance of the leaders in the first six furlongs, responded nicely when shaken up in the last five-sixteenths and then continuing strongly was up in the last few strides. GALLANT MAC, in hand while forcing the early pace, shook off MISS MONOA when ready, then continued strongly when forced to a drive. ROYAL GUARD, badly outrun early, finished with good courage, but was unable to menace the first two. CARABINIER II went well throughout. MISS MONOA failed to respond when shaken up.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:51. Off at 3:54. Winner, S. L. Burch's b. g. STOCKS, saving ground after being sent into a forward position, went up on the inside of STONE MARTIN to take command entering the home stretch, then held on strongly when placed to punishment in the last furlong. SWATTER, badly outrun in the early stages, circled his field and finished with a belated rush. BIG SHOW bettered his position gradually, then closed gamely approaching the finish. VESTED POWER went evenly and showed a good effort. FAIRLY WILD was outrun and could not enter contention. POMPOLEON failed to rally when placed to punishment. STONE MARTIN weakened after being rated until forced to a drive. VOLTA MAID stopped.

MERIDIAN QUEEN moved clear after reaching the back stretch, saved ground thereafter and held on gamely when challenged. DEEDIE bettered her position steadily and made up ground during the stretch drive. JIMMY D finished gamely nearing the end. SUN ABBOT was held safe when the real issue came. TRIOLET was steered very wide throughout. ROCK COVENTRY was unable to reach contention. FAIR BILLY and SOUND MONEY tired.

SIXTH RACE—One and

Odds on Maryland Over G. U. Drop, May Reach 8 to 5; Interest Is Rampant

Rally, Parade Are Held at Hilltop

Coaches of Both Elevens Confident, but Won't Predict Victory.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

As belligerent as a couple of stray bulldogs, Georgetown and Maryland yesterday completed the heaviest part of their preparations for tomorrow's game with long drills that lasted well after dark.

The odds still leaned toward Maryland as Georgetown men rallied to their colors and covered all Terp wagers. Maryland was a 3-1 favorite at the beginning of the week but from all indications it will be no better than 8-5 at game time.

A huge bonfire, followed by a pep meeting and parade through Georgetown, touched off the Hilltop's pre-game program last night. Coach Jack Hagerty addressed the students through the medium of a radio talk with Roy Markest, and promised that the team would play 60 minutes of real football. He did not, however, predict a Georgetown victory.

Interest Is High.

At Maryland the bonfire will be lighted tonight. There will be a huge rally in Ritchie Coliseum and a torchlight parade. Interest in the game it at fever pitch.

Alumni gatherings of both schools will be held tonight, with the Maryland coaches scheduled to address an "M" Club get-together at Sholl's and the Georgetown mentors addressing a banquet of the law class of '24 at the Willard Hotel.

Special trains from Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Pittsburgh will transport Hoya alumni to Washington for the game tomorrow and virtually all Georgetown seats have been sold. The Maryland stand was sold out a week ago.

To Hold Light Drill.

Georgetown will taper off with a light workout at Georgetown Prep this afternoon. Tonight the players will be quartered at the Congressional Country Club to guarantee them plenty of rest. The team will not leave for College Park until a half hour before game time.

Hagerty yesterday sent the team through a lengthy dummy scrimmage against the fresmen, who used Maryland plays, or what Maryland plays they know. The varsity also went through a dress rehearsal of the strategy to be used tomorrow, revealing an attack possessing more tricks than a magicians' convention.

Hagerty is satisfied with the team's condition, although he would like to have Joe Saverine and Al Vacarro available. Neither will be able to play because of injuries. Although he realizes Georgetown is going into action in the role of underdog, the former Hilltop star concedes Maryland nothing.

Looks for Hard Game.

"I look for a hard, clean game," he said yesterday, "and I'll not be satisfied that either team has won until the final whistle has blown."

Faber, too, was loath to predict a Maryland victory. He would rather play the game and talk about it later, although he admitted it was going to be a very strenuous afternoon—for Georgetown.

"The squad is in good condition, there's plenty of pep and enthusiasm, and if the boys play the game they're capable of playing Maryland fans will have nothing to be ashamed of," he said.

Use Same Line-up.

Maryland probably rely on the same eleven that all but whipped Indiana last week. The backfield will comprise Gormley, Sachs, Guckeyson and Sothoron, one of the finest quarters to carry the ball for the Black and Gold in recent years.

In the line will be Ennis and Willis, ends; Minion and Stalfort, guards; Birkland and Simpons, tackles, and Andorka, center.

and Bud Tinning were sent to the St. Louis Cardinals with cash for Pitcher Tex Carleton; Pitcher Pat Malone was traded to the Cardinals for Catcher Jimmy O'Dea; and French and Lindstrom were obtained for Bush, Weaver and Babe Herman.

Atlanta Sells McKee.

Atlanta, of the Southern Association, today sold Outfielder Dickie McKee to Tulsa, for $1,500. Third Baseman Eddie Taylor also went to Tulsa for an unannounced price.

Baltimore traded Third Baseman Jim Stroner to Sacramento for Leo Ostenberg, utility man.

Bert Niehoff was named manager of the Oklahoma City club of the Texas League.

Thomson Is Traded.

St. Paul traded Pitcher Myles Thomson to Indianapolis for Pitcher Phil Weinert and Shortstop Dud Lee. St. Paul then sent Lee to Dallas in exchange for Charles Barnabee, a left-handed pitcher.

The Birmingham Southern Association club obtained Outfielder Nick Etten and Shortstop Tony Malinosky from Pittsburgh.

Toledo got Harry "Hub" Walker from Montreal.

Catcher Art Veltman goes to Los Angeles from Pittsburgh.

Toledo obtained Catcher George Susce from Detroit.

The Fort Worth club of the Texas League purchased Outfielder Murray Howell, of Toronto.

toward giving the school a bad name. Few, if any, stop to think when they groan, or fume and say. "Another one of those Notre Dame guys." Stew or brawler staggering about the place, or whooping it up in defiance of decency, good manners and good taste has been no closer to Notre Dame ever than the feather in his hat or the pennant in his hand.

And this business that I have described is a phenomenon purely of that one game, and each year I note that it grows worse. There are no self-appointed Colgate or St. Mary's or Tulane or Purdue alumni when those teams come to visit our town. But there is some sweet magic about the name Notre Dame that annually draws the damnedest rabble out of its warrens, all claiming kinship with the school, a connection which, as I say, is utterly false.

A Part of Spectacle.

There is nothing to be done about this. It is, I suppose, a part of the great spectacle, and the best you can do is trip them up as they go roaring by, if you can, or sit quietly and hope they will hurt themselves, which, of course, like true drunks, they never do. There is nothing that the proud old university can do about these ill-mannered and boorish self-adopted sons except to hope that when a self-respecting citizen of New York sees some lout in a coonskin coat thrown open, a soft hat perched on the back of his head in which is stuck a blue feather with a gold "N. D." on it, who carries in one hand a pennant with which he jabs and hooks everyone as he waves it, and in the other hand a bottle, and who bustles and thrusts and bawls, threatens and bullies, tramples and crushes, the citizen will know that not by any possible stretch of the imagination could this ridiculous hoodlum have the remotest connection with Notre Dame.

Joe Turner Signs Teacher for Fight

Mickey Landis, a fighting school teacher, will lay down his books and lift up his dukes to do eight rounds of battle against Bob Lowry in the semifinal to the Ray Impellittiere-Marty Gallagher feature at the Auditorium next Thursday night.

Landis, an instructor at the Bullis School, of this city, is touted as one of the greatest club fighters ever to come from the Lancaster (Pa.) area. A main-eventer throughout Pennsylvania and New Jersey, he intends combining his role of pedagogue and puncher here.

"I'm anxious to break into the fight game here to show what I can do," declares the socking schoolmarm. "I believe I'm good enough to get plenty of work. Fighting never has interfered with my school teaching and never will. I like 'em both, and don't allow them to conflict in any way."

Southeast Hockey Tournament Opens Today With 3 Games

By Ware Torrey.

FIELD hockey players were due to gather here this morning, for the eight-team Southeast Aassociation tournament.

The first match of the tournament, Philadelphia, second team, vs. Virginia, starts at 1:30 today, at National Cathedral School. Since this will be the first tournament in which a Virginia association team will play the match holds special interest.

The North Jersey vs. Washington match follows at 2:30. The line-up of the Washington team will be the same as previously announced.

The height of finesse of the tournament matches will come this afternoon at 3:30, when the Philadelphia first team, traditionally the strongest association team in the country, meets the Baltimore first team, its closest rival in the Southeast.

Tomorrow at 10:30, Harrisburg plays Virginia; at 11:30, Baltimore second team plays Philadelphia second; the Baltimore first team meets Washington at 2:30, and the last interassociation match will be played at 3:30 by Philadelphia first and North New Jersey. On Sunday, the 1934 Southesat team will play the Southeast reserves at 3 at Madeira School.

It has been decided that the annual Southeast sectional banquet will be held at the Kennedy-Warren, Saturday evening. The new Southeast teams will be announced at that time.

Selection of the Southeast first team is awaited with even greater interest than usual, as is the test of their teamwork and ability in the Sunday match against the reserves. Cause of this new high in interest is the fact that the Northeast team, selected last week-end at the Northeast tournament in Garden City, L. I., is the strongest in many years, and will offer the Southeast a keen challenge at the National tournament, Thanksgiving week-end, at Newtonville, Mass.

Fruit-Jar Patent Figures in Action

Winchester Firm Accused of Infringing on Rights.

Winchester, Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Whether the National Fruit Product Co. of this city is infringing on patent rights of Food and Fruit Industries, Inc., in the treatment of fruit in closed retorts was argued in the Western District Federal court in Harrisonburg before Judge John Paul today.

The Food and Fruit Industries, Inc., Eugene Grab, president, charges that the process used by National Fruit is an infringement on a patent held by the plaintiff. Evidence in the suit was heard for three days in May, after which Judge Paul allowed both sides time to file briefs. He said before he hands down a decision he expects to visit the plant to inspect the apparatus.

Representing the plaintiff are Herbert J. and William J. Jacobi, of Washington, and Harry R. Kern, of this city. Defense attorneys are Clarence B. Des Jardins and Halbert P. Brown, of Washington, and R. Gray Williams, of Winchester.

NRA Orders Hearing On Alleged Violation

Richmond, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—John J. Corson 3d, acting State NRA compliance director, said yesterday that notification had been sent to the National Novelty & Printing Co. of Roanoke that the NRA Compliance Council will hold a hearing in Washington Friday to determine what action will be taken against it for alleged violation of the code for the punch board manufacturing industry.

The firm is charged with violating minimum wage provisions by paying approximately 40 girls at a rate of from $4 to $8 per week instead of the prescribed minimum of $13 for a 40-hour week.

Indiana Camp Is Blue; Walker, Star Back, Hurt

Bloomington, Ind., Nov. 22 (AP). The injury situation in the Indiana football camp was reported aggravated today when trainers indicated Wendel Walker, star passing and plunging back, may see only a few mintes of action Saturday against Purdue. Corbell Davis looked to be the probable successor to the injured Bob Keck as the Indiana punter, with either Roy Eads or Ted Holmquest becoming the blocking back.

Drake, Blues' Star Back, Taken Ill

Gallaudet Hopes of Winning in Shenandoah Game Are Slim.

GALLAUDET'S hopes for winning its home-coming game with Shenandoah tomorrow dropped perceptibly yesterday when Racy Drake, ace quarter back, was suddenly taken ill and ordered to bed. His hopes for playing are extremely slim.

Coach Teddy Hughes shifted Bob Montgomery to the signal-calling post in practice yesterday, and is satisfied that he will give a good account of himself although Drake's greater experience would be welcome against the Virginians.

Shenandoah will be after its fifth win in six games when it invades Kendall Green. Numbered among its victims are Potomac State, Baltimore, William and Mary (Norfolk division), and Shepherd. St. John's defeated the Applejacks two weeks ago, 20-0.

Michigan Grid Squad Given Only Brief Drill

Ann Arbor, Mich., Nov. 22 (AP). The Michigan varsity relaxed today and spent only an hour practicing for the Northwestern game here Saturday.

The Maize and Blue polished up its offense and worked over some of the plays it has tried to use all season. Considerable time was spent watching the freshmen execute the Northwestern double wingback formations. Coach Harry Kipke said he would wind up with a light signal drill Friday and decide his starting line-up.

Wolverines Howl Sunday.

The 100-pound Wolverines will meet the Northeast Tigers Sunday at 1 p. m. at Fairlawn. The Wolverines are unbeaten in two years, having won 48 straight games.

Burl Must Beat Nicco to Earn Zwick Bout

Pair Will Clash Monday in Semifinal Fight on Hunt Club Card.

EDDIE BURL, the Jacksonville featherweight, must punch his way through one last obstacle before reaching the goal of a 20-round bout against Phil Zwick next month. The remaining obstacle, in the person of Dominick Nicco, will be placed in front of him in a six-round semifinal to the Pete DeGrasse-Frankie Covelli main event at the Riding and Hunt Club Monday night.

Nicco won from Burl on a technical knockout in a previous bout at the Auditorium, but the Jacksonville Jarrer was leading on points when an eye cut forced the referee to halt the contest.

Reed Faces Morrow.

Jimmy Reed, of Jacksonville, will meet Joe Morrow, of New York, in a six-round preliminary. Joe Ferson, former New York Golden Gloves star, has been signed to four rounds of fisticuffing against Tiger Joe Phelps, of Quantico, in another preliminary.

Although DeGrasse took a very close decision over Covelli in a previous bout, general opinion seems to favor Covelli in a main bout of ten rounds. Covelli shot his potent right hand only a few times in their first encounter, yet almost beat the Canadian Indian with his dazzling left.

Covelli's handlers have explained that their charge injured his one big gun with the first punch he threw in the first round, and confidently predict that he will stop DeGrasse in the return bout.

Temple Seeking Rose Bowl Game

than a year before agreeing to succeed Heinie Miller at Temple. And when I announced my resignation at Stanford, athletic officials, representatives of the football team and student body came to my home and tried to persuade me to reconsider. I wish to correct the impression that any ill-feeling exists between Stanford and me."

Praises His Team.

"They would give us a hard fight," he continued, "but Stanford would know it had been in a football game. This team is one of the finest I've ever coached. And I've been coaching more than 40 years.

Pop claimed Full Back Dave Smukler, a 215-pounder with the shoulders of a wrestler and the face of Max Schmeling, was the finest sophomore back he ever had seen. "Right now he's as good as Ernie Nevers or Jim Thorpe. If nothing happens to him, next season he should be the greatest back in football history. He has everything."

If Temple does not go to the Rose Bowl, school officials and Pop made it plain that they will be uninterested in a trip to New Orleans for the "sugar bowl" game.

Chicago Is Ready.

Alexandrians Primed for Title Tilt

Need Only to Score Over Fredericksburg for Fine Record.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Alexandria High finished its busiest week of practice today with a signal drill and defensive formations for use against Fredericksburg High School in their titular game tomorrow afternoon in Baggett's Stadium. To date Alexandria has defeated Washington-Lee and Hopewell, and a victory over the Yellow Jackets tomorrow would give them the undisputed championship of northern Virginia.

Alexandria's "pony back field" of Varney, Shu, Ewald and Fones will probably start the contest. In the line will be Beach, center; guards, Robinson and Luckett; tackles, Noble and O'Neil; ends, Pullman and Saunders. Others expected to see action are McCewan, Nugent, Hammersley, Merchant, Apperson, Stewart, Worden, Geidd, Burroughs, Burrell and Rhodes.

Alexandria will have two varsity tackles on the sidelines. Capt. Fritter and Freddy Kirchner. Fritter has been out all week with an injured shoulder, while Kirchner received a knee injury in scrimmage yesterday.

Twelve seniors will be performing for the last time in State competition tomorrow for the locals.

The Alexandria Fraters are busy at work for Sunday's engagement with the Washington Federals in Griffith's Stadium.

The St. Rita A. C. will drill tomorrow and Saturday nights in preparation for its game Sunday with the Pirates. The game will decide the city championship.

The Pirates will practice every night the remainder of the week.

The Virginia A. C. will go to Anacostia Sunday to meet the Staple A. C. The Virginia's have been working out nightly under the tutelage of Mike Goldman and hope to win their first victory Sunday.

Tilden, Vines, Barnes Win London Matches

London, Nov. 22 (AP).—The American professional tennis players—William T. Tilden, Ellsworth Vines and Bruce Barnes—made a clean sweep of three singles matches against European opposition at Wembley Stadium today.

Tilden defeated Martin Plaa, of France, 7—5, 6—3, 6—3; Vines beat Hans Nusslein, of Germany, 4—6, 7—5, 6—3, 8—6, and Barnes beat Maskell, of England, 6—3, 6—0, 8—6.

Miller Wins.

Liverpool, England, Nov. 22 (U.P.). Freddie Miller, claimant to the world featherweight title, tonight knocked out Johnny Cuthbert, British former champion, in the second round of a scheduled 12-round fight.

Virginia Holds Secret Practice

University, Va., Nov. 22 (AP).—Virginia drilled behind closed doors this afternoon in the last scrimmage of the season in which the varsity showed a sustained offense with Capt. Tommy Johnson playing full back. Other backs were Randy Garnett, Griff Dodson and Phil Fryberger.

The line included Don Fitzhugh and Wier Tucker, ends; Edward Andrews and Leonard Trell, tackles; George Siebels and Fred Cramer, guards, and Colin Montgomery, center. Siebels had to be taken to the hospital with a dislocation and may be lost for the Carolina game.

V. P. I. Rejects Post-Season Game Bid

Tampa Trip Voted Down by Players; Too Much Studying to Do.

BLACKSBURG, Va., Nov. 22 (AP). Virginia Tech football players today turned down an invitation for a post-season game with the University of Tampa, to be played in the Florida city on Christmas Day. Capt. George Smith said, "We've got too much studying to do for approaching examinations."

After consulting the players, Director of Athletics Miles wired regrets to Tampa officials. The question had been put up to the team which decided against the offer of five days in Florida as guests of Tampa University and the city.

Today the squad continued its preparation for the Thanksgiving Day game with V. M. I. and coaches Shifted Joe Russell, half back, to end.

Coach Redd said, "We're putting in a whole batch of wicked new plays for that unorthodox defense my friend Bill Rafferty played against us last year."

Iowa Squad Idle, Due to Rain, Snow

Team Off for Columbus to Meet Ohio State.

Iowa City, Iowa, Nov. 22 (AP).—The University of Iowa's 33-man football squad entrained today for Columbus, Ohio, where the Hawkeyes will meet Ohio State University Saturday in the final game of the season.

Coach Ossie Solem canceled a final home practice because of rain and snow flurries, but expected to give his men a light drill in the Buckeye Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

The coach listed a probable starting line-up, which included eight sophomores. Capt. Fisher, Leytze and Crayne are the only veterans. Saturday's game will be the last intercollegiate football affair for nine seniors on the Hawkeye squad.

Little World Series Killed In Dispute

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 22 (AP).—The American Association and International League today reached the parting of ways and scrapped the little world series held annually between champions of the two class AA leagues.

The American Association, unable to reach an agreement with the International League on post-season play-offs, discussed a little world series with the Pacific Coast League, but it was decided such a fall series would not be financially worth while because of geographical reasons.

Played Since 1916.

Since 1916 the little world series has been played except for the war year of 1918. The differences between the two circuits, which caused the abandonment of the little baseball show were these:

The American Association decided to scrap its own postseason series between leaders of its Western and Eastern divisions and award its pennant to the team with the highest percentage over a full 154-game schedule. The A. A. asked the International to do likewise, or at least simplify its pennant race and have the real champion over the regular schedule meet the A. A. champs. But the postseason play-offs, in which the first team played the third and the second-place club played the fourth team in the standings, was too attractive to the Internationals, who voted to retain the same play-offs with guaranteed purses to the participants.

At their meeting today, the I. L. voted to play a 154-game schedule and award the pennant to the leader, which will receive $2,500 plus 5 per cent of the post-season series receipts. The winner of the play-offs, which may be the same team, will receive $5,000; the second team will receive $2,500. The cash prizes will be taken out of the regular season gate receipts at the rate of 1 cent on each of the first 1,000,000 admissions sold.

The A. A. adopted the same salary limit of $6,500 monthly per club and arranged a bonus for players on the first four clubs on the basis of 40-30-20-10. Money for the bonus will be taken from the season's gate receipts at the rate of 2 cents from each admission.

Stocks Move Upward Again; Sales Smaller

Changes Remain Narrow; Trading Volume Cut to 787,300 Shares.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Stocks faced forward today, but the market restricted its maneuvers to the narrow course it has followed for more than a week.

Minor gains outweighed losses at the close of another session of declining trade. The turnover, at 787,300 shares was the smallest for a full session since November 5, on the eve of the election. It compared with 805,120 in the preceding session.

Without important news to stimulate speculative interest, quiet reigned in most sectors of the financial front.

News Searched for Aid.

Traders scanned business news hopefully for an incentive to bid for shares However, industrial reports, while pointing to slow improvement, lacked the vigor to reawaken the sluggish security markets.

The recently depressed utility group found better support. Rails also stiffened a bit, but the bulk of the buying continued to flow toward industrial specialties.

Additional moderate gains in United States Government bonds directed attention to forthcoming Federal financing and prompted predictions in some quarters the Treasury would find a more favorable market for its flotations than it did in September.

American Telephone expanded its recovery, closing ¾ of a point higher around 107. Directors yesterday declared the regular $2.25 quarterly dividend. Consolidated Gas also added a fraction to its previously rally.

Kodak at New Peak.

A further gain of 3 points in Eastman Kodak lifted it to a new 1934 peak within a fraction of 115. Liggett & Myers B pushed up fractionally to a new top.

Other outstanding gainers were Ingersoll Rand, American Safety Razor, American Can preferred, Santa Fe preferred, Devoe & Raynolds "A," McCrory preferred and Underwood-Elliott-Fisher, all up 1 to 3 points.

U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward and other active issues held to a small orbit.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks rose three-tenths of a point to 72.6.

Accumulation of idle capital was reflected in a rise in bank reserves to a record. The Federal Reserve weekly statement showed a further gain of $89,000,000 in member bank reserves to $4,196,000,000. Monetary gold stocks jumped $46,000,000, also to a peak at $8,076,000,000, partly accounting for the expansion in reserves. Money in circulation declined $25,000,000.

Brokers' loans by member New York City banks for their own account increased $4,000,000 to $572,000,000, reversing their recent trend. Total security loans by the reporting New York City banks were off $1,000,000 compared with the previous week.

Curb's Prices Close Firmer; Metals Decline

Industrials and Utilities Are Higher; Trading, 171,000 Shares.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Metal shares provided the discordant note in an otherwise rather firm curb market today. Industrials and utilities generally finished fractions to around a point higher. Trading was maintained at the recent moderately active pace.

The list was narrowly irregular during the forenoon, but prices advanced in the afternoon, particularly in specialties. Volume increased in the final trading.

Among the nonferrous issues, declines of around 1 to 2 points were suffered by Lake Shore, Newmont and New Jersey Zinc. In the power division, American Gas & Electric common finished about unchanged, but the preferred got up 3 points. Consolidated Gas & Electric of Baltimore firmed nearly 2. Electric Bond & Share ruled steady.

Advances of major fractions to a point or more were shown by Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker, Gulf and Humble Oils, Glen Alden Coal, National Sugar Refining, Sherwin Williams, Swift Internacional, United Shoe Machinery, Great Atlantic & Pacific and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Ruberoid got up some 4 points.

Transfers, which approximated 171,000 shares, were about the same as yesterday.

Lawyers and Others Find Experiences With New Bankruptcy Provisions Unsatisfactory to Date; Changes in Act May Be Urged.

New York, Nov. 22.—Actual experience with the new provisions of the bankruptcy act, enacted this year and last to facilitate reorganiztions of industrial, public utility and railroad corporations, has not been satisfactory to date. Lawyers and others interested in corporate reorganization are giving serious thought to the need for changes in the law, while a revision of the new sections applicable to railroads is actually being drawn up under the direction of the coordinator of transportation.

Formerly, larger corporations were generally reorganized under a course of procedure worked out over a long period of years by the courts of equity. Dissenting minorities among security holders always constituted a serious problem, and they could be eliminated only through foreclosure sale of the corporate property. Reorganization through equity receivership tended to take much time, to involve heavy expense and considerable uncertainty.

Last year, section 77 of the bankruptcy act was enacted to facilitate reorganization of railroads, and early this year Congress enacted section 77B to facilitate reorganization of other corporations. No railroad has yet been reorganized under section 77, however. While a number of reorganizations under section 77B are now in progress, the need for clarifying amendments are said to be becoming more apparent daily by interested lawyers.

Even the basic question of the constitutionality of this new bankruptcy legislation is the subject of considerable difference of opinion among lawyers. These amendments provide that a plan of reorganization of a corporation's capitalization becomes effective when two-thirds of each class of creditors approve, and that dissenting minorities are thereupon bound to agree, after court approval. Some argue this constitutes a taking of property without due process of law, and is unconstitutional. Thus, if a corporate bondholder were compelled to take stock for his bond, or if a holder of a mortgage obligation were forced to take an unsecured bond in exchange, it is contended there is a deprivation of property rights.

Lawyers Differ on Scope of Bankruptcy Powers.

These lawyers hold that the jurisdiction over bankruptcies given Congress in the Constitution will not extend to compulsory deprivation of property rights of dissenting minorities in reorganizations. In fact, some legal authorities feel that the new bankruptcy legislation is no more constitutional than the Frazier-Lemke act imposing a virtual moratorium on farm mortgages, which was also passed as an application of the authority of Congress over bankruptcies, and which lower courts have already held to be unconstitutional.

On the other hand, a number of other lawyers who have studied the matter feel that the constitutionality of the new legislation will be upheld as a valid exercise of the Federal power over bankruptcies.

The chief practical problem created by the law so far is the need for the determination of when a corporation is "insolvent." Both section 77, applicable to railroads, and section 77b, applicable to other corporations, provide that stockholders as well as bondholders must give two-thirds approval to a plan of reorgnization, unless the court holds that the corporation is insolvent. Hence, before a plan of reorganization can even be drawn up, it is important that those concerned know whether or not the enterprise is likely to be held insolvent.

If the corporation will be held insolvent, then there is no need to assure in advance that stockholders will grant approval. If it will be held solvent, then it is necessary to treat the shareholders far more leniently, as otherwise, if they fail to give a two-thirds vote of approval, a foreclosure sale will have to be held or some other procedure adopted, with the approval of the court, to permit them "to realize the value of their equity."

A prime purpose of the new legislation was to avoid recourse to foreclosure sales and similar expensive and cumbersome legal processes to effect corporate reorganizations. However, through insertion of the "insolvency" test, a new complication is introduced. If a corporation is held solvent, stockholders can hold up reorganization. Hence, the tendency will be to give them even more favorable treatment than formerly, despite the common charge that bondholders often have to sacrifice too much, and gain too little, by reorganization, as compared with shareholders. On the other hand, a determination of insolvency is a complex and difficult task for a court.

Frisco Hearings Cited as Example of Some Difficulties.

When hearings were held before the Federal Court recently to determine whether the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway is insolvent, the difficulties involved were clearly brought out. This railway is now operated by trustees under Section 77 of the bankruptcy act. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is one of its chief creditors. The court was actually requested to refrain from ruling upon the question of whether or not the road is insolvent, on the plea that new legislation was being drafted which might do away with the need for such determination.

New York law firms specializing in corporate reorganization work are busily studying precedents to see what the courts ruled in the past when the question of insolvency was raised in old bankruptcy cases. The precedents are meager on the subject, and concern primarily small enterprises.

W. W. SPAID,

Spaid Heads Associated Exchange Body

(Associated Press.)

Claiming a 100 per cent membership for the first time, the Associated Stock Exchanges yesterday announced a reorganization, with W. W. Spaid, partner in W. B. Hibbs & Co., of Washington, D. C., as its head.

The new agency supersedes one of the same name which, however, did not include in its membership the major exchanges.

Headquarters of the association have been moved to Washington from Detroit. Clark E. Wickey, of Detroit, who has been secretary since the association was organized 15 years ago, has resigned. A new post of executive vice president-secretary-treasurer was created which will be filled by E. E. Thompson, of Washington.

"Headquarters have been moved to Washington," Spaid said, "in order that information pertaining to the Nation's exchanges might be available if and when requested in connection with matters before the Securities and Exchange Commission."

Under the reorganization each member will be allowed one vote. This, Spaid explained, would give the most obscure member equal right with, for instance, the "big board" in New York and the Chicago exchange.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 83.9 Level

Some Rails and Utilities Under Pressure; Sales, $11,172,000.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—The bond market steadied today, but moderate gains and losses were about evenly divided at the close of trading.

Some of the secondary rails and utilities were still under a little pressure, but prime investment issues were fairly firm. Mild improvement was shown by United States Government securities and foreign obligations were mixed.

New of interest to the loans list was scarce and dealings, generally, were of a cautious character.

Transfer Volume Larger.

Transfers totaled $11,172,000, par value, against $10,858,000 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds was unchanged at 83.9.

There was a turnover in the Federal list of some $1,990,000, compared with $2,030,000 in the previous session. Home Owners Loan 4s, at 100.20, were up 6-32ds of a point, indicating to some dealers the belief is growing that the Treasury will not call this loan for redemption on January 1 next.

Other gains in the Government department ranged from 1-32nd to 4-32nds of a point.

Advances of Fractions.

Advances of fractions to around a point or so in the corporate section were held by some issues of Alleghany Corporation, American Water Works, Armour & Co., Certain-teed, Chesapeake & Ohio, Burlington, Consolidated Gas, Denver & Rio Grande, New Orleans Public Service, N. Y. Central, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Otis Steel, Puerto Rico-American Tobacco, Southern Railway, Union Pacific, Walworth, and Wheeling Steel. Bonds of Missouri-Pacific were up 1 to more than 2 points on reorganization prospects.

Losers of around 1 to 2 points included loans of Philadelphia Co., Interboro Rapid Transit, Hudson & Manhattan, General Petroleum, Columbia Gas, Chicago & Northwestern, St. Paul, Baltimore & Ohio and American Smelting.

Denmark, 4½s edged up, ¼ of a point to 90¼ and Panama 5s advanced 1¼ to 46¼, both new year's highs. German 5½s were down 1½ to 23¼.

U. S. Treasury Receipts.

The position of the Treasury on November 20 was:

Receipts, $5,337,130.66; expenditures, $20,892,230.10; balance, $641,126,409.45; customs receipts for the month, $18,676,715.66.

The system's holdings of bills discontinued increased $2,000,000 and of industrial advances $1,000,000, while holdings of bills bought in open market, and United States Government securities remained practically unchanged.

Changes in the amount of Reserve Bank credit outstanding and in related items during the week and the year ended November 21, 1934, were as follows:

Cotton Market

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—While an early advance was not fully maintained, cotton showed a generally steady tone today, with further liquidation of December absorbed by the trade against sales of later deliveries. March contracts, after selling up to 12.41 during the early trading, reacted to 12.38, but recovered the loss, closing at 12.41, with the general market steady at a net advance of 1 to 6 points.

There was a little Southern selling and scattering liquidation in early dealings, which was readily absorbed by trade buying, covering and buying by houses with foreign connections.

A considerable proportion of the day's business was again trributed to the evening-up of transference of December commitments to later deliveries.

Exports today, 40,864 bales, making 1,791,222 bales so far this season. Port receipts, 68,685 bales. United States port stocks, 3,189,462 bales.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was irregular today and after advancing from 3 to 10 points with December and March selling at new high levels for the season on renewed covering and commission-house buying, the market reacted under realizing influenced by the setback in lard and grains. Final prices were 3 points higher to 3 net lower. Sales, 89 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; December closed, 9.45; January, 9.44; March, 9.51; May, 9.63.

Commodity Prices Rise.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—The weekly tabulation of commodity prices compiled by Dun & Bradstreet again showed an excess of advances over declines.

Led by the continued rise in grains and some textiles and hides, advances numbered 30 in the current week against 36 in the preceding week, with declines at 25 compared with 13 the week before.

Federal Loans Find Favor in Reserve Banks

Lack of Demand for Short Credits Blamed in Heavy Tieup.

By G. A. Phillips.

New York, Nov. 22 (AP).—Concentration of about 33 1-3 per cent of the total loans and investments of member banks of the Federal Reserve System in obligations of the United States Government, is indicated in the most recent bank statements.

A number of important factors have combined to bring about this extraordinarily large tieup of bank funds in Government securities.

Banking authorities say the most important are the lack of demand for short-term credit, the low yields now available on giltedge investment bonds, and the scarcity of new bond issues to absorb the huge idle funds which banks long have had on hand and seem unable to employ profitably with the degree of safety considered necessary to insure liquidity.

Banks Holdings Vary.

The percentage of Government holdings by banks varies throughout the country, with New York City banks in the lead with 45 per cent of their funds concentrated in Government obligations, contrasted with 13 per cent in the fall of 1930.

Country banks now have about 25 per cent of their funds so invested compared with 9.2 per cent, while the investment of all member banks in Government securities has reached the huge sum of $9,200,000,000, or approximately 33 1-3 per cent of their total leans and investments, compared with holdings of $2,100,000,000, or about 12.6 per cent in the fall of 1930.

The 12 Federal Reserve Banks alone held $2,430,174,000 in Government obligations on November 14, which represented about 30 per cent of their total assets. While this figure is slightly less than the holdings of these banks a year ago, in September, 1930, their investment in Governments was around $600,000,000, or less than 15 per cent of the total assets.

Total Holdings Increase.

The combined holdings of Federal Reserve and member banks now stands at roughly $11,600,000,000, or about 43 per cent of the total debt of the Federal Government, which has increased from about $20,585,000,000 as of February 28, 1933, to $26,546,104,000 on November 15, 1934.

A recent survey shows that during the 20½ months from February 28, 1933, to November 15, 1934, the Treasury Department issued a total of $11,703,236,000 of new securities of all types, both long and short term, on which the average interest rate was 2.51 per cent. Of the proceeds, $5,741,422,000 was used in refunding operations and paying off securities maturing in that period, the average interest rate on which was 3.33 per cent, thus effecting a reduction of more than ¾ of 1 per cent on nearly one-half of the new securities.

Abingdon Tobacco Mart Opens Dec. 4

Abingdon, Va., Nov. 22 (Spl.).—Abingdon's burley tobacco market, scheduled to open Tuesday, December 4, will be the mecca this week and early next of hundreds of growers from throughout southwest Virginia, east Tennessee and western North Carolina, anxious to have their weed on hand for the first sales of the season.

Hundreds of thousands of pounds of tobacco were sold on the Abingdon warehouse floors last season, averaging better than 11 cents, the market taking its place as one of the outstanding of the entire South. Because of the government's crop reduction program, this year's yield will be considerably less than that of last year, but the price outlook is more than double because of the exceptionally fine quality of the leaf, and the growers as a whole should be well repaid for their efforts.

Price per pound for the burley, based on the amount paid for fluecured and fire-cured tobaccos in the Carolinas and eastern Virginia, should approximate not less than 20 cents, despite the fact there has been considerable overproduction in the burley field as compared to the flue-cured area.

Walt Mason Himself

Tonsorial Artist.

The old-time barber used to speak until his voice became a squeak. You took position in his chair, and he began to cut your hair or trim your lilac whiskerettes, and he would talk of prize ring pets, of candidates and kindred bores, and of the latest baseball scores, of girls he knew when he was young, while yet his withers were unwrung, of heads of cabbage he had raised, which were by experts highly praised. He talked of Dexter and Maud S. and Tamerlane and sway-backed Bess and other racers which brought back all sorts of prizes from the track. And he would talk an hour or so of hair restorers which would grow bright golden ringlets on a head where all the follicles were dead. Although entirely bald himself he had strange bottles on his shelf whose contents, scented, rich and rare, would grow all kinds of dark blue hair. He also had, as something new, a fine Arabian shampoo, a wholesome, home-made dandruff cure, and it was absolutely pure. He talked about the Prince of Wales, and John B. Gough and three-inch nails, and kings and queens and bales of hay and ponies black and white and bay. He talked of dogs of pedigree and fighting roosters good to see, of governments in other lands, of oyster stews and German bands, of bulls and bears and Cotswold sheep, and so on till you went to sleep. Times changed, he had to gallivant; he is as dead as Caesar's aunt.

Kiwanis Clubs To Emphasize Boys' Program

Youth activities will feature work of the 46 Kiwanis clubs in the Capital district, comprising Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District of Columbia during the coming year, Edwin F. Hill, of Washington, international trustee, told new officers of clubs of the first division assembled at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday. Clubs represented, in addition to Washington, were Alexandria, Arlington County, Fredericksburg, Manassas and Winchester, Va., and Cumberland, Frederick, Hagerstown and Prince Georges County, Md.

The training school was conducted by Charles W. Pimper, lieutenant governor-elect and former chairman of the underprivileged child committee of the Washington Kiwanis Club. The visiting officers-elect were guests of the Washington club at its luncheon meeting. Irving Diener, Alexandria, present lieutenant governor, also addressed the meeting.

Five-Point Program.

Kiwanis club officers were urged to follow the five-point program formulated and approved by Kiwanis international in supplying boys and girls with technical leadership in seasonal sports, including hockey, lacrosse, boxing, skating, tennis, baseball and basketball.

Kiwanis, Hill said, recommends that each club train normal boys and girls coming under its jurisdiction in the economic demands of the times by encouraging them in the development of such handicraft as working in wood, leather and metal, and by providing exhibits at 4-H club fairs and similar competitive meetings.

Citizenship Stressed.

It was urged that Kiwanis clubs stress citizenship by providing speakers for schools within the club's area. Also, the clubs were asked to support vocational guidance, the suggestion being made that the members under the auspices of the vocational guidance committee speak before senior and junior high schools, Young men's Christian Associations, Young Women's Christian Associations, Knights of Columbus schools and CCC camps in the interest of giving the youth of the land an opportunity to select a vocation best fitted to their needs.

Underprivileged child work will be continued with clubs emphasizing physical activities, including personal hygiene, health centers and hospitalization and by continuing character building agencies and citizenship training and interest in juvenile courts, the latter to bring about more frequent intimate contact with juvenile welfare workers, probation workers and case workers.

Strange as it seems, Col. Swan, a man who risked his own life and fortune to help a struggling colony gain its freedom, never raised his hand to gain his own freedom when he was put in prison in Paris for debt. He even declined to let anyone help him to get his own release.

Swan, an officer in the Revolutionary Army, and a friend of Washington and Lafayette, was kept in a Paris prison for 20 years under a "temporary" confinement because his conscience would not permit him to pay interest on a debt, nor would he permit friends to pay it for him. Further than that he refused even to consider a plot to escape.

As time went on Swan came to prefer prison life to liberty. Though he would not pay for his own release he is known to have given money to other unfortunates in jail to pay off their obligations. When he was given the privilege of getting fresh air by walking on the prison roof he told his fellow inmates that the "breath of liberty" would kill him.

In saying that Col. Swan spoke the truth more nearly than he suspected, for a few months later there was revolt in the streets of Paris and the prison doors were thrown open.

Otto Plans to Return To Vienna in Spring

Brussels, Nov. 22 (AP).—Archduke Otto, pretender to the Austrian throne, plans to return to Vienna in the early spring, according to information received today from Steenockerzeel Castle, where he has been living in exile.

The decision, it was said, was reached after celebration of his twenty-second birthday two days ago. Hundreds of congratulatory messages were sent him, containing many expressions of hope for a legitimist restoration.

Inquiry Closed In Mine Crash

Frostburg, Md., Nov. 22 (AP).—Dr. J. J. Rutledge, chief mining engineer of the Maryland bureau of mines, has announced he would defer decision of responsibility in the Bowery Furnace mine accident until testimony taken from mine employes has been "studied thoroughly from every angle."

Dr. Rutledge said he had concluded his hearing into the cause of the fall of rock which killed three mine foremen in the McNitt Coal Co.'s mine November 16, but would give no opinion on the testimony yet. The hearing was held to determine if the mine were timbered according to State specifications.

District mine inspectors, who have been assisting Rutledge in his examination, said their investigation of the mine itself will not be completed until debris is removed sufficiently to permit inspection of the timber and steel which supported the mine roof.

Frank T. Powers, local district mine inspector, said the investigation was "somewhat hampered" by the fact all three of the victims were foremen whose duty it was to check the timbering. Their information, Powers said, would have been more valuable than that given by any other employe.

Hearing Ends On Power Rate

Early Decision Promised in Potomac Edison Firm Valuation.

Baltimore, Nov. 22 (AP).—Testimony in the Potomac Edison Power Co. rate case hearing before the Public Service Commission was concluded today, with the promise of Commission Chairman Harold E. West that the case would receive "immediate attention."

Chairman West asked opposing counsel to file briefs of their summing-up statements with the commission before December 7, to aid the utilities body to reach an early decision.

Testimony as to income and operating revenues and expenses was offered in the closing session of the hearing by Walter S. Finlay, chairman of the Potomac Edison board of directors, and Gilbert W. Chapman, assistant treasurer of the American Water Works & Power Co., of New York, owner of the West Penn Power Co., which, in turn, is the parent company of the Potomac Edison.

Chapman pointed out that work done by the PWA in erection of power plants may make future financing of power companies difficult.
